SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

His Excellency the Governor-General of India, we learn from the Bombay Mail of the 7th June, arrived in Calcutta on the 21st May, and on the following day was joined by the Commander-in-Chief—Lady Canning remaining in the Hills until the end of July. Lord Clyde was to leave for England by the after- packet of the 4th of that month, and in anticipation of his departure had issued a Farewell Order, complimenting the men and officers of both the European and the native army on their valour, endurance, and discipline. His lordship was, seemingly, unaware that his confidential letters to H.R.H. the General Commanding-in-Chief would be published to the world, in which he expressed such an unfavourable opinion of the discipline of the Company's forces, and of the military knowledge and bearing of the Company's officers. It is sometimes awkward to have two sets of weights and two kinds of measures—especially when the duplicity is discovered.

On the 26th May the Report of the Select Committee on the Income-tax Bill was brought up by Mr. Wilson, and presented to the Legislative Council. Though some modifications have been introduced into the machinery for collecting the tax, the original provisions of the Bill have been maintained with very slight alterations. The following heads indicate the purport of this final Report:—

The limit (of incomes taxable) of Rs. 200 is to be preserved.

No amendment was proposed in Committee with reference to three per cent. for Imperial purposes, and one per cent. for local improvements. Four per cent. will therefore be the amount chargeable on incomes.

Zemindars are not to be charged on half their jumma, as was originally proposed, but on one-third, an abatement in their favour considered necessary in consequence of the cost of management of zemindaries.

Money invested in foreign funds, and in all such investments, provided it is not imported into India, is to be exempt from income-tax. So also with property held out of India.

Indian pensions are to be exempt, but only when payable by the Secretary of State, that is, in England.

Indian funds are to bear the tax. People invest in them for their own benefit. The amount of such property held in England has increased since Feb. 18 last, from £5,000,000 to £6,500,000. All such paper is now enfaced, "liable to any income-tax, &c."

Concession has been made as regards commercial profits. An Indian mercantile house with branches in Europe, or elsewhere, is to pay income only on the profits of its Indian export and import trade and other Indian dealings. Thus, if the branch house carries on trade between England and Canada, or with any other country besides India, profits of said trade are not to be taxable.

All military men drawing emoluments superior to those of a lieutenant in the royal service are to pay the tax.

It is not unlikely, however, that the proposed excise duty on tobacco will not be imposed, but that vendors will be required to take out a licence to sell.

The Indigo Commission was continuing its investigation into the causes of dispute between the Planters and the Ryots, but thus far the evidence adduced before them appears to have been meagre and unsatisfactory. One point, however, has been gained, in showing the groundlessness of the charges brought against the Planters. Neither civilians nor missionaries—not even the natives themselves—are prepared to substantiate on oath the defamatory reports they were previously so ready to accept and circulate. The tales of cruelty and oppression now resolve themselves into old wives' fables, and if any one has reason to complain it is the Planter, who has been not only defamed, but positively ill-treated, by the stuck-up officials, whose duty it was to administer even-handed justice, and whose natural bias should have been to protect rather than to discountenance their own fellow-countrymen in a foreign land.

The Wuzere expedition has been brought to a successful and not inglorious termination by Brigadier-general Chamberlain and the troops under his command. From other parts of India there is little to tell, except that some trifling disturbances have broken out in the petty Rajpoot State of Banswarra, on the borders of Guzerat. There has also been a slight movement among the Bheels, for the suppression of which four guns and a detachment of infantry had been despatched from Ahmednuggur. It is likewise stated that the Karen Levies have been seized with the mutiny-mania, and have gone off, with their arms and ammunition, on a plundering expedition. As they number no more than 120 men, and as five different bodies of military police, under European officers, are in pursuit of them, their lawless career may be expected to close early and ignominiously.

In consequence of the numerous inquiries addressed to us on the subject of Sir James Outram's admirable Minute on the proposed abolition of the local European army, we have given it in extenso in our present number. It will be perused with great interest by those who do not enjoy ready access to Parliamentary Blue Books.

If there be nothing new under the sun, "still from change to change we run." The depot for recruits for the Indian service, which some short time since was removed to Haileybury, has been re-transferred to Warley. Is Haileybury College to be converted into the new Westminster School?

THE WUZEREER EXPEDITION.

The following telegrams are from the Force in the Wuzereer country:—1st—From Major Taylor, dated Mukeem, May 11, 10 A.M.

"General Chamberlain marched from Kancegorum to Dootunea on the 9th. The rear guard was said to be engaged. The force remained unmolested at Dootunea during the 8th, and marched yesterday, the 10th, to this. The baggage and rear guard extricated themselves from the narrow Dutunea Pass, with a loss of only four wounded. The Wuzereers had some men killed. Efforts have been made to induce the Mahsoods to save Mukeem, their largest town, a very extensive place, without effect. No course remains but to attack and destroy it. Some opposition is to be expected. If all goes well, the force will march to-morrow for Bunnoo, and reach the plains in four days."

2nd—From Major Taylor, dated Kuzmuk, May 12, 4 P.M.

"Mukeem was effectually destroyed yesterday. The houses burnt and the towers blown up. The force was out the whole day. The opposition was feeble, and we had only two men wounded. The loss to the Mahsoods in the destruction of Mukeem is very heavy. They had every opportunity of reducing it. We hear that people now reproach the Mullicks for not having made peace; and contrast their case with that of the Ahmedzais whose property has been—"

(Sudden interruption between Lahore and Moolian, while the above message was being received. Remainder will be sent on restoration of communication.)

From Dera Ismael Khan, from Lieut. Waterfield, to Murree, to Sec. to Govt.

May 19, 1860, 7. 30 A.M.—The following has just arrived from Major Taylor, dated Camp Surobah, May 15, 1860, 6 A.M.:—"The force halted on the 13th at Kuzmuk, on the 14th it marched to Kuzmuk; descended the Kuzmuk Pass, down which a practicable road for guns and camels had been made by the enemy. To-day we have marched to Kuroch; parties of Mahsood Wuzereers usually among the rear-guard, and have several times lost men in doing so. To-morrow we march to Duogunda, and the next day out to the plain. The Toree Khail have behaved well. The Mullicks are encamped, and they are furnishing supplies. Their crops and property are protected."

From Camp Nooroor, May 19, 1860, 3 P.M., via Dera Ghazee Khan, May 20, 9 P.M. From Major Taylor, to Murree, to Sec. to Govt.

"My last message was dated 15th from Susba. On the 16th the force marched to Donurerkha. On the 17th we halted on account of heavy rain. The Toree Khail most willing and friendly in the matter of forage, supplies, &c. On the 18th the force marched to Speerwan, at the mouth of the Kingsoh Pass. To-day we have marched to the Nooroor Thanna in Bunnoo. Under Providence, enormous lines of camels, carrying sixteen days' provisions, have been brought through the heart of the country of this strong and hostile tribe with the loss of only those that fell from exhaustion—these were immediately shot."

THE COAL LINES.

The surveys of the lines of railway called the "Singarrun branch," and the "Barrakur extension" of the East Indian Railway, have been completed. The first will run from the Undal station, near Raneegunge, to Chokeedangah, in the valley of the Singarrun, a nullah falling into the Damoodah at no great distance from the present terminus of the railway. It will be eight miles in length, and will traverse a district rich in minerals. On the Singarrun are pits recently opened at Baboosole; there are also the long-established mines and quarries of Messrs. Erskine and Co., and extensive collieries belonging to the East India Coal Company, as well as the mines at Chokeedangah, and several other places. The other line is an extension of the present one to Raneegunge. Crossing the Nooniah nullah near the Grand Trunk-road, it will strike the Barrakur a little to the north; thus instead of terminating as at present on the land of the Bengal Coal Company, the line will pass by the mines of Gobind Persaud Pundit, and other proprietors, so that other collieries will have facilities of access to the railway as great as those now enjoyed by their powerful rival. The lines will cost about £4,000 a mile, and unless unforeseen causes of delay arise they will be finished in the course of 1861.

It is impossible to do more than conjecture what will be the effect of opening lines of railway into the coal fields of the Damoodah, for there are no means of knowing to what extent increased facilities of transport may affect the collieries and develop the trade. But even if the demand and supply were to remain as they are at present, these railways would be profitable. Mr. Oldham's report on the Raneegunge coal field, made last year, informs us that from all the pits and workings on the Singarrun alone there was in 1859 a total out-turn of at least 20 lakhs of maunds per annum, or 240 tons a day, an amount quite sufficient to load one train daily. While, at the same time, if we consider that the amount of coal now raised in the Damoodah field is 3½ times what it was nine years ago, and that the railways and other works lately commenced must cause a far greater demand for coal than there has ever been hitherto, it is only reasonable to suppose that the collieries will be more extensively worked.

The total produce of the Raneegunge coal field is roughly estimated at about 77 lakhs of maunds, and if we take the total quantity of coal carried by the East India Railway in the year 1859, which was maunds 59,16,702, it appears that the means of carriage by railway may be largely extended without any fear that the increased facilities will not be required. No other mode of transport from the pit's mouth to Calcutta and distant places can compete with the railway. In fact, the only other is afforded by the Damoodah, which presents the difficulties of Indian river navigation in their worst form. When the floods sweep down its sandy bed, boats laden with coal make their way to the Hooghly, but very often, after having remained on the banks of the river for months, ready to be shipped at the right opportunity, the coal is lost. At any price this mode of carrying it must be dear. The construction of these lines will no doubt be a profitable investment for the railway company, and a great advantage to the shareholders. Before the opening of the railway to Rajmahal it would perhaps be unreasonable to speculate on the probability of the extension of the Barrakur line as far as Patna. Such a line of railway passing through the Govindpore valley, and traversing the fertile plains of Behar, would form a far more direct route to the north-west provinces than the Ganges valley line, without rendering it necessary for another bridge over the Soane to be made. That this line will be made at some future day, when permanent way will be easier of transport, can hardly be doubted. But, however gratifying it may be to the imagination to conceive so great and useful a work, and although it would certainly be profitable, much has to be done before it can be undertaken. At present we must be content to look forward to the completion of the line to Rajmahal in September. —Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LADY CANNING and her party left Simla station on the 21st May for Chini. Her ladyship will travel through the hills to Musoorie, and then about July next proceed by dak to Calcutta to rejoin her liege lord.

ENSIGN G. P. COBBE, H.M.'s 27th foot, has been cashiered.

SIR WILLIAM SHAUGHNESSY is about to return to England on eighteen months' leave, according to the new regulations.

ABOLITION OF THE CAMEL CORPS.—Under instructions from His Excellency the Governor-general, the Commander-in-chief in India has been pleased to direct that Ross' camel corps shall be broken up from the 1st June. The two companies respectively of the 2nd and 3rd battalions of the Rifle Brigade, attached to the corps, will rejoin their regiments, under arrangements which will be communicated by the Quarter-master-general of the army. The native soldiers are to be allowed the option of returning to their former regiments, or volunteering for any corps of Punjab Infantry under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief. Descriptive rolls of the men, with last pay and clothing certificates, are to be sent to the corps which the men may elect; and a roll of all ranks, in which the names of volunteers for each corps are to be separately shown, is to be forwarded to the Adjutant-General's office at Simla, to admit of their transfer being announced in General Order without delay. The drivers of all ranks are to be paid up and discharged, together with the camels, from the date on which the corps is to be broken up.

COLONEL M. G. SPARKES, of H.M.'s 10th Regiment of Foot, applied to the Governor-general to know if he could obtain a zemindaree, or lands to settle on, in the event of his retiring from the service. The Governor-general replied that he can obtain a grant of waste lands in any part of India where such lands are at the disposal of Government, on the prescribed terms for such grants, which can be ascertained by applying to the local Government, but the Governor-general cannot give him a zemindaree. Without undervaluing his long services, the Governor-general was unable to make any exception from the rules which regulate the grants of waste lands in favour of Colonel Sparkes, according to which no distinction is drawn between officers of the army and other applicants.

THE EX-KING OF DELHI, who was transported for life, has not been put in gaol, but has been located with his family in a separate house under proper guards at Rangoon, and not at Tonghoo, as was previously ordered.

THE RAJPOOT CHIEFTAINS.—The Governor-general, in the course of his tour in the north-west, gave khilluts to each of the chiefs of Rajpootana of the value of Rs. 20,000, besides gifts to their subordinates; he has also ordered the number of guns in saluting them to be increased two each. To those hitherto receiving fifteen guns, seventeen guns; and from seventeen to nineteen guns.

REGIMENTAL EQUIPMENTS.—H.E. the Governor-general of India has announced, for the information and guidance of officers commanding native regiments, that it is the anxious desire of Her Majesty's Government, and of the Government of India, that the local market shall be resorted to for the supply of military equipments for the army; that regimental equipments obtained from England, without the previous sanction of Government, will be liable to duty, the amount of which will not be chargeable to the regiment, but debited to the officer who procures the articles; and that, unless it be certified that the articles required cannot be procured in India, the sanction of Government to procure them from England will be withheld.

MR. G. W. KELLNER has been appointed commissioner for inquiring into military accounts at the Bengal presidency, on a salary of Rs. 1,000 a month. We believe there are to be two commissioners, and that Mr. Hollingbery is to be the other. These two gentlemen belong to the Uncovenanted Service, and we are glad to find that their merits are now being recognised and rewarded.

AFGHANISTAN.—A sowar of one of our irregular cavalry regiments just returned from leave to Cabul brings word that the Bokhara people and Turkistanes have given the Affghans a complete defeat, and killed two of the Dost's sons, Mahomud Afzul Khan, and another whose name he does not know. The Dost on hearing the intelligence put on mourning, and has gone up with a force to revenge their death.

BOMBAY.

LORD ELPHINSTONE.

On the 11th May Sir George Clerk landed at Bombay, to resume the position of Governor, which he filled for so short a time twelve years ago. Since the date of his first administration, the Presidency has been ruled by two of those minor peers whom up to 1857 jobbing ministries were always glad to provide for at the expense of India. Lord Falkland had powers which fitted him to shine much more as Lord of the Bedchamber or Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, than as the Governor of Nova Scotia or Bombay. His only merit was that he created for his successor a necessity for administrative ability, and a field for statesmanlike energy, almost unequalled. A peer was again appointed, and when on Christmas-day, 1853, Lord Elphinstone landed at Bombay, his previous career in Madras and his position as Lord in Waiting to her Majesty were not calculated to excite the hopes of those who looked upon judgment, consciousness, and energy as more necessary for an Indian governor than the accident of nobility or the misfortune of poverty. When Lord Elphinstone made the usual promises to the Court of Directors at the usual dinner, the conviction was becoming strong with all who took a wise interest in the welfare of our Indian empire, that the time was past for sacrificing its millions to titled mediocrity; that the time had come when the office of governor of an Indian province could worthily be filled only by an Indian statesman. That conviction had triumphed for a moment in the determined resolution which gave to Madras and Bombay the two greatest men who have directed their affairs, Mountstuart Elphinstone and Thomas Munro. It again prevailed when Lord Ellenborough asked the former to become Governor-general, and when Sir John Lawrence had in his pocket the provisional appointment to the same high office. And, so far as the minor presidencies are concerned, it may now be accepted as a settled principle of Indian policy that they are to be ruled by men not because they are impoverished peers, but because they have been successful Indian administrators. The events of 1857 have led to this concession, and it is curious to observe how they have at the same time falsified the expectations of those who demanded it. The silken peer proved to be the energetic statesman who quelled revolt; the Bengal civilian who now rules Madras has justified the most opprobrious term which can be applied to a governor of Asiatics by his superiors,—that he has zeal without discretion, and in a mode as dishonest as it is cowardly, has invited his subjects to rebel.

In no case is the truth of the remark that the Indian rebellion made and unmade reputations so evident as in that of Lord Elphinstone. The programme of policy which he sketched out for the directors at their feast was not an ambitious one. In 1853 the cry of all Anglo-Indians was for the development of the country's resources, and the spread of education and enlightenment among the natives. Lord Elphinstone pledged himself to the promotion of these objects, and as the natural result of the latter, to open up situations of trust to qualified natives. Personally, he has not accomplished any one of them. The same suave courtesy which made him the ornament of the lower circles of the Court, and which attracted around him the chief members of the "society" of Bombay, unfitted him for the task of detecting abuses, and for the trouble of reforming them. He simply enjoyed the dignity and the salary of governor. He liked hospitality; he supposed his health required frequent and expensive journeys from the capital to the hills and from the hills to the capital. He was a courtly peer, and why should he not make up for the joys he had surrendered by the only pleasures he could purchase in exile at the public expense, while he saved his salary? As to the "development of the resources" of Bombay, he meant by that, that he would allow them to develop themselves. And so able secretaries wrote orders which he signed with the elegance of an English noble. He allowed he did not foster railways; he allowed he did not promote the public works of the State; and because they were not directed by private self-interest nor a conscientious regard for the public weal, they have proved miserable failures, from the cotton experiments in Goozerat to the water works of Vehar. As to education, he visited schools and made graceful speeches at the examinations of Parsee girls; for the rest, Bombay has not a public school which can prepare a lad of sixteen for an examination which would be easy to an English boy of ten. As to the promotion of natives to situations of trust, ask the native press of his presidency. It was impossible when there were no natives qualified by their honesty or ability. The regard for religious neutrality for which the Europeans of Bombay extol him, consisted in his rewarding the intolerance of his director of public instruction one day, and signing an admirable minute on the evils of caste the next. Lord Elphinstone would do anything, would sanction any proposal, provided he were not asked to read it, and he were assured it was consonant with the dignity of a British peer. If the proposal tended to the advancement of science or of literature, he would show a faint personal interest, for is he not the nephew of Mountstuart Elphinstone? His connection with the Persian War was rather ludicrous than beneficial to his reputation. But for the rebellion his administration of Bombay would have been as insignificant as his career in Madras.

But the mutinies saved Lord Elphinstone. They found him lolling in the lap of dilletantism; they left him justly honoured by his Sovereign, admired by his countrymen, and placed on a pedestal of heroism lower only than those of the Lawrences and Montgomery. We know too well what the gloom and utter despair of all in Bengal was in June, 1857, not to sympathise with the people of Bombay in their gratitude to the Governor who dispelled that gloom, and chased away that despair in the weeks of August. They had confidence in the man, who, on his own responsibility, sent for aid to the Cape and the Mauritius, who denuded Aden of troops, who almost chided his superior because he would not call for soldiers via Suez, who sent Havelock and the Persian force to save Bengal, who when the crisis demanded it emptied his exchequer into the Punjab, who left his island and his palace defenceless for the sake of the safety of the empire. Equal to the occasion himself, he sent forth men who were second only to himself in energy, who were worthy of the trust he reposed in their judgment and skill. The Mah-ratta, an enemy more formidable than the Mussulman, was quelled. Sir Hugh Rose swept through Central India, and at every halt won a victory. Another Rose trampled out revolt in Sattara. Le Grand Jacob made mutiny impossible in Kolapore. Though resting on a volcano, Lord Elphinstone kept Bombay almost as quiet as Madras. Contrast him with Lord Canning, one of his own order. The cheeks of both were unblanched; neither knew fear; both were brave in the hour of danger, for both were Englishmen, ready, like all their countrymen throughout India, to meet its brunt. But the one was brave because he knew the difficulty in all its extent, and rose equal to it. The other was secure, was careless, because he had not the imagination to body forth the fact that the empire was in a death struggle. Both refused to join in the cry for indiscriminate vengeance, because both stood on a platform from which they could see the truth. But the one abstained from the blood-ery because he had already exacted the penalty which justice strictly demanded; the other refused to justice her lawful demands, and, by prolonging anarchy, shed innocent blood. Lord Elphinstone had the courage of the soldier who knows his enemy; Lord Canning the stolidity of the fool who will not see the foe, and therefore denies his existence. We do not then grudge Lord Elphinstone the honour which the people of Bombay, whom he saved, have resolved to confer on him. Unlike Madras, he has preferred the empire to Bombay. We regret that by the last act of his administration he should have preferred Bombay to the empire. But his deeds in 1857, which have already won for him a British peerage and a Grand Cross of the Bath, deserve that his statue should be placed side by side with those of his great uncle and of Sir John Malcolm.—Friend of India, May 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MULES FOR THE CHINA EXPEDITION.—Some three or four hundred of these very hardy and useful animals have just arrived in Bombay from Poona, en route to China. Cattle of this description will doubtless be found, either for ordnance or commissariat purposes, far more enduring and serviceable in the forthcoming China war than the oxen of the country, which are reputed to be of a weak, slender habit of body, and altogether unfit for following an army, so that the despatch of a large troop of mules to the seat of war is a measure calculated to be of inestimable value.

THE Bank of Bombay reduced its rates of interest and discount two per cent. all round on the 31st May.

A NEW BARRISTER.—The Bombay bar has received an accession of one more member, in the person of Mr. Andrew Richard Scoble, of Lincoln's Inn, who was sworn in on Monday, June 5, in the Supreme Court. Mr. Scoble was admitted to the bar in 1856. There are at present eight barristers practising at the Supreme Court—Mr. Lewis (Advocate-general), Mr. Westropp, Mr. Lowndes (temporarily absent in Europe), Mr. Reid, Mr. White, Mr. Hale, Mr. Anstey, and Mr. Scoble.

Lord Clyde's Farewell Order to the Indian Army.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Calcutta, May 26, 1860.

The labours necessary to complete the pacification of this empire are now over.

H.E. the Viceroy has consented to permit that I may resign the command of H.M.'s forces in India, and retire to England in search of a repose which my age and long service demand.

Lieut. gen. Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., who conducted most gloriously an important part of the late campaigns, will assume the command in my place on the 4th of June.

On leaving this country I take the opportunity of thanking the officers and soldiers of the two services for their valour and endurance so severely tried, especially in the early part of the insurrection.

History does not furnish a more remarkable exhibition of heroic resistance to very adverse circumstances than was shown by the British troops during these mutinies.

The memory of their constancy and daring will never die out in India, and the natives must feel that while Britain contains such sons the rule of the British Sovereign must last undisputed.

Soldiers! both English and native, I bid you all farewell; and I record as my latest word, that the bravery and endurance of which I have spoken with admiration could not alone have ensured success.

That success was owing, in a great measure, to your discipline, the foundation of all military virtue, which I trust will never be relaxed.

May 25.—No. 324.—H. E. the Gov. in Council is pleased to republish the following despatch, No. 62, dated April 14 last, from H.M.'s principal Secretary of State for India:—

"I have had under my consideration in council the rule under which officers of twenty-two years' Indian service are entitled to retire on the pay of their regimental rank. This privilege, which is granted to officers under the joint operation of the regulations of 1796 and 1854, may, in some cases, be rendered inoperative by the regulation of 1801, which precludes them claiming for retirement the benefit of rank, which they may attain after the expiration of twelve months from the date of their landing in England. It has therefore been resolved to rescind this restrictive rule, so far as it affects the cases of officers who, after twenty years' Indian service, counting for retiring pension, may return to this country on leave, and to allow such officers to claim for retirement the benefit of any rank they may attain prior to the expiration of their twenty-two years' service."

MINUTE BY THE HON. LIEUT.-GEN. SIR JAMES OUTRAM, BART., G.C.B., PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

AMALGAMATION OF HER MAJESTY'S INDIAN FORCES WITH THE BRITISH ARMY.

The information lately received from England, though not of a strictly official nature, leads me to apprehend that the amalgamation of her Majesty's Indian Forces with the British Army is almost decided on.

2. Believing, as I do, that that measure, if carried out, will prove most injurious to this country, and that it will inflict grievous injustice on the servants of the East India Company, I have deemed it my duty to record a solemn protest against its adoption.

3. That my protest will influence the issue I do not venture to hope; but for the ease of my conscience, I am desirous that it should be sent home while yet the question is under discussion.

4. The information received by the last few mails leads me to infer that public opinion in England, which at one time preponderated in favour of the maintenance of a local European force in India, has begun to manifest an opposite tendency, and the explanation given of this change of sentiment is the so-called "Mutiny" of a portion of the European troops who enlisted for the East India Company.

5. To cite the recent partial breaking up of the late East India Company's European troops as an argument against the maintenance of a local European force in India, appears to me illogical—ungenerous—I had almost said disingenuous.

6. Addressing those who are conversant with all the facts of the case, I require not to point out the absurd and cruel exaggerations that have been propagated in reference to the conduct of our European remonstrants. These, however, have doubtless had considerable influence in effecting the change said to have recently taken place in the public mind of England on the question of the maintenance of a local army, and it is to be hoped that they will be most fully exposed by her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, when the question comes to be discussed in Parliament, so that no member of either House may give a vote to the prejudice of the existing institutions of India, under erroneous impressions regarding the language and the acts of those soldiers who have recently obtained their discharge.

7. But even had the behaviour of these men not been exaggerated, and all the fables related of them been true, common justice and common sense demand that the circumstances under which the men acted should be fairly represented to Parliament, and considerably reviewed by that august body.

8. That our soldiers had any legal right to the alternative of discharge or re-enlistment I do not admit: that they had no such right has been authoritatively determined by the law officers of the Crown, and I myself do not allow that their claims possessed any very cogent moral validity. But it must be borne in mind that counsel learned in the law have expressed opinions at variance with those of the law officers of the Crown; that in the opinion of a very large proportion of the public, both in this country and in England, their moral claims to the alternative demanded by them were so strong as almost to be irresistible; that long before their demand was mooted, while yet the transference of India to the direct management of the Crown was under discussion, the nobleman who is now at the head of her Majesty's Government enunciated as an obvious truism admitting of no doubt, the proposition that, as a matter of course, the men would be offered the alternative of discharge or re-enlistment.

9. When the transfer was being carried out, Lord Palmerston had become Prime Minister. No hint was given that he had ceased to regard the late Company's European troops as entitled to that alternative of discharge or re-enlistment which a few short months before he had represented to be their absolute moral right. It was simply intimated to the soldiers that the alternative would not be offered them, and, for justification of the refusal, they were referred to the opinions of the law officers of the Crown, according to whose dictum the men could not enforce their claims at law.

10. Bear in mind how unspeakably great had been our recent obligations to the European troops of the East India Company, as well as to their glorious comrades of the Royal army, who had cheerfully laid down their lives to save an empire that then appeared tottering to its fall. Think of the marvellous deeds of valour they had just performed, of the privations and hardships they had endured, and of the (to them) heavy losses which many of them had sustained beyond the destruction of that kit for which alone they could hope to obtain compensation. Remember that the press had long teemed with denunciations of the Government on the ground that we were cruelly negligent of the claims of our own countrymen, while, as was alleged, we were needlessly caressing and enriching natives who had but scant claims on our consideration. Recollect that for years past a painful conviction had pervaded the army that the Government had not behaved fairly to it in the matter of prize—a conviction which led to the destruction, in Lucknow alone, of property to the extent of many tens of thousands of pounds; to the destruction, indeed, of all tangible property which could not be appropriated by the captors, who (and the men were not Company's soldiers) declared that "Government should make nothing by it." Keeping all these facts in view, let us place ourselves in the position of the Company's European soldiers, when informed that, owing to financial difficulties arising out of that mutiny which they had so zealously and successfully aided in subduing, they were—on what they regarded as a lawyer's quibble—to be deprived of that re-enlistment (with the bounty which re-enlistment implied) to which the Prime Minister of England had declared them fully entitled. And doing this, we must admit that some allowance should be made for their conduct.

11. But even were it otherwise, even had the conduct of a portion of the late East India Company's troops been as bad as their bitterest enemies and most unscrupulous detractors would dare to paint it, even were there no extenuating considerations to urge in their behalf, what then? It was not because they were a local force that they misconducted themselves, but because they conceived themselves to have been treated with deliberate injustice and contumely. And will any advocate of amalgamation venture to insinuate that had her Majesty's regiments in India conceived themselves treated in the same fashion, they would not have behaved in precisely the same manner? Will any amalgamationist have the hardihood to maintain that,—ay, even within a comparatively recent period,—soldiers and sailors of her Majesty's service have not in more than one instance evinced very manifest symptoms of insubordination under a sense of neglect and injury? If so, then I take the liberty to declare that his information is decidedly imperfect, or his memory very treacherous.

12. It is simply impossible that were a local army maintained in India, the questions mooted by the late East India Company's troops could ever again come under discussion, and it were easy so to frame, in future, the terms of enlistment for a local Indian force, that no questions of jurisdiction or of the nature or sphere of their duties should ever again occur. It is difficult to conceive that any circumstances could hereafter arise to produce disaffection in a local force which would not as easily arise amongst the line regiments of India, were India to be garrisoned by line regiments alone. And as it stands to reason that, were circumstances to arise calculated to excite disaffection amongst the European soldiers of India, the area of the disaffection could be best limited, and its inconveniences best averted, by our having two forces in the country differing so far from each other in conditions of service, and in traditions, as to give each a distinctive esprit de corps.

13. So far, then, from considering the recent occurrences in India as furnishing an argument against the maintenance of a local European force, I conceive that, candidly viewed and logically applied, they supply a very valid argument in favour of such an arrangement.

14. The other arguments adduced by the advocates of "amalgamation," so far as I understand them, may be reduced to the following heads:—

- (1.) A double force is an anomaly.
- (2.) The efficiency of a local army must necessarily be inferior to that of a similar force borrowed from the Royal army.
- (3.) The local force would be socially inferior to the line troops serving with them.
- (4.) It is desirable to give the whole of the royal army frequent opportunities of acquiring that familiarity with foreign and active service which can only be obtained in India.

15. To the first of these arguments, if it deserves the name, it has been well and sufficiently replied by the Times newspaper, that our British empire in the East is an "anomaly," and that perilous indeed is the position of that empire if its legislation is to proceed on the principle of removing "anomalies."

16. To the second, it ought to be enough to reply that no one whose extensive experience in India, and whose successful command of troops in the field renders him an authority on the subject, has admitted the inferiority of the Company's European troops to those of the line, while many officers of the Royal army, dealing dispassionately with the subject, have borne generous and hearty support in an opposite sense. I feel assured that, even despite the natural disinclination of officers of the Royal army to hint an opinion not in favour at the Horse Guards, were an appeal now made to the whole of the Royal regiments that served with Lord Clyde, they would, with one voice, declare that the 1st Bengal fusiliers, and the 1st Madras fusiliers, were in no single respect inferior to the most distinguished of the Royal regiments serving with them, whether as regards bravery, discipline, internal economy, or steadiness and precision of manoeuvre. And these regiments lay no claim to higher military efficiency than that possessed by other European regiments of the late East India Company. And I believe that every officer of the Royal army, who has ever served with the artillery of the late Company's army, will testify to its being at least equal in efficiency to the Royal artillery.

17. If there be any inferiority in the internal economy of the local as compared with the line regiments, it must be attributed to other causes than to the fact of the force being a local one. The Horse Guards must bear a fair share of the blame, for none but officers of the Royal army, with the solitary exception of Sir P. Grant, have ever been entrusted with command-in-chief. Of divisional generalships, and brigade commands, the Royal army has always had its fair share—the same regulations have been in force in both armies, and all recent military history, and the testimony of all competent military judges, go to prove that if there is any difference in the special qualifications of the staff officers of all branches, the inferiority is not on the side of the local officers.

18. Why, then, it may be asked, should a local service which produces Engineers and Artillery of all grades, and every class of staff officers, quite equal if not superior to those of the Royal army, not be able to produce Infantry as highly disciplined as that of the Royal army? If the fact of inferiority of discipline be as asserted by the opponents of a local force, the cause must be sought elsewhere than in the circumstance of localization, which ought to affect Engineers, Artillery, and Staff, even more than it would Infantry; but as it does not so affect those branches of the army, we must clearly seek for some other cause.

19. I believe that the practice of appointing the Lieutenant-Colonel of a local European regiment by seniority, without special regard to his fitness; of transferring him from regiment to regiment so as to prevent his ever being identified with the corps he commands; and of abstracting all the best officers and men, for staff situations, would alone account for a much greater difference of internal discipline than is alleged to exist—and the only wonder is, that any discipline at all is maintained.

20. I feel certain that any officer of experience in Her Majesty's line regiments would pronounce it hopeless to preserve discipline where such causes were at work to impair it. But not one of them is in the most remote degree connected with the local character of the army—they might one and all be removed to-morrow without amalgamation, and their removal ought to be tried not for a few months, but for a period sufficient to produce an effect on the discipline of every regiment, before we resort to the desperate remedy of annihilating the local army under pretence of improving its discipline.

21. But it is alleged by the advocates of amalgamation, when occasion requires their ground to be shifted, that there is something in continued length of service in India which tends to destroy efficiency and to relax discipline; that this is conspicuous even in Queen's regiments that have served long in India, and that, a fortiori, it must be so in permanent local corps. Now I am prepared to maintain—and if my opinion be questioned, the regiments can be measured, weighed, and tested by various gymnastic exercises—that, corps for corps, a Company's European regiment will turn out as great an amount of healthy thew and sinew, and present as few instances of worn-out men, as any average Royal corps that has served ten years in India. And what, for all practical purposes of efficiency, is a Queen's regiment that has been ten or fifteen years in India better than a local corps? with this disadvantage in the former, moreover, that many of the men have come out at an advanced period of life, and are therefore less qualified to stand the climate. In local as in line, in line as in local corps, men die, are invalided home, or obtain their discharge, and their places are supplied by fresh recruits from England. If any difference exists between the two at any given time, the advantage is with the local corps for the reasons above stated.

22. But were it otherwise, with whom would the blame rest? I answer, with the Horse Guards;—for I have been informed by a medical officer of the Warley Depot, that he and his seniors were reprimanded for their extreme care in the selection of recruits! Men passed by Queen's staff-surgeons in the district, and sent up to Warley, were disapproved of by the Warley officers, and rejected on the ground of deficient vital and muscular strength; sometimes for presenting traces of incipient visceral disease. But a Horse Guard's memorandum stringently prohibited all rejections, unless the recruit had contracted his defects subsequent to the first medical examination, or unless some very glaring defect had escaped the notice of the district staff-surgeon. I believe that a reference to the various Medical Board offices of India, the India House, and Warley, would bring to light many prominent cases of this kind. Whether the remark was made officially or not I am not in a position to state, but I know that the late General Hay, the Commandant at Warley, was told that the Horse Guards could not allow the Indian establishments to pick and choose all the best men.

23. I, of course, assumed that, were a local army allowed to India, earnest endeavours would be made to insure its success. I assume that, instead of being reprimanded for excessive care in the selection of recruits, the recruiting medical officers of the local force would be ordered to exercise excessive vigilance, so that, while the requisite number of recruits were obtained, the greatest possible maximum of vigour should be secured.

24. By the adoption of a scheme prepared some time ago, and of which a rude draft forms Appendix A to this Minute, we should secure for our local force a body of men every way superior in physique, intellectuale, and morale, to the average of those in the Royal army; and we should, moreover, maintain them in a state of discipline and vigour far beyond what has ever been achieved even in the Royal service. Supplement that scheme by the adoption, entire or partial, of Colonel Eyre's plan of Indian garrison battalions, and the local army of India—provided our Divisional Generals and Commanders-in-Chief did their duty—would be superior to any troops in the world.

25. I have treated of the alleged inferiority of efficiency in a local force as though the efficiency of an army depended only on that of its battalions; but I would respectfully, but earnestly, venture to express a very decided opinion that the departments of the Indian army—that portion of the army which has practically been removed from the control of the Horse Guards—are, to say the least of it, equal to those of the royal army. Contrast the performances of the Bengal commissariat during the mutinies, when the whole empire was in a state of dislocation, with those of the Royal commissariat in the Crimea when all the resources of Britain were being applied to the use of the army under the eager gaze and daily comments of the British nation, and where a land transport of only seven miles was demanded of the department! The royal commissariat is a beautiful machine, scientifically constructed, and ingeniously put together, yet how lamentably did it break down. The Indian commissariat is a seemingly cumbrous conglomeration of "anomalies," yet how gloriously has it worked in practice. Take, again, our Quartermaster-general's department, or our Intelligence (which is practically a diplomatic) department, and say whether they do not contrast favourably with those of the royal service. And then let the advocates of amalgamation seriously consider how much of the efficiency of those military departments, on whose efficiency the success of an army in the field must depend, is due to the fact that they are guided and presided over by men whose ambition, from their boyhood upwards, it has been to know the native character, languages, usages, and habits of thought, and who have mingled freely with their native fellow-subjects in social intercourse and in field sports. The tact and skill they bring to bear on their departmental duties is the result of years of plodding labour, and unobtrusive devotion to a class of pursuits for which the officers of Queen's corps have rarely shown any inclination. And whether, in the event of amalgamation, the same class of men (not one in a hundred of whom possesses Horse Guards' or Parliamentary interest) is likely to be sought out and promoted by the Horse Guards authorities, is a question which any man may decide for himself, according to his knowledge of human nature, and of the mode in which such things are and always have been managed here and in England.

26. Here, as everywhere else in the world, unworthy and unfit men are sometimes to be found in situations which like those on the staff ought to be posts of selection. But no competent judge has ever denied that the average proportion of such men on the staff of the local Indian army is singularly small; that the proportion of highly qualified and competent staff officers is as great, if not greater, than in any army in Europe, and greater than in the British royal army in time of peace; and that there is no officer in the local army who is really eminently fit for staff employ, who is not known, and sure sooner or later to be employed without any special recommendations beyond his own personal fitness. I assert, as the result of many years of close observation and personal knowledge, that it is difficult to find any officer of the local army who is known to his regimental comrades as eminently qualified for staff employ, who has not had a chance of getting on the staff. If such an officer remains with his regiment, it is because he prefers, as many do, regimental duty, or is debarr'd by some infirmity, well known to his comrades, from availing himself of the chances otherwise open to him.

27. How different is the case in her Majesty's line regiments is well known to every one who is acquainted with the individual characters of the officers of any one corps, for I hardly know a regiment which would not furnish an instance of an officer eminently qualified for staff employ, and against whom no objection whatever could be alleged, who was yet well aware that he must go through the service without a chance of staff employment.

28. This, of course, would not be an objection if such men were not selected simply because worthier than they had already been taken for staff employ. But this is notoriously not the case. It is not pretended that the Staff of her Majesty's army in England are generally chosen for their absolute superiority to all other candidates; all that can be possibly alleged is that they are not incompetent for the several duties to which they have been appointed through interest.

29. It is this which makes the fundamental difference of the two systems. Selection of some sort there must be, and the general motive which influences the selection may, for want of a better word, be called "interest." But in the Indian army a man can and does create interest for himself, and superior fitness for staff employ always has and does create it for him. But such is not the case in England. Influences, family, personal, or political—all quite irrespective of professional qualifications—have more to do with the selection than simple claims of professional merit; or if the latter be recognised, it is in consequence of some unusual departure from established custom, not, as in the Indian army, a natural and inevitable result of the system.

30. I leave it to any one who is practically acquainted with both systems to decide what are likely to be the results to our Indian staff, if officers are selected not, as at present, frequently, if not habitually, from being the best men for the work required, but simply because they have personal, parliamentary, or family interest at the Horse Guards, have passed certain examinations, and cannot be said to be incompetent, their "interest" lying entirely in England, instead of being entirely created in this country.

31. The third argument urged by the advocates of amalgamation, viz., that a local force would occupy a social position inferior to that held by the line troops, is utterly undeserving of attention. Such could only occur by an inversion of the order of things which common sense and common justice would dictate in the event of a local force being maintained. If we are to have a local force, the officers of that force must have the same numerical preponderance over the officers of the royal army than they have ever had; and this preponderance being maintained, there would be no greater social inferiority than has from time immemorial existed with reference to the Company's army. Under the system advocated by the supporters of a local army, the number of line regiments in India would continue to be just what they were prior to the mutinies. Whatever amount of military force beyond this was required for the control and defence of India would be furnished by a local army, the relative proportions of whose European and native elements would from time to time be determined by her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. Hereafter, doubtless, as heretofore, officers newly arrived in India, with little experience of any but the surface of society in England or elsewhere, will occasionally be silly enough to affect contempt for the officers of the Indian local army, for their families, society, and employments, and will, perhaps, use the same terms of contempt in speaking of them as we have heard in times gone by. It is not to be expected, or wished if it could be expected, that our Indian officers should assimilate exactly, even in the externals, to those who live under different conditions, in a society where differences of fortune and rank are far greater and more artificial than in India; and we may well reconcile ourselves to the impossibility, by a consideration of the substantial advantages which service in India can confer—just as the country gentleman in England can smile at the pity with which his pursuits and amusements are regarded by his London cousin. Hereafter, as heretofore, officers of her Majesty's royal army who remain long in India, and whose good opinion is worth having, will not fail to recognize the many intrinsic excellences of the local service and of all connected with it, and there is little fear that as the members of that service become better known to their countrymen at home, the interest in, and appreciation of their services, lately felt by the Sovereign and people of England, will in any degree diminish, and more than this we need hardly desire.

32. But the bare supposition of such a thing is absurd; and by the adoption of the suggestions contained in Appendix B of this Minute, the officers of the local force would be placed in a position which would enable them proudly to challenge social rank with any officers of any army in the world.

33. The fourth argument adduced by the advocates of amalgamation is based on the alleged desirableness of giving to her Majesty's regiments the advantage of a more extensive acquaintance with the field, experience which is only or mainly to be acquired in India. What is this but an admission that Indian regiments are in a better marching and fighting order than regiments serving at home or in the other colonies; and on the amalgamationists does it devolve to reconcile this, their fundamental premise, with the alleged inferiority of Indian local corps and of corps of the line that have long served in India. But granting, as I readily do, that for all the purposes of real soldiership—for marching, bivouacking, roughing it in the field, and fighting—Indian regiments are superior to those that have not had the like experience of the real and distinctive elements of military life, I cannot admit either the policy or the equity of upsetting the military system under which India was gained and has been maintained—dealing a grievous blow at our Eastern empire—imposing vast burdens on our Eastern native fellow-subjects—and inflicting cruel wrong on six thousand English gentlemen who have well acquitted themselves of their duties, though, unfortunately, they have but little aristocratic interest, and no parliamentary or press influence, simply that an increased number of the regiments of her Majesty's line may acquire a greater practical knowledge of their profession.

34. If the real objects of the proposed amalgamation be merely to give Indian experience to a greater number of Royal regiments, let the twenty-four corps of the line and four regiments of cavalry which before the mutinies were found sufficient to supplement the local force, be relieved every ten, every seven, or if need be, every five years, the Imperial treasury bearing the additional cost. By such an arrangement the professed object of the Horse Guards would be effectually secured; their regiments would be saved that deterioration which the advocates of amalgamation represent is inseparable from long service in India; and there would be less risk of the regular recurrence of that phenomenon to which we have so long been accustomed—the retirement from corps ordered on Indian service of the great majority of those officers who can afford, by paying for exchange into home-stationed regiments, to avoid acquiring that practical experience of the rough realities of a soldier's life which their military superiors deem of such importance.

35. True, the cost of these frequent reliefs would be considerable; but it would be considerably less to India than that which would result from maintaining a force of from 60, 70, or 80 line regiments, and a proportional force of artillery, engineers, sappers and miners, to be relieved every fifteen or twenty years. And, amalgamation once conceded, I feel confident that more frequent reliefs of the whole force would speedily be demanded.

36. But more than this—unless India is to be denuded, in times of European trouble, of a large portion of the 60, 70, or 80 regiments for the maintenance of which the people of India will be taxed, or unless these regiments are, as I have hinted, to be favoured with such frequent reliefs as would add vastly to the financial burdens of India—there would absolutely be fewer India-seasoned regiments at any one time in Britain and the other colonies, than could be secured by retaining the line contingent supplied to India at its average strength of 24 regiments, and granting its decennial or septennial reliefs.

37. I have, I think, considered every one of the pleas urged by the advocates of amalgamation. The first, I feel assured, is too exclusively a doctrinaire one to find weight with the practical people of England, whose entire constitution and public life is a series of "anomalies," but of anomalies that work admirably in practice.

38. The second is one which I sincerely believe rests on a misconception. Its fallacy is practically admitted in the fourth of the arguments adduced by the amalgamationists. If it were true, the real blame, as I have shown, would be mainly chargeable on the central military authorities at the Horse Guards,—and the natural and proper remedy would, therefore, consist, not in abolishing the local force, but in effecting a reform in the recruiting arrangements in England, as well as in that system of patronage under which Indian commanders-in-chief and divisional generals have hitherto been appointed. And, as I have said, Appendix A. of this Minute details a scheme, the adoption of which would render the Indian local army superior to any army in the world.

39. The third plea of the amalgamationists I have proved to be utterly untenable.

40. And in respect of the fourth, I have, I think, shown that to involve a glaring fallacy.

41. In other words, I have endeavoured to show that there is no reason why any organic change should be made in that military system (based on a large local army adequately supplemented by regiments of the line) under which India has been won and kept, and in doing so I have incidentally suggested grounds for apprehending that the organic change now proposed would operate injuriously on the military interests of India. And now I beg to record my conviction that the adoption of such a change would entail heavy burdens on the Indian finances—prove otherwise injurious to the best interests of the people of India—tend greatly to shake the stability of British power in the East—and inflict grievous injuries on some six thousand gentlemen who have long, ably, and successfully laboured for the honour of their native land and the welfare of the land of their adoption.

42. It is a fact that the local European corps of India actually cost less than the line regiments supplied from England. The pay of officers and men is alike—their rations, clothing, &c. the same. But partly owing to the costliness of the separate depot system, two companies of each regiment being kept up in England—partly owing to the greater sickness to which, as a rule, they are subject for the first few years of their service—the fact is as I have stated it. The average number of line regiments coming out to India before the mutinies was 14 per annum—under the amalgamation system, it would, even with reliefs only after fifteen or twenty years' service, be five or six per annum, involving a proportionately increased cost to the State.

43. But this is a mere trifle to the other expenses which amalgamation would entail.

44. The average transport charge* from Gravesend to India is £102 per officer, and £14 per private. Assume 5 line regiments to be sent out annually, of an average strength of 1,000 men and 45 officers, and 2 companies of artillery, with each 6 officers and 212 men, and we shall have an average annual sum, including the passage of the return regiments, of £178,736† besides the charges for occasional relief of sappers, engineers, &c., with which to debit the tax-payers of India as a price of their exemption from the "anomaly" of a local corps.

45. Again, the average annual number of cadets of all arms sent out to meet casualties in the three local armies has, during the last twenty years, been 250. Now all these young gentlemen defray the cost of their own passage out. But if amalgamation be adopted, and unless a change take place in the regulations of the Royal army, all the young men sent out to fill up casualties in the Indian establishment will be provided with free passages at the cost of that "Bengal Ryot" on whose hard case India reformers are not apt to be lachrymously eloquent, and who not only has no interest in amalgamation, but a very great personal interest in the continued maintenance of a local army and the number of men sent out under amalgamation is not likely to be less than that required by existing arrangements. The charge under this head at £95 each would be £23 750.†

46. Again, captains as well as subalterns of the royal army, under certain circumstances going home on sick certificate, and subalterns as also captains returning from sick leave, are allowed passage money at Government expense; while only the subalterns of the local army are thus provided—and that only on their way home. Unless the sick leave regulations of the whole royal army be altered, officers of the rank of captain will continue to be provided with free passages at the cost of the Indian tax-payers. The cost of passage money on this account is estimated at £240 per regiment, or for (say) 70 regiments, £16,800 + per annum.

47. A comparative statement of the cost of a royal and of a local regiment is given in appendix No. 53 of the report of the royal commission on the re-organization of the army. By this, if amalgamation is decided on, the cost of the European infantry alone will be say 70 regiments at £85,271 = £5,968,970, but if a local force be determined on or by having a local force, the cost will be £446,384† per annum less than if the whole infantry force were line. And this is exclusive of the proportionately higher cost of the cavalry and artillery branches of the line compared with locals.

46 local regiments at £75,567 = £3,476,082

48. I have not even yet exhausted the items of increased financial embarrassments which amalgamation would entail on India; but I have said enough to show that the removal of the "anomaly" of a local Indian army can only be purchased at a price which it would be very questionable policy, and as questionable morality to impose on the Indian tax-payers. Some of my figures may be wrong, possibly all are. If so, let the errors be exposed; but I trust that my erroneous calculations may not be allowed to prejudice the considerations they have been produced to enforce. I have pointed out sources of increased expense inseparable from amalgamation. Let that expense be calculated by men with more accurate knowledge of the facts of the case than I possess. But let the calculation be made, and its results considered before amalgamation is carried—not after.

49. I have said that amalgamation, besides entailing a heavy and unnecessary, and therefore an unjustifiable burden on the people of India, would be otherwise prejudicial to their interests.

50. Hitherto the officers of the local army of India have been mainly derived from the middle classes of Britain. They have, as a rule, been the sons of clergymen, lawyers, physicians, merchants, and of the civil and military servants of India—themselves of middle class descent. They have belonged to a class accustomed to work hardly for their living, and to regard labour not merely as the only practicable, but as the only honourable road to wealth and social eminence—a class unaccustomed to, and unappreciative of, indolent or luxurious habits.

51. They have come out to India as boys—healthy, ingenious, manly boys—ignorant of the enjoyments and dissipations of “life” in England, and full of eager expectations in respect of the country which is to be their home for the next twenty or thirty years. On their arrival they have been thrown into close contact with men who had resided long in India and acquired a knowledge of its people, its languages, its religions, and its civil and military history. From these they have taken their tone—acquiring from them a vast fund of information not to be obtained in books, and practical maxims the result of the experience of many generations. Associating with such men they have early become “ambitious to emancipate themselves from Griffinhood”—in other words, to acquire a thorough familiarity with the country, its customs and its concerns. Taking readily to field sports they have necessarily been thrown into intimate intercourse with the natives, under circumstances which begot in them kindly feelings towards the latter. They have thus early learned to penetrate below the surface of native character, to admire its good features, and to understand and guard against its less amiable peculiarities. And thus did they acquire that knowledge of the workings of the native mind which enabled them in after life to discharge, with efficiency and in kindness, the various military, political, departmental, and administrative duties assigned to them. Such were the men—and such was the training of the men—who have hitherto commanded the regular and irregular corps of the local army—who have been the private friends and official counsellors of the chiefs and nobles and gentry of India—who have managed and controlled those enormous commissariat and other military establishments through the working of which the native masses are brought into contact with Europeans—who have wandered amongst the rural population, and been brought into intimate relations with it in the pursuit of sport, and when officially engaged in conducting surveys, adjudicating disputes, constructing bridges, roads, and tanks, suppressing violence, redressing wrongs, and performing those numberless miscellaneous duties that so constantly devolve on military officers in this country. Deeply interested in the people, such men were to be found sitting for hours under the shade of a village tree in earnest colloquy with the people—listening to their tales, answering their questions, clearing their minds of misapprehensions, giving them advice, and rendering them practical aid in many ways.

52. Through the personal influence of such men, schools, colleges, and dispensaries have been spread over the face of the country, cruel rites have been suppressed, and revolting ceremonies have been discarded, without exciting religious animosity or suspicions, sanitary reforms have been effected without awakening caste prejudices, charitable institutions have been established on unsectarian principles, the advantages of co-operation have been widely diffused, new arts have been taught, and improved methods introduced into those of traditional culture. In a word, the civilization of the people of India has been advanced, their morals elevated, and their social welfare very extensively promoted, by the individual action and personal influence of the men by whom the local army has hitherto been officered. Far be it from me to say that all, or even a majority of our officers, have actively exerted themselves in the cause of philanthropy and progress; but a very large proportion have undoubtedly done so, and rarely has it happened that any who have outlived their Griffinhood have been guilty of conduct calculated to alienate the natives of the country. He who should wantonly outrage native prejudices, or evince a contempt for native habits of thought, would have been tabooed in Indian society.

53. By the aid of such men thus early sent to India, and from the first taught to regard it as their only field of employment, enjoyment, and distinction, has India been gradually won and marvellously maintained and governed. Without the aid of such men, an army of two hundred thousand men could hardly have maintained the British power. They would assuredly have failed to hold it save by sheer physical force. And by the abolition of the local army the supply of such men will be cut off.

54. God forbid that I—many of whose most cherished friendships are with officers of the royal army—who have had the proud privilege of serving with and commanding some of the finest regiments in her Majesty's service—and who owe to their valor and loyalty the high honour which my beloved and venerated Sovereign has bestowed on me far above my deserts—God forbid that I should say, or write, one word to the disparagement of such men. I say it not to their disparagement, but as a mere fact to which they themselves will bear willing testimony—that Queen's officers can never supply the place of the officers of the local army in respect of the qualities and qualifications, and beneficent agency I have so imperfectly succeeded in describing. And if such be the fact, surely I do not injuriously reflect on them when I affirm that, by substituting officers of her Majesty's line for the officers whom the local Indian army has hitherto fostered, a gulph will be established between the governing and the governed classes of this country, which no administrative measures can bridge, and which must go on widening from year to year till at length the British rule become impossible, or, if possible, an absolute curse.

55. It is a fact well known to every one who has served in India that “Queen's officers” (with rare exceptions) have never assimilated themselves to the conditions of India. As a rule, they do not attempt to acquire its languages, nor to conceal their contempt for all that especially pertains to it. A native is to them a “nigger” or a “black fellow,” whether he be a noble or a cooly, a Mussulman or Hindoo, a Parsee or Buddhist. And it is not difficult to understand how this occurs. The majority of the officers in a newly arrived line regiment vary in age from eight and twenty to eight-and-forty. They have got beyond that period of life when old habits can easily be discarded, or new tastes acquired—when the linguistic faculty is strong—when study affords pleasure—or when it is not difficult to acknowledge one's self ignorant of knowledge which is worth acquiring. All is new to them—much is paradoxical and perplexing. If they would seek enlightenment respecting the various races they meet, their religions, their customs or their habits of thought, they must do so by much reading and inquiry, and as a preliminary step they must acquire one of the native languages. All this, to men of advanced years, is an irksome task, more especially in an enervating climate. They shrink from the attempt; they learn to despise that which they have not the resolution to acquire. If they can afford to purchase an exchange into a home regiment they hasten to leave the country: those who remain are apt to think only of the time when, their exile over, they shall return to England. They make up their minds to endurance—enjoyment is out of the question. Finding that much of the conversation in local circles—both civil and military —turns on local affairs which they have despaired of comprehending, they keep very much to themselves, and by bearing each other in countenance intensify each other's contempt for India and all that is Indian. It is the seniors who give its tone to a regiment, and the youngsters of a line corps, who, if thrown amongst “locals,” would be fired with the same zeal for acquiring a knowledge of India with which the young officers of the local army are inspired, are discouraged from the attempt by the language and example of their seniors. This has been the rule as regards all line regiments in India from time immemorial, the perpetual griffinness of whose officers is a standing theme for the jocularity of local officers. There are from time to time young officers of Queen's corps who study the native languages and excel in them; but laudable as their efforts are to acquire a knowledge of India and its people, they are rarely successful, and still more rarely do they acquire a liking for natives and a knowledge of the native character. For they live and move and have their being in a circle where natives rarely enter, and in which the country, the people, and its usages are abused and thoroughly misunderstood. Such was the case before the mutinies. Since the mutinies it has been more than ever the case. Hatred has, as a rule, taken the place of contempt in the minds of line officers, and every native is regarded as a Pandy, and one who, if not an assassin, is not so merely because he has lacked the courage or the opportunity. I speak partly from my own observation, and partly on the observation of officers high in the service, when I say that the most injurious consequences are likely to result from the rule which prescribes that cadets of the local army shall first do duty for six months with line regiments. Those youngsters who, under the old system, would in six months have mastered Hindostani, and have prided themselves in their knowledge and appreciation of the native character, will now think it noble, and manly, and “the correct thing” to sneer at, decry, and vilify all that is native. As if still further to intensify this lamentable evil—as if still further to imbue the young men destined to be sepoy officers, and to fill departmental posts, with a hatred and contempt for those with whom they are destined to be brought into intimate relations, it has been ordered that cadets shall be attached to line regiments in England.

56. If such be the state of matters now, what may we not anticipate when India is wholly garrisoned by the line, and when the present race of local officers has become extinct by death, or that retirement to which many of them will likely be driven in consequence of their wholesale supercession by “Queen's officers”? Even while the local force still continues in existence supercession will take place, and Queen's officers, devoid of that thorough knowledge of the people and appreciation of their qualities, which is so necessary for advantageously controlling them, will be placed in positions involving functions of an administrative and controlling nature.

57. It may be said that when amalgamation takes place, India will be supplied as before with young men who, inspired by the prizes which the staff and departmental offices hold out, will exert themselves as earnestly and as successfully in the acquisition of local knowledge and experience as their predecessors of the local army. I reply—the thing is impossible. The lads may bring the same earnestness, but it is impossible that they can achieve equal success. They will not be placed under those conditions of early association and local training to which much more than to formal study the success of their predecessors was due. Their tuition will at best be a head one—their affections will not be from the first enlisted in behalf of the country and the people, as was the case with the local officers—their associations will be in the main European, and with Europeans indifferent to, or prejudiced against, the country, their native intercourse being principally with the disreputable class of natives who, with rare exceptions alone hang about European barracks, and associate with their inmates. But even were it otherwise, the great majority of the officers of the line regiments will not be amongst those who aspire to qualify themselves for detached employment in India—many of them will have come out at an age when to do so would be an impossibility. From them many of the juniors afterwards joining will take their tone—one of indifference to and contempt for the country. And these men will take the place of those of the local service who, though still performing regimental duties, have identified themselves more or less with native interests and native progress, and have (to make use of Lord Ellenborough's words) "represented to the natives the friendship as well as the power of the governing nations."

58. I have stated that the proposed amalgamation would inflict grievous and unmerited injuries on the six thousand gentlemen who now officer the local army, and a little consideration will prove that I am right.

59. These men entered the service on the implied understanding that they would succeed in order of seniority to regimental "off-reckonings," in periods ranging, according to individual good or ill luck, from thirty to forty-five years of service. Will faith be kept with them in this respect? Can faith be kept with them in this respect under the proposed amalgamation plan?

60. They entered the service on an implied guarantee that they should never be superseded in regimental or line promotion, either by the introduction of the purchase system, or by irregular promotion based on the principle of selection. Can faith possibly be kept with them in this respect under the proposed amalgamation plan?

61. All in the service have been allowed authoritatively, to make arrangements for purchasing out their seniors, and these arrangements, and the retiring funds which have been established in consequence, though not actually sanctioned by the law, cannot justly be interfered with. Relying on this understanding, they have regularly subscribed to funds, the object of which is to accelerate promotion, by providing bonuses out of the common purse to officers willing to retire before they have earned their off-reckonings. And they have done so in the confident hope that when ill-health or other considerations should lead to their own retirement, they would, as a matter of course, receive bonuses equal in amount to those paid to their predecessors. Will the regulations and whole machinery of the line be altered to meet the equitable claims of these men? or will their funds be broken up, and all the prospective advantage for which they have monthly made pecuniary sacrifices, be absolutely denied them?

62. If in none of these respects faith can be kept with them, who shall say that they will not be grievously wronged? Am I told that where the interests of a mighty empire are at stake, individuals must suffer for the general weal—I reply, that the proposed change, the adoption of which would occasion such grievous individual wrong, far from being in the interests of the Indian empire, is totally opposed to them. And the object of my Minute is earnestly to implore that this assertion be calmly and dispassionately argued before some competent tribunal ere a change is made, which, I feel assured, will be as injurious to the State as it cannot but be to individuals.

63. But the wrongs I have glanced at are only a fraction of the injuries which amalgamation would inflict on the officers of the local army. The advocates of amalgamation argue that a local force would be socially inferior to the line force by which it must be supplanted, and I have pointed out the glaring illogicality of the argument. But I must do more. Painful as the duty is, I must express my confident belief that if amalgamation be carried, the gentlemen who now officer the local army will be made to occupy a position of painful inferiority to the officers originally nominated by the Horse Guards. Already are they made to feel, keenly and humiliatingly, the loss they have sustained by the extended action of the Horse Guards in India. They find themselves put aside. A few men whose local knowledge and experience render them still indispensable retain their positions; but they (especially in the Bengal Army) labour under the conviction that they are being gradually shelved. The senior officers are unemployed, and they see divisional and brigade commands, and the various non-regimental offices which are embraced under the term "staff," day by day passing from their hands and conferred on others, as they will believe to their dying day, and as the non-military public believes, out of proportion to the relative experience, qualifications, and services of the two forces. They observe, moreover, or fancy they observe, that in the distribution of honours for actual services in the field rendered during the late mutiny, a marked difference has been made between "Queen's" and "Company's" officers. Their observation may be erroneous, and, if so, a careful and exact scrutiny will demonstrate the error. The local officers are, as at present constituted, as much Queen's officers as those of the line, and they at present possess a professional individuality, a distinctive prominence, and claims based on that generous sympathy which recent events might well be supposed to create in their favour, which would be entirely lost were they merged into "second battalions," or even new regiments of the line. They feel that they would then not only be swamped—not only go to swell the list of those men who, devoid of aristocratic or Parliamentary interest, and without the power of purchase, have no chance of stepping beyond the sphere of regimental service, but they would really occupy an inferior social position, be sneered at as quondam "local" men, probably assumed to be malcontents, and regarded as blemishes to be got rid of as speedily as possible.

64. Without endorsing all these gloomy forebodings, I may be allowed to express an opinion, based on some knowledge of military life, that, on the whole, their position would be an unpleasant one; and, a very confident opinion, that their chance of staff preferment would be scanty so soon as a sufficient number of "line" men had acquired that knowledge of one or two of the Indian languages, which I much fear would (after amalgamation) be deemed to imply the possession of all those Indian qualifications most of which Company's officers necessarily possessed, but which it is simply impossible, from the very nature of their position and associations, that line officers can obtain, save in exceptional cases. For, [as I have endeavoured to show elsewhere, line officers, though they may be "able to read Hindoostanee books," could not obtain a thorough comprehension of "Hindoostanee men"—to quote one of General Jacob's happy distinctions.

65. In expressing an opinion that staff appointments would soon be monopolised by those who had been originally line officers, I make no reflection on the conscientiousness or good feeling of the administrators of local patronage. For, ere long, the great majority of these would be themselves "Horse Guards" officers—with Horse Guards associations and sympathies—devoid of that intimate knowledge of the country, and that acquaintance with the native character, so essential for executive officers, whether regimental or departmental—unable in times of peace fully to appreciate the importance of these accomplishments, and incapable of testing them. Their intimate acquaintances and confidential referees would be men of their own service, most of whom they had known from youth upwards—men often as little capable as themselves of appreciating, amidst the quiet routine of cantonment life, the value of special Indian qualifications, and as little capable of testing them. To such men a pass certificate in a native language would seem an adequate guarantee of fitness, and their predilections would naturally be in favour of the men possessed of this qualification who had risen in their own regiments, or whom they had known in different home or colonial garrisons, or who were the relations or proteges of their own military friends, of their country neighbours, or of their professional superiors.

66. I can conceive an advocate of amalgamation demanding of me whether, so long as the duties of an office are adequately performed, it matters whether the incumbent be one who entered the service through the portals of the Horse Guards or those of Leadenhall-street. I reply that, assuming both classes of officers to be equally fitted for the command of irregular corps, or staff and departmental employment, which I do not admit—it matters very much indeed, as a question of common honesty, whether men who came out to India resolved to devote themselves to its service,—who came out on the tacit understanding that a certain number of staff appointments should be reserved for them,—and who have by much labour thoroughly qualified themselves for these offices, shall see them transferred to others who have no such claims. And I affirm, that were this matter put clearly before the people of England, they would, with one acclaim, support the view I have taken. It is a dangerous thing for our service to avail itself of its political influence to do a wrong to another. The precedent it establishes to-day for its own benefit may be converted to its own prejudice to-morrow.

67. There is one class of officers in respect of whom I would fain make a special appeal on this score, as they are a class which, to our disgrace be it said, has been treated with singular harshness and illiberality alike by their military and civil superiors. I allude to the officers of the medical department, a body of men who not only are unsurpassed by any other body in the service for professional zeal and skill, gallantry, and devotion to their duties, but have especially distinguished themselves by the success with which they have cultivated general science, and the earnestness with which they have applied themselves to the promotion of education and other philanthropic objects. These men, especially those of the Bombay establishment, have been treated by us with such unfairness, that a late physician general of that presidency, a man whose name is held in honour both in and out of his profession—I allude to Dr. MacLennan—felt himself authorized to assure the late Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, that had any officer treated his dog-boy in the manner in which the Court of Directors and Board of Control have treated the medical service, he would have been brought to a court martial, and cashiered for dishonourable breach of faith. The physician-general's illustration was a strong one; but after explanation, its justice was admitted by that Commander-in-Chief, who thenceforth felt as warmly on the subject as the head of the medical department.

68. In behalf of this noble and ill used service, Lord Dalhousie made a generous interposition; and though his lordship's efforts were at the time unsuccessful, his appeal was so forcible, and his general views have been so earnestly and ably supported by Lord Canning, that justice cannot long be denied them if the army of India be kept a local one. But to the Medical Service amalgamation would be ruinous.

69. Than Dr. Alexander, the Director-general of Her Majesty's Medical service, I am assured that no worthier or more honourable man exists. But he is only a man of finite knowledge and human feelings. He knows the officers of his own service—he knows that many of them are eminently deserving of that promotion which at present it is not in his power to bestow, but for which amalgamation would afford an opportunity. And not knowing the men in the local army, his partialities would needs be in favour of the men of his own service, to an extent that would prove ruinous to the just claims of the medical officers of the local service. And even if he should deem it his duty, on the first opportunity to promote to higher grades those medical officers the seniority rules of whose service prevented their obtaining promotion for the same services as secured promotion for their more fortunate brethren of the Royal army—the very number of promotions that have recently been made to the grade of deputy-inspector in the Royal service would, for a considerable length of time, prevent him doing justice to those of the local service whose names had been honourably mentioned by the various generals commanding in the field; and ere these arrears of promotion were disposed of the claims of those, in whom as members of his own service he naturally feels more interested, would have again accumulated and pressed for favourable notice.

70. Amalgamation, then, would prove injurious to the moral claims and legitimate expectations of the military and medical officers of the local service to an extent which only very urgent public necessities could justify; and I have endeavoured to prove not only that no necessity has arisen for destroying the local character of the Indian service, but that its destruction would, in many ways, be productive of injury to India. But I would not be understood as claiming for the officers of the local army any exclusive right to staff employ, and in Appendix B. to this Minute will be found a scheme, the adoption of which would secure for the various staff and departmental offices of the State an amount of general, professional, and special Indian qualification of very high order. Throw these appointments open to expectant officers of the line equally with local officers, and this probably would tend, more than any other possible arrangement, to make Indian service popular with line regiments. The fullest and purest competition of a practical—not a pedantic—nature would be introduced, and the best men would be preferred to the best appointments. The efficiency of the whole Indian service—line and local—would be increased; no new burdens would be imposed on the people of India that did not bring commensurate advantages, and no injustice would be done to those six thousand gallant and honourable gentlemen who have long and faithfully and successfully toiled in this land of exile.

71. Before concluding, I cannot but advert to another phase of the question I have been discussing.

72. It has been affirmed, both in Parliament and by the English press, that the real object of that amalgamation—in support of which such feeble arguments have been adduced, and against which such weighty arguments are adducible—is simply to increase the European influence of the British Cabinet, by enabling her Majesty's Ministers to maintain, at the cost of the people of India, a powerful army capable of being speedily brought into the field in any part of the world. I do not deny that the possession of such an available force would materially aid the diplomatic action of the British Government. It is not my province to inquire whether it is the wish, or for the interests of the British nation, that their Government should assume the position and tone which a vastly increased military strength might enable them to assume; but I do most earnestly deprecate the recognition of the European army of India as a force available for European warfare, and I sincerely trust that the British Parliament will never sanction any arrangement which would be inequitable to the tax-payers of this country, and a source of danger to its government. For many years to come an imposing European force must be kept in India; for many years will elapse ere its public mind can be thoroughly tranquillised, and many years of strong but beneficent administration can alone suffice to conciliate away that impatience of the rule of the Feringhees which recent events have proved to be far spread and deeply-rooted. That a general impatience of our sway has been created, and a universal suspicion of our intentions awakened amongst our population, can no longer be doubted. This impatience and this suspicion has been excited by Mahomedan zealots, who have learned to cherish the belief that the sovereignty of India may again be acquired by them; but there is reason to fear that the Mahomedans are themselves but tools of others animated by a more intelligent jealousy of our position in the East. And we could not more effectually play into the hands of hostile powers than by weakening the strength of the European garrison of India to meet emergencies in other parts of the world. Persia, a power wielded at will by Russia—Afghanistan, amenable to Russian counsels enforced by Russian gold—Nepaul and Siam—could, and assuredly would, be influenced to menace our frontiers in the event of an European war in which England should be involved. Thus menaced, we should find in the Punjab—described by those who know it as ripe for revolt—a source of much danger; and with the Punjab in revolt, the rest of India would be in a very perilous position, teeming, as I fear it does, with downright disloyalty on the part of the Mahomedan population, and with much passive disaffection amongst many of our Hindoo subjects. A second insurrection, inspired and guided by foreign influence, and occurring simultaneously with demonstrations along our frontiers or on our coasts, and at a time when our European army had been weakened, would be a more serious matter far than the revolt we have just suppressed.

73. I know it will be asked if I am insane enough to think that the Horse Guards would ever denude India of its European troops; and a similar question was asked by the re-organisation commissioners of General Vivian. His answer shall be mine. India was deprived of European troops to meet the necessities of the Crimean war, both by the removal of regiments and by the inability of Government to maintain the strength of those remaining; and this to such an extent, that when—a necessity arising from the Persian expedition—a further and a legitimate demand was made on the European garrison of India, the mutinies found the country so denuded of British soldiers as to render our tenure of it for a while most precarious.

74. In conclusion, I desire to express my sincere hope that my allusions to the "Horse Guards" and Horse Guard commanders may not be construed as, in the most remote degree, intended to reflect disrespectfully on the one or the other. I have used the word "Horse Guards" simply as a symbol to designate not only the administrative organisation of the Royal army, but its traditional usages and rules of official action. And, in reference to the distinguished officers of the Royal service who have held chief and divisional commands in India, all that I meant to imply was that, as "Queen's officers," they unavoidably failed to appreciate in times of peace those varied qualifications for staff employ which only a residence in India, and a knowledge of her people can bestow—that had they appreciated them, they were unable to test them—that they have been too apt to regard an ability to read, speak, or write a native language as proof of the existence of a knowledge of Indian affairs—and that, naturally, they were prejudiced in favour of their own service—assertions which I am sure most of them will laughingly admit.

75. I wish this minute to be sent home by next mail; but I am also desirous that it should be submitted to his Excellency the Viceroy, whose opinions on the subjects herein discussed are, I believe, somewhat similar to my own, and who will, I hope, in that case, do me the favour to supplement my arguments and supply their deficiencies; as well as to my honble. colleagues, from whom I would earnestly solicit the same favour.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

On the 24th of next August three years will have elapsed since the memorable meeting in the Egyptian-hall of the Mansion-house, presided over by Lord Mayor Finnis, when it was first resolved to raise a public subscription for the relief of the sufferers by the revolt of the Bengal army. A commencement was at once made by the collection of £1,000 on the spot, and the very next mail to the East conveyed £2,000 to Calcutta, as an earnest of the genuine sympathy of the people of this country. The grain of mustard-seed planted on that day has grown up into a goodly plant, beneath whose hospitable boughs many an unfortunate creature has found a kindly shelter and a home.

In accordance with the resolution of the General Committee, the administration of temporary relief having ceased on the 31st of last December, a Report of the present state and future prospects of the Fund is now presented to the public, and will be found in our advertisement columns. For the benefit, however, of those who have neither taste nor leisure to enter into details, we shall submit in a few words the purport of this third annual statement of proceedings. The balance to the credit of the Fund on New Year's Day of 1859 amounted to the large sum of £265,766.2s.9d., which was increased in the course of the year by subscriptions, repayment of loans, and interest on securities to £279,111.12s.9d. From this, however, must be deducted £39,966.10s.10d.—the aggregate of £28,501.13s.3d. dispensed in administering relief, £1,464.17s.7d. expended on the management, and £10,000 remitted to Calcutta. The balance, therefore, to the credit of the Fund in England, on the last day of 1859, was £239,145.1s.3d. The total amount received by subscriptions since the 24th August, 1857, is £433,417.5s.9d., to which must be added £20,319.19s.10d. accruing from interest on securities, and likewise £2,084.13s.10d. repaid by borrowers; so that, in point of fact, the Committee have had at their disposal a sum very little short of half a million sterling, or, to speak more exactly, £455,821.19s.5d. The difference between this grand total and the balance on hand is £216,676.18s.2d., which has been laid out in the following manner:—£137,286.18s.7d., including a donation of £2,000 to the Lawrence Asylum at Kussowlie, have been remitted to India; £71,450.8s.3d., inclusive of loans to the extent of £10,330.10s.6d. have been granted to persons in this country; and £7,939.11s.4d. expended on advertisements, salaries, stationery, printing, rent, office furniture, and sundries. By means of this outlay, donations have been granted to 57 officers, 143 widows, 41 orphans, 35 wives, and 81 relatives of officers; to 730 disabled soldiers, 636 widows, 831 orphans, and 172 relatives of soldiers; and to 111 civilians of all classes, 5 wives, 48 widows and orphans, and 13 relatives of civilians. Various sums of money have likewise been advanced to 36 officers and 28 relatives of officers, and to 16 civilians and 13 relatives of civilians. Of the orphans of soldiers and soldiers, 72 have been provided for at different institutions, and it has been resolved to continue to afford pecuniary assistance to the end of 1861, to 516 soldiers' widows, 342 male orphans, and 411 female orphans of soldiers, 60 widows, sisters, and mothers of deceased officers, 19 male orphans, and 20 female orphans of officers; besides 6d. a day for twelve months to 362 disabled soldiers, unless in the mean time they obtain remunerative employment.

The annual allowances to the foregoing parties, with the exception of the last, amount to £14,157. 0s. 2d., representing a capital of £217,452. 19s. 3d., to which must be added £45,972. 12s. 8d., for the purpose of making an annual allowance of £3,157. 10s. to 90 recipients of aid in Calcutta, Bombay, and Lahore. The total liabilities of the fund thus amount to £263,425. 11s. 11d., to be increased, however, by £16,485. 10s., in order to secure a suitable provision for the education of such orphan children as from their tender years have not yet come under the notice of the committee. We have, therefore, a gross aggregate of liabilities to the extent of £279,911. 1s. 11d., to meet which there is apparently a balance of no more than £239,145. 1s. 3d.—leaving a deficit of £40,766. 0s. 8d. Fortunately the case is not quite so bad, at least if the calculations of professed actuaries are at all to be depended upon. In the first place, there is still a balance remaining in the hands of the committees at Edinburgh, Calcutta, and Bombay, which raises the assets to £254,489. 8s. 11d. Then it may fairly be expected that some of the widows and female orphans will marry, and some may die, which two contingencies are estimated to reduce the liabilities by £29,609. 17s. 5d. Another sum of £7,565 is to be deducted because the Manchester Committee have taken upon themselves the payment of annuities to soldiers' widows and orphans residing in that city; and, moreover, it is confidently supposed that the amount of outstanding loans to sufferers, or £8,945. 16s. 3d., will be duly repaid. Thanks to these various additions and subtractions, the assets of the fund exceed its liabilities by £20,699. 0s. 8d. For this satisfactory state of affairs the first praise is, of course, due to the active benevolence of the British public, but scarcely inferior are the claims to the gratitude and admiration of all true Englishmen which might be put forth, did not their modesty restrain them, by the members of the general and local committees, and their various officers, whether chairmen or secretaries. Honour to whom honour is due, and these gentlemen are certainly entitled to infinite credit for their disinterested and unwearyed exertions in behalf of their distressed and suffering compatriots.

TEA CULTIVATION IN ASSAM.

SOME interesting papers on the subject of the cultivation of the tea plant in the province of Assam having been communicated to the local press by the Government of Bengal, we shall endeavour, according to our usual practice, to lay the tenor of their contents before our readers.

The first report is from Captain E. A. Rowlatt, Collector of Kamroop, from which we learn that, although 12,207 acres of land had been granted away for the purpose of tea cultivation in that district, no more than 297 acres had been reclaimed up to October, 1859, yielding a produce of 6,160 lbs. It being at first supposed that the tea-plant would not thrive in Lower Assam, only a few experiments on a small scale were instituted on the low hills round Gowhatty, until within the last three years, but since 1857 a considerable tract of land has been brought under cultivation. The chief drawback to be encountered by the planters is the scarcity of labour, a disadvantage which Captain Rowlatt proposes to remedy, contrary to all the teachings of political economy, by raising the Government assessment. If the Assamese, he contends, were called upon to pay a higher rate for their lands they would be compelled to become more industrious. The common crops would then become unprofitable, and recourse would necessarily be had to other modes of livelihood. Some would take to domestic service, others would seek employment in the tea-plantations, while others again would apply themselves to different kinds of handicraft. Colonel Jenkins, however, the Governor-general's Agent, effectually exposes the fallacy of his subordinate's reasonings. The indolence of the inhabitants he ascribes to the natural fertility of the soil, to the abundance of land, which enables every man to have a small farm of his own, and to their simple habits. The consequence of an enhancement of the land-tax would probably be to throw land out of cultivation, as no one would then grow more than he required for the absolute wants of his family, and the desire for foreign luxuries, and especially for smart English cottons and cloths, which is now steadily gaining ground, would inevitably be suppressed. As to the chance of their betaking themselves to trade, or mechanical arts, it must be remembered that the existence of caste is fatal to any such movement. The genuine Assamese population having long since been converted to Hindooism, it has been found necessary to import washermen, curers of leather, makers of shoes, weavers, oil-pressers, and others. Besides, as tea-planting is avowedly a profitable speculation, it is unreasonable to ask Government to distress the people in order to provide labour for those who commit the error of increasing their plantations more rapidly than is justified by the natural resources of the province. Hired labour, until quite recently, has been held unworthy of freemen, and even now the Cacharees, who have never been converted to Hindooism, will alone accept of employment at a distance from their homes. Captain Rowlatt further suggests that the indigenous growth of opium should be prohibited, and the present excessive use of that pernicious drug in every way discouraged. If the Assamese were compelled to purchase it as required, instead of growing it at pleasure in their own gardens, the men would give themselves up to its enjoyment less frequently, while the women and children would be almost totally rescued from the fatal indulgence. In this respect the Collector of Kamroop is supported by his brother officers in Assam, and by the planters generally, but a fear is entertained that the Government will content themselves with levying an excise duty.

Another suggestion made by Captain Rowlatt is warmly seconded by the other local officers. It is, that the planters be permitted to redeem the land rent, and Captain Bivar, Principal Assistant Commissioner, Luckimpore, fixes the rate of redemption at Rs. 2½ per acre, in plots of not less than five hundred acres at a time. At present the tenure of land is in this wise. Grants of waste land are assigned on lease for ninety-nine years. One-fourth of the grant is free in perpetuity, being supposed to be occupied by houses and other tenements, tanks, roads, &c. The remaining three-fourths pay no rent for fifteen years; for the next ten years the tax is 3 annas per acre, and for the following seventy-four years, 6 annas. It is likewise stipulated, on penalty of forfeiture of grant, that one-eighth be rendered fit for cultivation by the end of the fifth year, one-fourth by the end of the tenth, one half by the twentieth, and three-fourths by the thirtieth. It is not denied that these terms are tolerably liberal, but it is argued that greater encouragement would be given to European immigration if planters were allowed to settle in fee simple. Up to the 8th October, 1859, the quantity of land in the Luckimpore district taken up for tea cultivation was 14,038 acres, of which only 1,700 acres were planted, yielding, however, 282,000 lbs., at the average price of six annas per lb.—the entire produce being, therefore, worth Rs. 105,750. The price of coolie labour, which previous to the operations of the planters was only Rs. 2½ to Rs. 3 a month, now ranges from Rs. 4 to Rs. 4½; and as women and children are employed in leaf-picking, as well as the men in more laborious work, the ryots are becoming more easy in their circumstances, and comfort and plenty are taking the place of poverty and want. Labour, however, is scarce, owing to the thinness of the population, which does not exceed 100,000 souls for 6,000 square miles. To obviate this difficulty, Captain Bivar recommends that a Public Works Corps should be raised by Government in Bengal, and sent into Assam for the purpose of constructing roads, bridges, and government buildings, so as to set free that portion of the population which is now engaged in such operations. He insists, moreover, upon the necessity of maintaining a regular steam communication between Calcutta and Dibrrooghur, and he mentions that a private company, styling themselves the "Dacca and Assam Steam Navigation Company," was then being organised. In conclusion, it is stated that the quantity of waste land still available for tea cultivation might be set down at 228,634 acres.

There is also a brief report from Captain Comber, Principal Assistant Commissioner of Durrung, but in that Division only 375 acres have yet been fully reclaimed, the produce of which in 1859 amounted to 22,400 lbs. The tea planters there complain, as the indigo planters have done elsewhere, that the coolies are in the habit of demanding advances on their labour, and of decamping before their agreement is half fulfilled. To appeal to the Courts is a tedious, expensive, and vexatious process, nor is it an easy matter to arrest an absconding labourer. However, as Colonel Jenkins remarks, this loss and annoyance may be avoided by declining to make any advances.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE MINISTERIAL SCHEME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Having disposed in my former letters of the subject of the local European force in India, I come to the consideration of a point of not less importance—I mean that of the native army. Sir Charles Wood, in the debate of the 13th June, stated "that the amalgamation of the local Europeans with the Queen's army would not necessarily cause a change in the Native army. At present the officers were principally engaged in what were called staff appointments. With regard to the civil employments he thought the supply from the army was valuable, but if the efficiency of the army was to be destroyed by taking them, he thought it desirable, though not an easy task, to find substitutes." The task, so far from difficult, is simple and easy. We have in the Royal Artillery an example, which, if carried out in India, would meet the object. In that corps, I believe, it is usual whenever an officer is taken away from his regiment for other duty, to put him on the supernumerary list, and a promotion is made in his stead, so as to keep the number of regimental officers complete. When it comes to his turn for promotion (for the Royal artillery rise by gradation as in the Indian service, and not by purchase) he has the option of rejoining the regiment and giving up his other employment, or of suffering the promotion to pass him, from which time he is considered as unattached, and his further promotion ceases.

The formation of a staff corps of such unattached officers has been over and over again suggested by some of the most competent officers in the India service, but difficulties were pointed out by others, while the real obstacle to its adoption was the expense of keeping corps complete, and hence, no doubt, the relaxation of discipline occasionally occurred, but no where to such a degree as in the Bengal native army many years previously to the mutiny.* It will scarcely be believed that in 1857, out of 1,831 officers of infantry composing the strength of seventy-four regiments in Bengal, no fewer than 1,024 were absent or not available for regimental duty, of which number 176 ensignies were vacant, and the remaining officers were employed either on staff duty or in some civil capacity, or attached to what were denominated irregular corps of cavalry and infantry, organised on the plan of the armies of the native princes. So that the best and most experienced officers were away, leaving the least useful and the junior with their regiments. This was more particularly the case in the Bengal army than in those of the other Presidencies. As a sample, I find Sir Charles James Napier writing from Scinde, that he had just inspected the 8th Regiment of Native Infantry, which had lately joined his force, when he found only three European officers present with the corps, of whom two had not been dismissed drill. It has been occasionally said by officers of the Queen's service and of local European regiments, that the sepoys did not do their duty in battle. No complaint of this nature has been made by Queen's officers commanding the combined forces; and it may be doubted whether any troops in the world would have behaved better than our native soldiers under the unfavourable circumstances in which they have been placed. The exploits of sepoy regiments unsupported by Europeans would, if all recounted, fill volumes. Nothing could exceed the devotion of the Madras Native Infantry and a handful of Bengal cavalry and infantry in the battle of Sitabuldy, in Dec., 1817, nor that of the 1st Bombay Grenadiers, under Captain Stannton, in the defence of the open village of Corygaum, on the 31st of December of the same year. In the latter case the native regt., 600 strong, supported by twenty-four European artillerymen, and about 300 irregular horse, sustained during a whole day the attack of 5,000 of the Peshwa's infantry, on which occasion there were only six officers present—one commanding the artillery and one the irregular cavalry, four only being present with the weak native grenadiers. The loss sustained on both sides tells its own story. Of the six officers four were either killed or wounded; of the twenty-four European artillerymen only four escaped. The infantry lost 154 out of 500, and the cavalry who fought on foot in the streets with short weapons lost 100 out of 300. The enemy were eventually driven out of the village of which they were once partly in possession, and confessed to the loss of 500 men. I know of no instance on record of native troops hanging back when led by their own European officers in support of European soldiers. Sir Charles Wood says, indeed, that the measure he proposes would not necessarily cause a change in the native army, while the several plans he afterwards recommends would tend altogether to alter the character of the regular forces. It is suggested that the internal economy of regiments should be conducted by native instead of European officers, of which latter class there should only be three or four as commandant and staff; and that these should be derived from European regiments drafted into a staff corps without men. A plan not very dissimilar to this has been suggested by the late Brigadier General John Jacob.

In that plan the Brigadier suggests that all the junior officers for the Indian army should be educated at a military college in England on the principle of the Russian army, between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, for at least two, and not longer than four years. Here they would learn all the duties of the private soldier, and non-commissioned grade. The course of education at the college to include full instruction in mechanical and physical science generally, and in political economy, to which might be added some knowledge of common law and the elements of the languages of the part of the country wherein they may be destined to be employed. Such a course of education it is anticipated would prepare officers of the Indian army for civil employment, according to their experience and qualifications: the present civil service gradually to cease. The same writer suggests that the European officers selected for a regiment in the native army should consist of a colonel, a lieutenant-colonel, and two captains as staff. He does not provide for native officers of companies or troops otherwise than by selection of the commandants, the latter to have full magisterial authority over all ranks of natives in their regiments, soldiers and followers. Such power necessarily supersedes the articles of war for native troops, which he recommends should be abolished. The further details of the Brigadier's plan will be found in a work entitled, "Tracts on the Native Army of India," by Brigadier-General John Jacob, C.B.; reprinted by Smith, Elder, and Co., 65, Cornhill. It is a very remarkable collection of the Brigadier's opinions on the native soldiery.

Brigadier Jacob received his education for the Artillery at Addiscombe, and proceeded to India in 1828. He joined the European Artillery, and continued with it for seven years. He then commanded a detachment of Native Artillery for three years. He was subsequently employed in a civil capacity, but shortly after took the field, and served for three years longer in the Artillery, and was placed in command of the Scinde Brigade in 1841, in which situation he died. So that before he joined this body of horse he had done regimental duty thirteen years, the first half of which with a local European corps, and the last half with natives in the regular army, and for the most part in the field. To adopt this plan of Brigadier Jacob's would be to return to the system of the last century in India, and virtually to acknowledge that the experience of the past sixty-four years had taught us that the organisation carried out, at the recommendation of the Marquis Cornwallis, in 1796, a distinguished and experienced soldier, both in America and in India, as well as a great statesman, was altogether defective. The object of the organisation was to supersede the authority of the Native officers, and to substitute European officers in their place. The real defect of the plan, however, was that it was only a half measure, and like all half measures it was sure to fail in the end. Its two principal defects were that it retained the native officers, but deprived them of their authority, their patronage, and their emoluments, which precluded the same class of respectable native gentry from entering our service as before, and it replaced them by only half the number of European officers allotted to regiments of the same strength in other parts of the world.

The arrangement did not provide for the absence of regimental officers otherwise employed, by filling up vacancies as they occurred. Hence the insufficiency in point of numbers, and inefficiency in point of qualifications, for the regular native service. What is now required is an adequate complement of officers for the regimental duty in native corps. The small number of Europeans recommended by Brigadier Jacob, and adopted by Sir Charles Wood, only provides for a general supervision, while the real internal economy and conduct of regimental detail must be left to native officers. I have, I think, elsewhere shown that officers, to be respected and to ensure obedience from the inferior ranks, must come from a class of society who are born to command the lower orders. An army consisting of the upper classes only would be prone to disobedience, and become republican; while one composed wholly of the lower classes only would be in a constant state of insubordination. This latter case has been exemplified in the Bengal army, wherein men rose in virtue of a regulation, by right, from the inferior to the higher grade of native officer, without an adequate number of well-instructed Europeans. The suggestions of Brigadier Jacob involves the necessity of confiding the command of companies and troops to native officers, of whom he has found a number in the Scinde Horse sufficiently respectable to take their place as such. It is certain that many of the irregular corps did not join in the late insurrection, but, on the contrary, did good service. Would it be wise, however, to place the entire control of our native army (which never can be fewer than 200,000 men to keep in subjection, as Lord Stanley observes, 180,000,000 people) in the hands of native officers, for whom Sir C. Wood proposes to provide as Lord Canning has done for the rebellious talookdars of Oude? I speak not in disparagement of Lord Canning's policy, but we should reflect that it is one thing to establish a landed gentry and another to put it in their power to seduce a whole army. Sir Charles Wood anticipates providing European commandants and staff for our native army out of a staff corps to be established by selections from European regiments. I have little doubt that in the course of time a higher class of natives, more especially Mahomedans, would serve in our native regiments, but I very much doubt whether a European regiment is a fit school to train officers for the delicate task of commanding troops, organised as it is proposed our future native army should be. We have several instances of European officers who have lost their lives in attempting to put down partial mutinies in these corps, the only two derived from the Royal Army (whose names I can at present recall to mind), suffered from the violence of their men, one of whom lost his life, and the other, though severely cut in many places, recovered. In the year 1834, four years before the Bengal insurrection, Major Jacob writes, p. 96, in the Extracts.—"I deny the probability of the Sepoys mutinying while their officers are alive and do their duty. Men are not suddenly most vicious; and would never mutiny for trifles, when they know that the First Step must be that which even they know and feel to be a detestable crime—the murder of their officers. Let the officers have calmly made up their minds to be obeyed or be killed, and there would be little disobedience." "To show they were in earnest, let the first man guilty of open mutiny be shot on the spot by his commanding officer, and the thing would spread no further; let there be no talking or reasoning with the offenders on such occasions." The mutiny of the Bengal army has proved to us that the natives of India are the most easily seduced from their duty into acts of madness by any apprehended encroachments on their religion, their prejudices, or their assumed rights. We have seen that they are reckless of their lives from a conviction of predestination, and that they must be governed by justice and conciliation, combined with firmness. Brigadier Jacob says that "The natives of India are quite incapable of self-government." And yet the whole social system of the Hindus, whether of local municipalities, of mercantile guilds, or of castes, exhibits an organization of self-government not exceeded by any people in the world.

The rules he has laid down for controlling the native armies of India are well calculated for a body of Bashi Bazouks, but these bands have never been distinguished for their subordination either in Turkey or in Egypt. The late Bengal army assumed the character of the Prætorian guards of Rome, and the Jannizaries of Constantinople.

The error we are likely to fall into in this reorganization of the native army is that of applying the same rules to different nations under different circumstances. What may answer with the Pathans West of the Indus, the Sikhs in the Punjab, the Goorkas of the Himalayas, or the people of the Cis Sutlej States, would not answer in other parts where the cases differ. In the instances I have quoted the military classes have lands and estates in our own territory, which would be a great hold upon them in case of revolt. The Sikhs too, have not lost their discipline, nor are the officers extinct of their old army under Runjeet Sing's rule. I am not prepared to say how far it might be politic to extend this system to Oude and the N. W. Provinces.

There has always been a prejudice against the peasantry of lower Bengal as soldiers, because of its containing none of those military classes which exist in the upper provinces; but I have no doubt with a fair proportion of European officers, abundant good soldiers might be raised in that province among the Hindoo peasantry and the aboriginal races, such as have formed the provincial battalions, which for the most part entertain no dislike to Europeans or to their habits. The Presidency of Madras, containing a population of 22,000,000, affords an abundant supply of good soldiers from the lower classes of Hindus and aborigines, who do not enter the service with any view to preferment as officers. That class has worn itself out, and the native officers derived from the lower orders have no title to rank higher than warrant officers. The pay they receive is adequate to their services as such, but is not sufficient to induce men of family respectability to enlist. The discipline of the Madras army is vested solely in the European regimental officers, who are insufficient to perform their duty properly, or to support the authority of the commanding officer. The remedy is simply to keep the strength of regimental officers complete, by filling up vacancies as they are removed for other duties, on the principle before alluded to of the royal artillery. The present defect in the Madras army is the too large portion of Mahomedans in all its branches, and the preference accorded to them in proportion to the Hindus. The Mahomedans of the Deccan are there, as everywhere else, religious bigots and zealots; they have still traditions and recollections of their previous predominant power in the Governments of the Nizam, Tippu Sultan, and the Nabobs of Carnul, Cuddapah, and Arcot, all of which, excepting the former, have fallen before our arms. The Mahomedans in the Madras army (though brave and energetic soldiers) form a very dangerous portion of the Madras army. In a letter addressed to the Marquis of Tweeddale on the state of that portion of our force in India as in 1842, the author has put forth many opinions which have also occurred to the late Sir H. M. Lawrence, and were published by him in 1856. The letter alluded to was republished, with notes, after the Bengal mutiny in 1857. The essays of Sir H. M. Lawrence embrace almost all that can be said on the subject of the Indian army reform. The security that the Madras army afforded to the British Government against mutiny arises out of several causes. In the first place, there are few native officers who have a right, from their position, to rise higher in the social scale than that which their military position assigns to them. Secondly, they are raised in particular localities within the Madras territories, and by their registration; their faculties, and property, could easily be traced, and, if necessary, be secured. Thirdly, they seldom move (excepting on field service) without their families, which must always be a restraint on men whose future is so intimately connected with their good conduct. They are composed of all castes, and no distinction is recognised by the officers. This army has ever been ready to serve with their officers in every part of Asia where they were required. The Madras sappers and miners, composed, for the most part, of the lowest of classes, have been remarkable as good soldiers in the Indian islands, in Burmah, in China, in Afghanistan, in Scinde, and in Persia. Their colours are covered with emblems of their ubiquitous services. The old Bombay army, recruited from much the same classes as those of Madras, with but few Mahomedans, and those derived from provinces which had been subjected to the Mahratta yoke, having few if any prejudices against Europeans, has on the whole been the most faithful of any portion of our gigantic native force. The native officers are for the most part men without pretensions, and are submissive to their European officers, and constitute a valuable body of non-commissioned or properly warrant officers, but in the absence of their European officers they possess no authority beyond that of non-commissioned. The comparatively recent introduction of sepoys from the Oude and North-Western Provinces has in some measure deteriorated from the high qualities of the old Bombay army by an occasional assumption of caste superiority, and in some few instances a mutinous spirit displayed itself in the late troubles; but which, by the large admixture of Mahrattas, and others from the Deccan, was promptly revealed, and as promptly suppressed. The Bombay army, like that of Madras, carries its families along with it, and is alike governed by its European officers, without reference or distinction of caste. It is always ready to serve where it is ordered, and has maintained the highest reputation for loyalty and good conduct wherever it has been employed.

The province of Scinde, under a separate lieutenant governor in direct subordination to the Bombay Presidency, has its local corps of Belooch Mahomedans, and, as long as it remains a part of the Bombay Presidency, ought to be employed away from home, and their place supplied by Bombay corps.

Deprecating as I do the employment of native officers in lieu of Europeans in our old provinces, I trust that, whatever may be the condition of the new Bengal army, those of Madras and Bombay will not be touched excepting in filling up regimental vacancies of European officers as they occur.

In conclusion, although agreeing with almost everything else which the late Sir H. M. Lawrence has said on the subject of the Indian army, I cannot give my assent to the proposition of raising native corps of separate castes. I hold that the amalgamation of all castes in the Madras and Bombay regiments is a great safeguard against combination and sedition. The practice at one time prevailed in the British army when the four nations of the United Kingdom had each its national regiments, in which all others were excluded. This plan was found to be inexpedient and inconvenient, to say the least of it, and those nationalities are no longer tolerated. The British regiments now contain men of all the four nations, and the jealousies and feuds which formerly occurred do not now occur.

MADRAS OFFICERS IN THE OLDEN TIME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have read with deep regret the severe (I suppose I must not use a stronger word) censure that the present Commander-in-Chief in India, Sir Hugh Rose, has, in his private letters, passed on the officers of the Indian army. It is, however, fortunate, after the flaming Bombay Order, that his real sentiments should be known. All I can say is, that "in the olden time" a very different spirit prevailed, and if you will allow me space in your valuable columns for a few instances, I will be as brief as I can.

Sixty years ago, Colonel Agnew, then adjutant-general of the Madras army, volunteered his services to take the field against the rebellious Polygars, a service which, if it did not promise much glory, was attended with no small danger, the enemy picking the officers off from their cover in the thick jungle. In this same campaign, Lieut. James Grant, adjutant of the Body-Guard, volunteered to take a squadron of that corps to the field, and was severely wounded by a spear. In 1803, Capt. Graham, then collector in the Barahneaul, joined his corps, the 2nd N.I., and accompanied it in the Mahratta war. On the day of the battle of Assaye, Capt. Mackay, who held a staff appointment, requested to join his corps, the 4th native cavalry, but General Wellesley refused. The aide-de-camp returned with a message from Capt. Mackay, "that he placed his staff appointment in the general's hands, but that he must join his corps." The Duke replied, with a smile, "What the d—l can one do with such a fellow!" In the decisive charge which was made by the glorious old 19th light dragoons, the 4th cavalry, led by the gallant Major Floyer, charged side by side with the dragoons, and in that charge Captain Mackay was killed. The Duke said "he was a true soldier."

There is an officer still living, General Welsby, who, though holding staff appointment, was never absent from his corps on service. In 1817, Sir Thomas Munro, and in 1819, Sir John Malcolm, then holding high civil appointments, were actively employed in the field. I could multiply instances of similar ardour in their profession on the part of many of our old officers, the ones I have named being such as first occurred to me without any data to refer to. I have principally referred to the Madras army as the one I am best acquainted with. But, I believe, both in the Bengal and Bombay armies plenty of similar cases might be found, Sir D. Ochterlony for one.

It is singular that if such an unmilitary feeling as Sir H. Rose asserts, prevails amongst Indian officers, that not so very long ago an officer holding a civil appointment, who did not accompany his regiment on foreign service, was very coldly looked upon by his brother officers. I would not have alluded to this, from an unwillingness to cause pain to an individual, but that it is a well-known fact, and is, I think, the best proof that can be given that Sir H. Rose is mistaken in the very unfavourable opinion he has expressed of the Indian service. If it was a matter of everyday occurrence that officers holding staff employment did not join their corps when on active service, surely the individual I have alluded to would not have been marked by the displeasure and disapproval of his brethren for the conduct he pursued?

The Indian army appears to be doomed to perish, but I trust it will not fall unhonoured and unlamented. After the noble speech of Lord Stanley, the other night, supported so well by General Evans, and after the sentiments expressed by Lord Ellenborough, Sir H. Wilmoughby and others, it is evident that the Indian officers are not without friends on both sides of the House. If there is a great national object to be gained, then, of course, the interests of individuals cannot for a moment be put in competition; but if, as Sir De Lacy Evans hinted, "It was generally thought that some higher influence had been brought to bear, to induce the Government to depart from the opinions which they had previously expressed upon the subject," then the question assumes a totally different aspect.—Your most obedient servant.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 28.

EUROPEAN FORCES: INDIA.

On the order for the second reading of the European Forces (India) Bill,

Mr. A. MILLS prefaced a statement of his reasons for objecting to the measure by claiming a right, as a civilian, to express an opinion upon this question, which, though a military one, was of a complicated nature, and deeply affected Imperial interests—namely, whether we should annihilate an ancient and valuable military machinery, no other being substituted in its place? He argued against the abolition of a local European army in India upon financial, sanitary, and political grounds; and with reference to the mutiny among the local force, upon which those who advocated the change based their arguments, he appealed to the testimony borne by distinguished officers to the gallantry and discipline of that force, and to the services it had rendered in the Sepoy rebellion. Averse as he was from the change itself, he complained far more, he said, of the mode in which it was proposed to be effected. Was it to be tolerated he asked, that the Secretary of State for India, after he had monopolised the decision of this important question, should withdraw from the House of Commons the consideration of the scheme to be substituted for the present, and refer it to a committee or a commission? What security had the House that, if the committee was an independent one, it might not decide by a bare majority, or that its report would be adopted? If not independent, Parliament would be deprived of its constitutional prerogative. He moved to defer the second reading of the Bill for three months.

This amendment was seconded by Sir E. COLEBROOKE, who reinforced the objections offered by Mr. Mills by urging the large amount of military patronage which the change would transfer to the home authorities, and with regard to the opinions of competent witnesses upon the whole question, that the House would be legislating in a great degree in the dark. He contended that the Government had not laid sufficient grounds for this important change, which would destroy the local character of the European force in India and deprive the Indian Government of a large portion of the power which it possessed over the appointment of local commanders.

Mr. T. G. BARING defended Sir C. Wood against the charge of not having consulted the Council of India in this matter, which, he observed, was a mere technical objection, the opinions of the members of the Council being known and before the House. He justified, likewise, the manner in which this question had been brought under the consideration of Parliament, and then proceeded to discuss in detail the objections to the abolition of a local European force in India, insisting that there would not be the slightest difference in training and education for the Indian service between the officers of the local force and those of the line. The plan chalked out by Sir C. Wood, it was said, would interfere with the power of the Governor-general of India; but he denied the force of this objection, and denied also that the change would augment the patronage of the Horse Guards. An opinion had been attributed to Lord Cornwallis, in favour of a local force of Europeans in India; but Lord Cornwallis, in 1794, had actually submitted a plan for the amalgamation of the two forces. He called upon the House to reject the amendment.

Mr. BAILLIE complained that the House should be called upon to decide this question when it was admitted by the Government that they had not decided upon the details of the plan of amalgamation they proposed to carry out. In considering this question as regarded the interests of our Indian Empire, he expressed his belief, founded upon reasons which he explained, that the expense attending the proposed change had been very much understated by Sir C. Wood; and he suggested that, if the Bill passed, the War-office would deal with a large amount of Indian revenue, which would be exempt from the check of a Parliamentary revision, and his opinion was that the War-office was one of the worst managed departments in the public service. He asked whether the Government had calculated the number of men to be maintained in this country for the relief of the corps in India and the colonies. He advised the House to reject this Bill, in order that it might have before it a Bill containing a distinct plan of amalgamation.

Sir H. VERNEY, in arguing for the maintenance of a local army, dwelt upon the contrast between the conduct of the Queen's officers and those of the local army towards the natives of India, the latter treating them with most consideration; and much depended, he remarked, upon this conduct.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE was of opinion that, in a question of high policy like this, the opinions of civilians were entitled to more weight than those of military men, whose reasons for doing away with the local European force were founded upon a transaction which had been exaggerated into a mutiny. He contended that the men had preferred only just and proper claims, and that they had never gone beyond insubordination. If India was to be held by European troops, in his opinion 80,000 would not do, and there must be an annual relief of 10,000 men. Great improvements might be made, and the condition of the men ameliorated, without doing away with the local army altogether, and incurring the heavy drain of human life which would be the consequence. He opposed the Bill.

Mr. KINNAIRD likewise spoke in opposition to the Bill. He thought the Council for India had not been treated in the way the House intended, the question not having been submitted to their judgment collectively till the Cabinet had decided upon it.

Mr. VANSITTART thought that, as the local European army in India was partly extinct, the present moment was singularly favourable to the consideration of the question whether it was not desirable to amalgamate the two armies, which would remove causes of jealousy and discontent. He cordially supported the second reading of the Bill.

Sir W. RUSSELL likewise supported the Bill. The chief objection to a local army—for he laid no stress upon the mutiny—was the almost impossibility, in a climate like India, of maintaining a high state of discipline. All feelings of jealousy between the two armies would be removed by their fusion, and he did not see why there should be more difficulty in obtaining officers for the Queen's army in India than for the Company's European force. If the native army were reduced, as he strongly recommended, an army of 50,000 Europeans would be sufficient.

Sir W. FARQUHAR, after commenting upon Sir C. Wood's change of opinion regarding this question, reviewed the objections he had alleged against a local European force in India, and appealed to the despatch of Lord Canning, who, with the advantage of knowing the sentiments of men of great local experience, condemned the course proposed by the Government.

Colonel P. HERBERT supported the Bill. He asked what would have been the position of the Indian Government, if in the late military strike, which he called a mutiny, the whole or a large part of the army had consisted of local troops. In the royal army, if insubordination broke out in a regiment, it could be removed from India.

Mr. BUXTON trusted that the House would remember that the Council of India were strongly against the scheme of the Government, as well as the Council of Calcutta, including Mr. Wilson; that it had been condemned by Lord Ellenborough, Lord Canning, and Sir John Lawrence; that the late Government had been in favour of a local force, and the present Government had been of the same opinion last year. He argued, upon sanitary, financial, and other grounds, in opposition to the Bill.

Mr. HORSMAN observed, that, no doubt, the question as to the expediency of maintaining a local European army was very important, and one on which authorities were very much divided. But there were two preliminary questions—whether the House was fairly treated in not having before it all the necessary information, and whether it was prepared to adopt a course so novel of carrying out so great a change, involving questions of principle and details, not by a well-considered legislative Act, but by an abstract resolution, the beginning and end of all Parliamentary proceedings upon a measure that would transfer to the Horse Guards a large amount of patronage and revolutionise the Government of India. In examining the reasons assigned by Sir C. Wood for a change of policy upon this question, connected with the mutiny, he charged him with disingenuousness, and with abusing the confidence of the House. He stated, of his own knowledge, and pledged himself to prove, that there were documents on the subject produced as complete, which were only extracts, important passages having been taken out of them. He complained of details of the Government scheme which had been kept back, but which were of great constitutional importance. There was the question of patronage, of the influence, power, and authority that would be given to the military department, and there was the question of expense. These were points which involved the question whether there should be one supreme head or a double Government in India, and the House was simply asked to repeal an Act of Parliament, without any plan, and against the unanimous protest of the Council of India.

Mr. S. HERBERT, in reply to Mr. Horsman, denied that the Government had withheld information, and that the House was asked to adopt an abstract resolution; the subject before the House was a Bill. He vindicated Sir C. Wood and the Horse Guards against the dark surmises of Mr. Horsman, declaring that there was no intention whatever of altering the relations between the Horse Guards and the Governor-general of India. With respect to the question of a local army, he confessed that he had had great difficulty in arriving at a conclusion; his bias had been in favour of a local army; but he had at length become convinced that the measure of the Government afforded a satisfactory solution of the question. One of the reasons which had swayed his opinion, as it had materially influenced that of Lord Clyde, was the fact of the mutiny in the local corps. He discussed the arguments and opinions for and against the maintenance of a local European force, and upon the sanitary part of the question and acclimatization he cited the evidence of scientific men, showing the destructive effects of long exposure to a tropical climate. He replied to the objection of Mr. Horsman, founded upon an apprehension that the Horse Guards was going to take all the Indian patronage, and gave explanations to show that the Horse Guards would not obtain the vast amount of patronage he supposed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 29.

EUROPEAN FORCES: INDIA.

In replying to a question put by Colonel SYKES, Sir C. Wood explained the cause of the delay in printing the papers relating to the local European force in India, which was commented upon the preceding night. He stated that the papers, which were voluminous, had been laid on the table and ordered to be printed in March, but they had been sent back to the military secretary for revision; that 500 pages had been printed, 300 remaining to be printed, which would be done without further delay.

On the motion for adjournment till Monday, Lord PALMERSTON proposed that the adjourned debate on the second reading of the European Forces (India) Bill, which was the first order of the day, should be postponed till Monday, when the greater part of the papers would be in the hands of members, upon the understanding that the committee on the Bill should be deferred till all were printed.

Mr. HORSMAN assented to this suggestion. He remarked that, although Sir C. Wood had, the preceding night, attributed the delay of the papers to the printer, it now appeared that they were at the time in the hands of a subordinate of his own department. He trusted, he added, that the papers when delivered would be the real papers asked for.

Mr. A. MILLS hoped that the minutes of the members of the Council would be among the papers.

Sir C. WOOD, advertent to the charge made by Mr. Horsman on the preceding night, that he (Sir Charles) had suppressed the papers in question, and deprived the House of necessary information, declared that he knew nothing about the papers after they had been laid upon the table of the House; that they had not been kept back by any act of his, direct or indirect: and that the charge was totally unfounded. With respect to another charge, of garbling papers, he stated that the extracts were made from private letters and confidential memoranda, passages in which, some of them calculated to give pain to individuals, he had thought were not proper to be published, and he had expunged them.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA.

Lord SHAFTESBURY, Lord ELLENBOROUGH, Lord HARRIS, and Lord DEEBY, entreated the Duke of MARLBOROUGH to postpone the motion of which he had given notice, in regard to the exclusion by authority of the word of God from the course of education afforded by the Government colleges and schools in India.

The Duke of MARLBOROUGH declined to accede to the suggestion, as the number of petitions presented in favour of the motion and the interest manifested in it throughout the country would not justify him in doing so. In proceeding to support the resolution which he had put on the paper, he quoted at considerable length the rules and regulations excluding the Scriptures from the schools and colleges of India, and protested against the maintenance of the neutrality on which the present system was founded, as the prolonged continuance of it would render a change more difficult at any future period, and in the mean time increase the number of those brought under its baneful influence. He might be told that it would not be possible to alter the present system, as by so doing he would be acting in opposition to her Majesty's proclamation; but he contended that the adoption of such a plan as he advocated would not interfere in the slightest degree with the religious rites and worship of the natives. There was the most satisfactory evidence that the labours of the missionaries were appreciated by the natives, and if they could only be convinced of the sincerity of the British Government to promote Christianity, multitudes would gladly seize the opportunity of making themselves acquainted with the Scriptures. The introduction of the voluntary system would meet the object which he advocated, the attendance on the Bible classes being dependent on the will of the pupils and the permission of their parents. Such a system was not half so objectionable as that of grants in aid, which were nothing more than grants for the purpose of proselytizing, regarded with distrust by the natives, and full of peril to the Government of India.

Lord BROUGHAM said he felt it his painful duty to move the previous question, which was carried; consequently that of the Duke of Marlborough was lost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 2.

EUROPEAN FORCES: INDIA.

The adjourned debate on Mr. A. MILLS's amendment on the second reading of the European Forces (India) Bill, to defer the reading for six months, was resumed.

Mr. RICH observed that the question at issue was whether that organisation of the European army in India should be continued which had subsisted successfully almost from the time of our possessing a substantial power in that country, or the local force should be cashiered and superseded by her Majesty's troops of the line.

This radical change might be wise and necessary; but the question was a most important one, and the measure ought to be called for by considerations of magnitude, and justified by the opinions of the wisest statesmen and the deliberate judgment of the duly constituted authorities. But, on the contrary, the Governor-general of India and his Council were unanimous against the measure; so were the Council of the Secretary of State for India, and the late Cabinet had been opposed to the amalgamation of the local and the Queen's regular army. The whole weight of conviction was in favour of continuing a local force. Even the Secretary of State six months ago must have been hostile to the measure he now proposed. Mr. RICH discussed the objections to the scheme of amalgamation on the one hand, and those alleged against the maintenance of a local army on the other, insisting that the reasons for not recruiting this army were futile, and that an efficient regular force of 80,000 men could not be maintained in India without deteriorating the general body of the British army.

Mr. TORRENS considered that the weight of authority was in favour of a local force, and that the remains of that force now in India afforded a nucleus for recruiting a local army.

Sir DE LACY EVANS complained of the manner in which this important question had been brought before the House, without the necessary information. From the portion of the papers recently produced, the question, he said, wore in many respects quite another aspect, especially with reference to the opinions of Lord Clyde and Sir William Mansfield, and the insubordination of the local troops, who, he thought, had experienced hard measure. They had been imbued with the conviction that justice was on their side. The alleged foundation for this legislative measure was the bad conduct of these troops; but the papers hitherto furnished did not bear out the plea. The House had been led to believe that the whole of the local force had disappeared, and that, if continued, it must be re-created; but the remaining local troops numbered 17,000, and, in his opinion, so large a European army as 80,000 men was not required in India—that 50,000 or 60,000 would be sufficient. A most important point was the constitutional question—the Horse Guards question. He had no doubt that the prospect of a large amount of the military patronage had something to do with the change that had come over the Government. In conclusion, he observed that, if the measure itself were unexceptionable, the manner in which it had been introduced would justify the House in rejecting it. He moved that the debate be adjourned.

Mr. M. MILNES seconded this motion. The House, he said, was totally unable to decide this question at the present moment, and till it had a record of the opinions of the Indian Council he should assist in arresting the progress of the Bill. In its present condition, and except in cases of emergency, our Indian empire might be secured, he thought, mainly by a local force. The mutiny in that force furnished, in his opinion, an insufficient reason for abolishing it; the measure must rest upon the question whether it was necessary largely to increase the European force in India. He believed the object in view could be obtained by a well-organised and well-disciplined local force.

Colonel DUNNE argued that a scheme for the amalgamation of the two armies should be presented to the House in a complete shape.

Mr. AYRTON said now the papers were before the House, which put the subject in the most clear, concise, and full light, he could understand why Sir C. Wood had changed his opinion. It had never been understood that he was formally to consult his Council; he had obtained from them all the information he desired, but he had acted, as it was intended he should act, upon his own responsibility. The mode in which this measure was introduced had been objected to; there should be a perfect scheme, it was said; but it was unnecessary for the House to have all the details before it. Many objections to the proposed change were founded upon mere suppositions of some wrong going to be perpetrated. He justified the change; the conduct of the local troops, he contended, had been mutinous, and evidence of their indiscipline was upon record. The change would operate no injury to the officers; and as to the objection that officers could not be induced to remain in India, he insisted that they would remain or return according to the inducements held out to them. He believed that if the present system of a local service and a general service were to go on for some years, the result would be most injurious to the condition of the local officers, and that the proposed change would conduce to their general interests. The bugbear of the Horse Guards had been conjured up; but he did not believe in the power of the Horse Guards to do all the mischief that was supposed. It was very much at the command of the Secretary of State for War, and in India, so far from its power being enhanced, it would rather be diminished. He believed that the maintenance of a local force would raise up local prejudices and local views, which would become paramount to other considerations.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR, after replying to the concluding remark of Mr. Ayrton, explained the reasons, including the mutilated state of some of the papers, why, in his opinion, the House should not be then asked for a vote on this question. His great objection to the Bill, he said, was that it really transferred the government of India from Calcutta to London and to the Horse Guards, in diametrical opposition to the opinions of the highest Indian authorities. The patronage of the Horse Guards must be increased by the change, and the House ought to know what the increase would be, and the extent of the limitation to be put upon the Governor-general's power. If the arguments for and against a local army were equally balanced, the wisest course was to leave things as they were.

Mr. GREGSON observed that the conflict of authorities and of opinions upon this question rendered it difficult to come to any conclusion. Upon the whole, he thought the two armies ought to be amalgamated, but he hoped that inducements would be held out to officers to remain in India and to acquire the native languages.

Sir F. SMITH remarked that the question involved three points—expense, efficiency, and discipline. There was nothing to show that any great economy would result from the abolition of the local army; on the contrary, the expense would be increased. With regard to efficiency, the local army sent into the field more men in proportion to its number than the Line, and as to discipline, he read testimony which showed that the reports of the indiscipline of the local army were unfounded. He hoped that, looking at the finances of India, means would be taken to keep down the European force.

Colonel SYKES, in opposition to the Bill, made a running commentary of considerable length upon the arguments put forward in its support, classed under nine or ten heads, urging various reasons in favour of a permanent European army in India, which, he said, might be recruited to 30,000 men without touching the resources of the Royal army.

Major PARKER, having been a Sepoy officer, thought the demand for European troops in India had been very much exaggerated, and that a smaller number than that proposed, quartered in healthy cantonments, would suffice.

After a few remarks from Colonel NORTH,

Sir C. WOOD maintained that the papers now produced had confirmed the statement he had made in introducing the Bill, and he proceeded to notice and answer the objections made in the course of the debate, vindicating himself from the charge of inconsistency founded upon his speech last year, and justifying his exclusion of certain passages in confidential letters included in the papers laid before the House. He had, he said, communicated fully and freely upon the subject of the local army with the members of the Council; but, the question being one which the Secretary of State could not decide himself, it had received the decision of the Cabinet, which had resolved that a Bill should be brought in. The matter had, therefore, not come before the Council in such a shape as to entitle them to record their opinions. Resolutions of the members had been placed in his hands, but the Cabinet had determined that they could not be received. He would, nevertheless, give the Council an opportunity to record them; and then they might be produced. He reiterated his statements as to the expense of the projected change, the supply of officers, and other disputed points, observing that he had not heard any arguments which had changed his opinion.

After a few words from Mr. A. MILLS, and Mr. HORSMAN, the motion to adjourn the debate was negatived, and the House having divided upon the amendment it was likewise negatived by 282 to 53.

The Bill was then read a second time.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,

PURE AND MIXED,

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

THIRD REPORT.

The time has now arrived when the General Committee desire to place before the public the result of the proceedings of the Fund during the year which concluded on the 31st Dec. last.

The presentation of this Report has been delayed under the impression that it might form part of the proceedings in course for the winding up of the Fund, consequent upon the Resolution of the Committee, that on the 31st December, 1859, the administration of temporary relief would cease. But the proceedings of the Sub-Committee appointed with that object being not yet concluded, the General Committee consider it advisable to delay no longer the publication of their Annual Report.

During the year 1859 the business of the Fund was conducted upon the same plan, and the Committees were guided by the same principles which are fully described in the Printed Report of 1858.

The several Committees have held Meetings as follows:—
General Committee 24
Relief ditto 39
Finance ditto 21
Ladies' ditto 7

The financial proceedings of the Fund, from the commencement, are detailed in the Balance Sheet, dated 31st December, 1859.

It is sufficient here to state that the Balance to the Credit of the Fund on the 31st December, 1858, was £265,766 2 9
And the Receipts, in 1859, from subscriptions, repayment of loans, and interest on securities, were 13,345 9 4

The Relief administered in 1859 was £29,501 13 3

Expenses of Management for 1859 1,461 17 7

Remittance to Calcutta in 1859 10,000 0 0 39,966 10 10

Balance, in England, to Credit on 31st Dec. 1859 £239,145 1 3

The correctness of the accounts was certified by the Auditors on the 31st January of the present year, and the Committee have received a certificate from the Chief Cashier of the Bank of England, that on the 31st December, 1859, the Bank held Stock to the credit of the Fund for £243,000.

REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE.

Mr. Forrest, having been called upon to prepare a classified report and valuation of allowances granted by the Committee to sufferers by the mutiny in India, with a view to ascertain whether the balance to the credit of the Fund, on the 31st December, 1859, is sufficient to meet its liabilities on the scale on which these allowances have been hitherto disbursed, has prepared the following statement, the correctness of which, in all its details, has been certified by Mr. J. Hill Williams, Vice-President of the Society of Actuaries of London.

The allowances have been calculated (some as annuities for life, others as annuities for shorter periods) upon the basis of the Three per Cent. Carlisle Life Tables; and the statement shows the several classes of recipients, the amount of annual payment to each class, and the capital required on the 31st December, 1859, to provide for these payments by quarterly instalments in advance, till the respective terms, as above specified, shall have expired.

The following detail describes the classes comprised in the above statement:—

Class I.—Widows of soldiers and seamen who lost their lives during the mutiny in India. They have no pension from the Government. The allowance from this Fund will cease on re-marriage, or in event of misconduct.

Class II.—Widows of ditto under the same circumstances, but who, having obtained employment, receive a smaller allowance.

Class III.—Sons of soldiers and seamen who lost their lives during the mutiny. They are with their mothers, and receive from this Fund a small weekly allowance for their maintenance and education until they complete their 13th year.

Class IV.—Orphan daughters of soldiers and seamen, under the same circumstances. They receive from this Fund a small weekly allowance until they complete their 15th year.

Class V.—Sons of soldiers and seamen who lost their lives during the mutiny. The mothers of these boys, for the most part, are also dead. The boys are to be maintained at educational institutions, at a cost of from £12 to £16 per annum, until they complete their 13th year.

Class VI.—Orphan daughters of soldiers and seamen, under the same circumstances. They have also, for the most part, lost their mothers. They are to be maintained at educational institutions until they complete their 15th year.

Class VII.—Widows, sisters, and mothers of officers, clergymen, merchants, and others who lost their lives during the mutiny. The means of each individual have been carefully considered. In event of their possessing no means of support, sufficient provision has been made, and the inadequate means of others have been supplemented sufficiently to make their income adequate to their position in life.

Class VIII.—Orphan sons of officers, clergymen, merchants, and others who lost their lives in consequence of the mutiny.

Their mothers are also dead. Their means have been considered, and have been supplemented from this Fund sufficiently to maintain and educate them till they complete their 18th year.

Class IX.—Orphan daughters of the same class of persons. They have also lost their mothers. To these, under similar circumstances, an allowance has been made, for maintenance and education, until they complete their 18th year; after which the allowance will be reduced by 25 per cent., and be then continued until their marriage or death.

Class X.—This class comprises persons of each of the foregoing classes, whose cases have been investigated by the Relief Committees at Calcutta, Bombay, and Lahore. The allowances have been recommended by those committees on the same principles which have guided the London Committee. Every case has been reported to the London Committee, and the allowance sanctioned by them.

On the 29th of March last, at a meeting of the Special Committee, the Hon. Secretaries were requested to make further calculations, with a view to the incorporating with the foregoing estimate of liabilities, such a provision as might seem desirable for the education or orphan children of all classes, who, from their early age or other circumstances, had not been yet under the notice of the Committee.

In pursuance of these instructions the Hon. Secretaries prepared the following Schedule B, which was approved and sanctioned by the Special and General Committees on the 15th and 22nd of May, 1860:—

SCHEDULE B.
Entirely Orphans.	Brought forward	£263,425 11 11
13 Sons of officers, outfit and allowance, as per statement	A	3,624 0 0
19 Daughters do.	B	2,177 10 0
23 Sons of soldiers, outfit at £4 each	C	92 0 0
29 Daughters do. at £5 each	C	145 0 0
9 Boys with relatives, outfit at £4 each	D	36 0 0
9 Girls do. at £5 each	D	45 0 0
With Mothers Living.
Orphans of Soldiers.
26 Boys at institutions, outfit at £4 each	C	104 0 0
42 Girls do. at £5 each	C	210 0 0
319 Boys with their mothers, at £4 each	E	1,272 0 0
359 Girls do. at £4 each	E	1,795 0 0
Orphans of Officers.
182 Boys whose mothers are living; for 45 of these boys an outfit is calculated at £50 each, and a small allowance for education		6,985 0 0
Total maximum value of the present liabilities of the Fund		£279,911 1 11

A and B comprise supplemental allowances, which the Committee have granted to provide for the education of orphans of officers and others (the mothers being also dead), included in Classes VIII. and IX. of the previous Schedule A. in addition to the sums therein detailed; these allowances will cease when the orphans shall have completed their seventeenth year. The boys for whom cadetships may probably be obtained will be provided with a sufficient outfit and passage to India. For each female orphan a small sum will be granted at the age of eighteen years, as an outfit in addition to their income referred to under Class IX., Schedule A.

C and D comprise the orphan sons and daughters of soldiers and seamen (the mothers being also dead), classified as Nos. V. and VI. of Schedule A, and for whom a small donation will be granted as outfit, to enable them to go into service when they shall complete the ages of thirteen and sixteen years respectively.

E comprises orphan children of soldiers (the mothers being still alive), and corresponds with Classes III. and IV. of Schedule A. For these also a small sum will be granted as outfit, at the ages of thirteen and sixteen years, when they will cease to be claimants on the Fund.

F provides a small addition to the income derived from the Bengal Military Orphan or other Funds, to the sons of officers and others who lost their lives during the Mutiny. Their mothers are still alive. This assistance is provided only in families in which the number of sons is more than one.

The following is an Estimate of the Assets of the Fund.

Balance at the disposal of the Central Committee, including the balances of the Committees at Edinburgh, Calcutta, and Bombay, on the 31st December, 1859	Brought forward	£254,489 8 11
Probable deductions from liabilities in Schedule A, on account of the re-marriage of widows and the marriage of female orphans, as estimated by the Actuaries		29,609 17 5
Value of annuities to soldiers' widows and orphans residing at Manchester, which, since the preparation of Schedule A, have been transferred to the Manchester Committee		7,565 0 0
Outstanding loans to sufferers by the Mutiny		8,945 16 3
Total assets		300,610 9 7
Estimated balance in favour of the Fund		£20,699 0 6

Although it thus appears that the Fund is at present on the safe side of its liabilities, and possesses a margin which is estimated at £20,699. 0s. 8d., the Committee wish to bring prominently to notice that this apparent surplus is only obtained by taking credit for the sum of £29,609. 17s. 5d., for which the Fund is still liable, but which it may not be called upon to pay in consequence of the possible re-marriage of widows, and the marriage of female orphans, upon either the certainty or the chances of which no correct calculations can be based.

The calculations contained in Schedules A and B having been considered by the Special and General Committees, have been adopted as the basis upon which all payments falling due during the years 1860 and 1861 will be defrayed.

The administration of temporary relief having terminated on 31st December last by a resolution of the General Committee, Major-general Tremenhare and Mr. T. Parry Woodcock have resigned their offices as honorary secretaries.

It remains, therefore, that the General Committee should determine, as suggested by the Special Committee on the 15th May, upon the permanent distribution of the Fund, as well as upon the executive necessary to carry it on.

T. Q. FINNIS, Chairman of the Sub-Committee.
27, Cannon-street, E.C., 1st June, 1860.

THE MORISONIAN SYSTEM OF MEDICINE.

1. The vital principle is in the blood.
2. Everything in the body is derived from the blood.
3. All constitutions are radically the same.
4. All diseases arise from impurity of the blood.
5. Pain and disease have the same origin.
6. From the intimate connection subsisting between mind and body, the health of the one must conduce to the serenity of the other.
7. Proper vegetable purgation is the only medicinal mode for effectually eradicating disease.
8. The discovery of a vegetable medicine was a desideratum.
9. This discovery was made by James Morison, the Hygienist, who also proclaimed "the medical liberty of the subject."

Morison's Medicines are sold by the appointed agents.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

—SKIN DISEASES, SCROFULA, SCURVY.—This class of complaints not only afflicts the individual, but is too frequently transmitted to the offspring, entailing on the innocent victims unmerited misery. How important, under such serious consequences, it becomes thoroughly to eradicate stumorous taints from the blood and glands must be as evident, as it is incumbent on all sufferers. Holloway's Ointment and Pills uproot all such latent corruptions. The Ointment applied over the affected parts passes to the glands and blood circulating round about, and completely cleanses both. This soothing Ointment possesses the power of ejecting the seeds of all virulent eruptions and ulcerous distempers from the system. Holloway's Pills should generally be taken while his Ointment is being used.

Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 6s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

TEETH.
 No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
 PATENT—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 4th of June has enjoyed the high honour of being conveyed in the same steamers with the late Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's Forces in India—Baron Clyde, the hero of Lucknow, and pacificator of the North West Provinces. His lordship's successor, Sir Hugh Rose, had arrived in Calcutta, but was expected to take his departure for Simla at an early date.

Sir Charles Trevelyan had received the despatch recalling him from the Government of Madras, and had intimated to Sir Henry Ward that he should be prepared to resign his seat on the 18th of June. Sir Henry's removal from Ceylon will be a source of unfeigned regret to all classes of inhabitants in that beautiful and prosperous island.

On the 2nd of last month Mr. Wilson laid on the table of the Legislative Council the Report of the Committee on the Bill for Licensing of Arts, Trades, and Professions. The only alteration, but one of great importance, is the addition of special clauses for the imposition of a licence duty on tobacco, instead of a tax, as originally contemplated by Government. It is admitted that the revenue will suffer by this amendment, and it is feared that a good deal of smuggling will be the result, but Mr. Wilson maintains that the cost of collection will be less.

Sir James Outram's health, we regret to learn, has not been improved by his voyage. Unless a change for the better be brought about by a trip to Batavia, Sir James will be compelled to return to Europe.

General tranquillity appears to reign throughout our Eastern Empire. The only disturbers of the peace seem to be the missionaries of Benares, who have been guilty of the supreme folly of circulating anonymous letters, calling upon the Hindoos to abjure idolatry and embrace the Christian religion. Considerable excitement had consequently prevailed at Meerut and Furuckabad, and rendered necessary the intervention of the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces. The Viceroy even had judged it expedient to remonstrate with these wrong-headed fanatics, and to point out the inevitable results of their inopportune zeal.

Great dissatisfaction prevailed among the British community on the subject of the Report of the Compensation Committee. The claims of sufferers have been treated in a manner both unjust and offensive. In the first place, as soon as these claims were substantiated a reduction was made of 25 per cent. on the whole amount, and then one-third of the balance was awarded—but not paid. Notwithstanding the positive promise of the Government that the compensation should be made on the 15th of May, not a single payment had been received up to the 4th of June. This is only in keeping with its conduct in the matter of prize-money, and no doubt proceeds from the same cause—the want of funds. The magnificent gifts lavished upon natives has exhausted the Treasury, and as the Europeans are not likely to revolt there is no pressing necessity for securing their loyalty. Good faith, however, which has hitherto been the attribute of English rulers in all parts of the world, and especially in the East, may no longer be regarded as a title to respect, so far as the Indian Government is concerned.

A subscription, limited to ten rupees, had been got up by the British residents in Calcutta as a token of their admiration of the pluck and endurance manifested by Tom Sayers in his memorable fight with the Benicia Boy. The amount, which was expected to be very considerable, was to be forwarded by the following mail.

Money was said to be "very easy," though Government Securities do not improve, as their value now depends upon the demand for them in England.

"Tenders"—says the Englishman—"were made on the 2nd June for 5½ per cent. Government Securities, under the notification for the conversion of Government Bonds mentioned in our last. The highest tender here was Rs. 105, and the lowest 102-8, which were accepted. The Bank of Bengal tendered at Rs. 103. We have not heard the amount tendered for in Calcutta, but at 103 there is no doubt the whole amount of 83 lacs afloat would be converted into the five and a-half loan."

The principal news from China relates to the successes of the insurgents, who had compelled the Imperialists to raise the siege of Nankin. Between Pekin, however, and the Yang-tze, the rebels have been completely worsted. Chusan was occupied by the allies, whose forces have at last been put in motion.

BENGAL.

GENERAL FUNK.

During one of Sir Charles Napier's expeditions into the interior of Scinde, we forget whether against Shere Sing in August, 1843, or the one he made the following year, some very groundless alarm so excited the people at Kurrachee that the old chief said the station seemed to have been under "a General Funk in his absence." In a similar predicament seem to be not a few in India at this moment, and on not very much more tangible or substantial grounds. Until the publication of the Madras minutes the members of the commonwealth, of every caste and complexion, seemed pretty nearly unanimous in favour of an Income-tax, the details of the measure, and the fashion and working of the machinery by which its operations were to be carried into effect being of course open, as they would have been at home, to discussion. It was plain to every man, whether in the service or not, that to go on increasing our encumbrances was a thing impossible. How we were to disengage ourselves of these was necessarily an open question; that they must by some means or other be got rid of was plain to the meanest capacity. The feeling of the natives was one of astonishment that they were to be so lightly dealt with. Had the Governor-general, so soon as the mutinies were quelled, mulcted the region over which revolt raged through the cowardice or connivance of the natives themselves, to the extent of the entire cost of the mutinies, the amount would have been paid without a murmur. The Mahomedan emperors, to the halcyon days of whose rule the natives are represented as for ever looking back, would have raised at the spear's point double the amount of deficit in a month. Nor have we in the midst of all the assertions of a few newspapers either avowedly native or subject to native dictation, any substantial grounds for assuming that the native is more averse to this than to any other form of impost. "An ignorant impatience of taxation" is not confined to England; and the greater the ignorance of the requirements of the empire, the greater may we expect to be the impatience of those called upon to meet them. The public mind may rest satisfied that there will be no general or local rising anywhere, no active resistance. Let the Act, when once passed, be accompanied by an intimation that the refusal to pay the Income-tax will be followed, within three months, by a fine or distraint equal to the original amount of the impost, and that this will be levied by force, and a single example of decision will suffice, should so much as an example be needed. Discontent or disorder may be brought about by hesitation in the execution of the law. There is no fear of either through the direct instrumentality of the law itself.

In the midst of these discussions few things have astonished us more than the ignorance of some of the local journals. One charges Mr. Wilson with mis-statements because he professed to bring forward his measure under the unanimous sanction of supreme authority, while neither Madras nor Bombay were consulted. Who made them supreme? They are everywhere defined as not only subordinate, but as so subordinate and so powerless that they can do nothing without the sanction of supreme authority, set forth by the statutes of the realm as consisting of the Governor-general in Council. But then Lord Elphinstone and Sir C. Trevelyan had their appointments as directly from the Crown as Lord Canning, and they are directly responsible to the Crown, and to no one else. The Crown has said the opposite, and must know best. The Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy, the Superintendent of the Bengal Marine, the Master-Attendants, the Assay Masters, and their deputies at all the Presidencies, had their appointments direct from the Crown as much as the Governor-general or the subordinate governors. May we expect to hear any morning that the gallant seamen and learned savans have also sent home their minutes, only hitherto they have been discreet enough not to publish them? Calcutta may any day be awakened by the news that Capt. Reddie has placed the Hooghly under blockade, that Drs. Downs and Shekelton have refused to feed the press-room, and have taken the constitutional method of bringing the ruler to his senses—stopped the supplies. If Lord Elphinstone has, as is said, sent a memorial home direct against the privileges of the legislature, or sent any memorial at all through any channel save that prescribed by law, the Governor-general, he has manifested an ignorance of the principles of the administration to which he has for more than twelve years belonged, that seems altogether incredible, especially seeing what reason the Bombay Government has had within the past twenty years to become familiar with such things. From the annexation of Colaba to that of Sattara, from the construction of the pilot boat of Sir H. Leeke to the repairs of the Ajdaha and Acbar, not a work could be proposed by them without reference to authority. Lord Elphinstone has carried subservience to the Supreme Government to its extremity. Lord Falkland was considered to have gone nearly as far as possible in the surrender of his independence, when, in 1850, he referred to the Governor-general to settle betwixt him and his Council who should be Commissioner of Scinde. His successor surpassed him. A twelvemonth has not elapsed since Lord Elphinstone asked the Supreme Government to advise him as to his right to ignore the recommendation of the Director-general as to who should be appointed surgeon at Mahableshwur. But the question of authority is not one of opinion; it is settled by law. By the Act of 1834 the Governors of the Presidencies are enjoined constantly and diligently to transmit to the Governor-general true and exact copies of all orders, resolutions, and Acts in Council of their respective Governments. They are to pay and yield obedience to all orders they may from time to time receive, and all neglect or contravention of such instructions shall be punishable by suspension or dismissal. This is to be followed by deportation to England to await further punishment. Lord Elphinstone is already gone. The Governor-general has but to order Sir Charles Trevelyan and his counsellors to cancel their minutes, and to apologise for their publication, or meet recusancy by dismissal or deportation. The Marquis of Dalhousie would have done both by wire within an hour of hearing of hostilities.

We could scarcely have believed a journal in India written in the English language, even if the language alone be English, so ignorant of the constitution of the Legislative Council as to speak of its asking advice from any one. Why, it is our Indian Parliament! It is authorised to amend any Act in the Statute Book, save the Charter Act, the Mutiny Act, and laws affecting the prerogatives of the Crown. The Legislative Council is no more called upon to consult the Governor-general himself, than is its English prototype to refer to the Sovereign. The Viceroy, like his Royal Mistress, may refuse assent to an Act, which thereby fails to become law; he may prorogue or suspend; unlike the Sovereign he cannot dissolve; and the Council, unlike the faithful Commons, have no power to stop the supplies. Last of all, what perhaps most amazes us from the ignorance of English customs which it implies, is the indifference shown to what at home is deemed the most heinous of ministerial offences—breach of confidence. Lord Brougham's brief note in 1834—"The Queen has done it all," cost the Chancellor his place. The publication of Lord Ellenborough's despatch to Lord Canning two years ago, was equally fatal to the delinquent. No Cabinet Minister who betrayed his own opinion as such, without the sanction of his colleagues, would be permitted to remain for an hour in office.

Such are the men who are at present withstanding the Bill now under discussion before the Legislative Council. Sir Charles Trevelyan, the author of the uproar, like Fear in Collins' Ode,

"Back recoils, he knows not why,
Even at the sound himself hath made."

By his side stand prejudice, ignorance, and error, his only allies. May we not well conclude that "a General Funk has taken command of us"—that he only requires to be forced to disappear?—Friend of India.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S CAMPAIGN.

Although our information is not yet sufficiently detailed to enable us to comment as we should wish on the late brilliant campaign of Brigadier General Chamberlain against the Wuzzeerees, we yet know sufficient to enable us to point to the officer by whom that campaign was planned, and that success was achieved, as one of whom any country ought to be proud. In the face of natural obstacles, of the terrible heat, and of a fierce enemy whose raids had hitherto been successful, General Chamberlain has penetrated retreats hitherto untrodden by Europeans, has stormed fastnesses, and struck such a terror into the hearts of his opponents, that they who before had never bent to mortal man, have, in the language of abject submission, sued for peace at his feet. The question may perhaps arise, "who is this General Chamberlain, who, with small means, has accomplished these great exploits, who has succeeded where others had failed, and who, in 1800, has performed most gallantly a task from which another General shrank back baffled, beaten, and humiliated in 1849?" General Chamberlain is an officer who has seen as much service as most men, and who has performed more brilliant achievements than often fall to the lot of even the most favoured of mankind to accomplish. He has received seven wounds, more than one of them very severe; he served with great distinction throughout the Afghan campaigns of 1839, 40, 41, and 42, and gained in them the reputation of being one of the coolest and, at the same time, the most dashing soldier in the army. He was present also at the hard contested fight at Maharajpore; and when we say that Neville Chamberlain was present at an action, we express in a concise form an usage which will present itself to all who know him or who have heard the story of his exploits. He was with Lord Gough when the sun went down on the doubtful field of Chillianwalla, as well as when that gallant veteran achieved the "crowning mercy" of Goojerat. Finally, after organising victory in the Punjab, and transferring to his successor, Nicholson, a force with which his genius was able to perform so many wonders, he went to Delhi, and at once became the life and soul of the attack. Appointed Adjutant-general of the army, he held that office only so long as he could perform together with its labours the duties of a soldier and a general, and when the time arrived when the two could no longer be united, he gave up the lucrative and influential official berth in order to return to that for which he felt all the yearnings of a hero. We have not alluded in the course of this sketch to those frontier campaigns which are alone sufficient to shed glory on a career. Succeeding to the chief command on our most turbulent frontier within a short time of Sir Colin Campbell's inglorious raid, Brigadier-general Chamberlain quickly effaced the recollection of that disaster, and by a series of campaigns as brilliantly conceived as they were effectually executed, established our authority in places where it had been previously laughed to scorn. The manner in which he has handled his force has been spoken of in terms of enthusiastic admiration by those who have served under him. He has been methodical where the pursuance of certain fixed rules seemed to indicate success, but none have known more accurately than he when to discard rule, and trust to those rapid combinations which, when guided by genius, cannot fail to be successful.

Such, feebly sketched, is Neville Chamberlain. Had he belonged to the French army, had the deeds he has performed in India been achieved under the equally sultry sky of Africa, he would have gained a renown which would have been European; his name would have been mentioned in the courts and camps of the great powers at the same moment with the Lamoricières, the McMahon, and the Neills of the present day. His deeds can vie with theirs. Like them, he writes the tried skill of the general with the strength and valour of the soldier. Unlike them, however, he belongs to a service of which it has been recorded that it does not possess a single officer capable of commanding a division. By the verdict of one who failed where he succeeded, he stands in that category, and though that verdict has been shattered before the inexorable logic of facts, in the presence even of General Chamberlain's achievements, it includes, nevertheless, in its sweeping, though feeble, censure the most brilliant English soldier of the present day.

We cannot conclude these remarks without adverting to the position of Colonel Lumsden, and expressing a hope that no opinion may be formed, and no action entered upon, in consequence of his alleged surprise, until the facts of the case are fully known. Colonel Lumsden is a very able and a most gallant officer, who has performed great services to the State. We would earnestly deprecate on this occasion that habit of springing to hasty conclusions and judging solely by results which obtains so often with small minds. Sure we are, that if that gallant soldier has made a mistake, he will be the first to avow it, and equally sure that the mistake, if ten times greater than it appears at present, ought not to efface the memory of the distinguished services which have gained for his name a lasting place in the pages of Indian history.—Englishman.

LORD CLYDE.

In four days Lord Clyde will lay down the chief command of the armies of India, which nearly three years ago Sir Colin Campbell assumed. A soldier destitute of the science of a military statesman, a tactician despising the guerilla strategy necessary for ordinary warfare in the East, he has yet quelled a revolt which threatened the existence of the Empire; in two years he has hunted to slaughter or chased to miserable death, or pardoned with a just mercy, thousands of rebels who covered all Northern India from the jungles of Shahabad to the walls of Delhi. Nor when history tells the story of his life will it be forgotten that with a speed and a tact it had been better for his present reputation that he had always shown, he relieved the long beleaguered captives of Lucknow from disease and death. We feel inclined to moderate our admiration of the French army and its system of promotion when we read the farewell order of Lord Clyde. The son of a Highland carpenter, his has been the honour of being pointed out by his countrymen as the man to save India in 1857, his the boast that he was the chief instrument of wresting the Empire from traitors.

Yet Lord Clyde leaves the scene of his triumphs under a cloud. There is not an officer of the Indian army who will endorse our estimate of his career. He is believed, and on good grounds, to be hostile to that army. He is said, and we have the best authority possible in the circumstances for believing the statement, to have expressed it as his deliberate opinion that, generally speaking, these officers are unfit to command a royal regiment. As they think of the long list of heroes, of men great as both soldiers and administrators, with whose names the history of the Indian army is emblazoned, they naturally feel indignant at a Commander-in-Chief who holds such an opinion, and look at all his acts with an unfavourable eye. Had that opinion been made public the insult would deserve to be resented, even more than the civil notification which branded a whole service as dishonest in their pecuniary dealings. But Lord Clyde has a right to express any opinion confidentially to the Government of India or the Home Authorities without having his confidence violated. And sympathising as we do with Indian officers now that that opinion has been published, as it never was intended to be, and in an exaggerated form, we yet think it is our duty to look at the whole career of the Commander-in-Chief with something of the calmness which gives to history its value.

Sir Colin Campbell left the Crimea with a reputation for powers of command which justified the ministry in selecting him for India. His "to-morrow" became a proverb, and when he landed in Calcutta excited the hopes of misruled citizens that it would be typical of his strategy. All had been disappointed in Sir Patrick Grant; all were watching the steady advance of Neill and Havelock. Troops sent on by Lords Elphinstone and Elgin, had to be received and forwarded to the chief points of the seat of war with all dispatch. Conscious of his weak points the new Commander had the sagacity to appreciate and to attach to himself General Mansfield, who was summoned from diplomatic idleness at Warsaw. Later he strengthened himself still further by securing the aid of Henry Norman, the most promising young soldier in the Indian army. On the tide of prestige, which flowed from the fall of Delhi in September, 1857, Lord Clyde advanced to the relief of Lucknow, joined at Cawnpore by Greathed's column, on the 26th October. Adopting Outram's plan he made the skilful advance ever famous in story, and with his precious charge effected a retirement which all allow to be equally skilful. He returned only in time to save Cawnpore. After the action of 6th December, after clearing the Grand Trunk Road, occupying Futtehghurh, and being joined by Seaton from Delhi, he was ready in the first days of 1858 to reconquer northern India.

It is at this point that we find the military weakness of Lord Clyde. It is always easy and sometimes rash to predict the consequences of a certain line of action which was not adopted. When success has followed a contrary course, though it may have been long delayed, there is a presumption in its favour. History will no doubt acquit Lord Clyde of the Fabian character ascribed to his operations. But we who stand at its front cannot rid ourselves of the belief that, acting under pressure from men who have proved they are innocent of statesmanship, Lord Clyde adopted a policy which prolonged revolt, decimated the army, and emptied the exchequer. He waited and waited for weary months of the cold season for reinforcements from every quarter, and then with the fate of an irresistible power he swept down on Lucknow. Not till 4th March did he invest the well-prepared city. He took it only by the criminal stupidity of Brigadier Campbell who allowed its hordes to escape, to begin the severe campaigns of Rohilcund and Northern Oude. The work was almost thrown away. Shahabad was once more roused by Koer Singh. Azimgurh trembled. Bareilly required three armies and was not taken till May, by the end of which only the north valley of the Ganges was pacified. Oude had now to be re-conquered, and by the heats and malaria of a season when marching is madness, our force was thinned. The year 1858 closed with the proclamation that rebellion had been driven from its last stronghold. The fastnesses of Nepal did the rest.

That the campaign was dictated by Lord Canning and not heartily adopted by Lord Clyde, is well known. Nevertheless it was, in the end, successful, and Sir Colin Campbell received his peerage. Had his strongly expressed opinion been adopted, the local European army would not have been goaded to mutiny. When his urgent remonstrances were unheeded, his orders to commanding officers lessened the catastrophe. Taking a complete view of his three years' career as Commander-in-Chief, while we regret the publication of an opinion as incorrect as it is unfair, we cannot let Lord Clyde lay down his command without an expression of our gratitude for his services to India, of our general admiration of his actions as a brave soldier.—Friend of India, May 31.

MISCELLANEOUS.

STRANGE, IF TRUE.—The Hurkaru gives as authentic the following version of a startling occurrence said to have taken place quite recently at Burrisaul:—Messrs. Blossome, Kemp, junr., and Hughes had been dining with Mr. Warrand, of the Civil Service, and all left the circuit bungalow after dinner, to accompany the two first named gentlemen to their boat. On passing the house inhabited by Messrs. R. C. Raikes, the collector, and Powlett, a young civilian, Mr. Warrand went into the verandah. Mr. Powlett, who was in bed, called out to him and asked what he wanted. Mr. Warrand said "a light," upon which Mr. Powlett asked him to come in, and said he would give him one. All four gentlemen then went into the room, and Mr. Hughes, who was slightly intoxicated, sat down upon the bed. A scuffle ensued between him and Mr. Powlett, during which the other three left, but returned again when they heard the sound of blows. Mr. Powlett then rushed to Mr. Raikes room in the other end of the house, and cried out, "Here is Warrand and these fellows from the circuit bungalow," and at the same time Mr. Warrand chased towards Mr. Raikes' room a bearer who had been beating Mr. Hughes with a lathee. Mr. Raikes upon this met him with a loaded gun and fired at him. Mr. Warrand, crying out, "What are you doing, you cowardly fool?" dropped, and Mr. Raikes fired at him again, when a number of the collectory guard and peons surrounded him, and by Mr. Raikes' order beat him whilst lying insensible in the verandah. The others ran off for the doctor, who when he came pronounced Mr. Warrand dead. Messrs. Raikes and Powlett were called for, and begged to bring a light and to render assistance, but they had hid themselves. Mr. Warrand was then carried to the circuit bungalow, where it was ascertained that the shot or bullet had passed between his scull and the scalp without injuring the bone. Mr. Hughes had been forgotten, until a noise was again heard, and the collectory people were found to be beating him by order of Mr. Raikes, by whom he was sent off to the thannah and kept there all night, very badly wounded in the head by an iron-bound lathee. He was released next morning by Mr. Muspratt, the magistrate, who proceeded to deprive Mr. Raikes of all his fire-arms. Mr. Raikes affirms that the gun was loaded only with blank cartridge. A case was afterwards brought before the magistrate by the bearer against the gentlemen for forcible entry, but it broke down, as Mr. Powlett admitted that he had asked Mr. Warrand to come in, and because the bearer was not the proper complainant.

SUTTEE IN OUDE.—An old bunya, by name Khyrathee, died at the village of Husseinpore in the Lucknow district, on the 3rd May, after one day's illness. His old wife living at Hydergurh, hearing on the evening of the 2nd that he was very ill, came to Husseinpore on the 4th, only to find that he had died two days before. On the evening of the 7th the son-in-law made arrangements for burning the body of the deceased, as it was a propitious day. On mentioning this to the widow, she said that she was determined to perform Sutte. The Lumberdars were informed of this, and they came to remonstrate, when she said that if she were not allowed to do so she would take other means to destroy herself, and "grief would come to the whole village." On which one of the Lumberdars said:—"You must show by example that you are resolved to perform 'suttee.'" She at once tied round her finger a bit of rag, dipped in oil, and set fire to it, on which she was allowed to perform "suttee," one and all in the village joining in the deed. No blame whatever can be attached to the police in not preventing its occurrence, as the Chowkedar started from the village to report that a suttee was about to take place, but the police arrived just after the ceremony had concluded. Captain Chamberlain, the district superintendent of police at Lucknow, has made searching inquiries into the case, and has apprehended seventy-one individuals, who all aided in the suttee.—Oude Gazette.

THE RIOT AT JHANSI.—The men who were charged with wanton assault on Mr. Fuller, Tehseeldar of Jhansie, viz., the Naib Tehseeldar, Goor Persad, and eight others, have been found guilty by the deputy commissioner, and committed to take their trial at the sessions on a charge of aggravated assault.

MUTINY OF THE KAREN LEVY.—The Maulmain Advertiser of the 5th May gives the following account of this insane movement, on the authority of the Commissioner:—A detachment of the Karen Levy was stationed on the Yoonzaleen, at a place called Kulloodoo, we think about 150 men. Of this number 120 or 130 men were enticed away by their havildar, one Nga Hlau, carrying away with them their arms and ammunition, and it is supposed all their stores, consisting of about 10,000 rounds of ball cartridges and the same number of percussion caps. Their commanding officer, Lieut. Watson, was at the time at Shoaygyeen making arrangements for a supply of rice for the levy during the rains, and therefore could not control the actions of the men. After the disaffection, the mutineers took the direction of Pahpoon, which is situated on the Yoonzaleen, in order to attack a wealthy Goung Gyook whose head quarters are at that village. Should they succeed in this, they threatened to move upon Beeling, and will probably be joined by Min Loung, and thus disturb our most settled districts in that quarter. The audacity of the rascals seems to have no bounds, for they have been daring enough to get their leader to send a letter or so-called proclamation to our rulers, advising that immediately they have done with Beeling they will descend upon Kaukaret and cross into province Amherst. It is much feared that the mutineers have already attacked Pahpoon village and the Goung Gyook, on whom their eyes are set, and if such prove true we do not know how or where their proceedings will end. The Commissioner, therefore, on intelligence of the facts reaching him, applied to Brigadier Gordon for the aid of a detachment of the military force under him with European officers, who are to act according to the instructions delivered them by Captain Briggs, Deputy Commissioner of the Province, and Lieut. Hill, Assistant Commissioner, both of whom, with Lieuts. Harrison and Watson from Shoay-Gynee, are moving by different routes to the protection of the doomed village of Pahpoon, and if possible anticipate the attack of the mutineers. Brigadier Gordon acted promptly, and put 160 men of the 32nd Regiment N.I. under orders on Thursday evening last, and early yesterday morning eighty of them embarked for Martaban, followed at eleven o'clock by eighty more, and it is to be hoped will be in time to give the disaffected a notion of their true greatness. Lieuts. Harrison and Hill moved with all despatch to the relief of Pahpoon with thirty men each, of the Pegu police battalion, and also a boat's crew of the river police, while from here there are two detachments of native infantry, who will be joined at Martaban by Captain Biggs and Lieut. H. S. Hill, the Assistant Commissioner 1st class, Maulmain. We do hope that these various detachments will cut off the retreat of the rebels, and read them a good lesson. We cannot conclude without adding a remark or two. The promptitude of Brigadier Gordon in complying with the Commissioner's request, who wished the detachment to be sent up with all despatch, and the alacrity of the men to proceed, for they were ready in a few hours, is just as we expected. The Commissariat department deserves every praise for the rapidity with which everything necessary for the men was got ready and placed in the boats, and we must say that Captain Hutchinson may well and justly be proud of his establishment. Since writing the above, we have been very kindly favoured with the following, with a promise of further contributions, for which our correspondent has our best thanks:—

"Martaban, May 4, 1860.

"Yesterday information from Lieut. Harrison reached this, that upwards of 100 men of the Yoonzaleen levy had mutinied at Kanloodoo, burnt the stockade there, and marched on Pahpoon, where there is another guard of the levy. Lieut. Watson was at Shoay Gyeeen at the time. The mutineers have their muskets and good stores of ammunition. Captain Briggs took the information at once to the Commissioner, and the following plan was arranged on the spot, and is energetically being carried out. Lieut. Watson with a party of military has marched on Kanloodoo; Lieut. Harrison from Shoay Gyeeen has marched on Pahpoon. Lieut. Charles Hill was despatched to Kyeketo to take the command of 100 men of Colonel Blake's corps there, and advance direct up the valley of the Beeling river on Pahpoon; Lieut. H. S. Hill takes a company up today to Kaukaret, and then up the valley of the Yoonzaleen towards Pahpoon, and Captain Briggs takes a company to Beeling, which is the point d'appui, the centre on which all the parties will work, under the immediate orders of Captain Briggs, the Deputy Commissioner of province Martaban. It is to be hoped that all five parties moving from different directions on the mutineers may come up with and destroy them. They have not as yet shed blood, so far as is known, and Captain Briggs has issued a proclamation calling upon them to give themselves up at once, and if they have any grievances he will inquire into and redress them—failing which, they will be untriflingly hunted down, and they, or any who may join them, shot down like dogs whenever or wherever found."

EMIGRATION TOWARDS KASHMEER.—A brief note from our Lahore correspondent, dated 20th May, affords some information which it may be as well for our authorities to take heed to:—While out this morning in the direction of the Raize bridge, I noticed some groups of what appeared to be Mohummdans. I dismounted, sent my horse away, and quietly walked in the direction of the principal gathering. On approaching them, I found they were Kashmeerees, taking leave of their brethren, on the eve of their departure for the hills; that they were in the habit of going up every year, and only taking their annual trip. True, I observed, but that is the case only with a very few. Here are a great number of men only apparently on their way? By degrees I found out, after a little pressure in the shape of cross-questioning, that the number of emigrants from Lahore was greater than usual, and that a similar exodus was being carried out at Noorpoor, Lodeana, and even Umritser, with other shawl manufacturing localities. That the Raja of Jumoo had considerably relaxed his taxes on shawl weavers and shawl weaving, and invited many of his subjects who had withdrawn from his father's territories, on account of the oppression of Golab Singh, to return, under promise of advantages they would not enjoy in the British provinces, &c. It immediately struck me that besides all this there must be some underhand work in operation regarding the proposed taxes. I hinted as much, but the spokesman was a wary man, and declared that could never be the case, that it was pure desire to revisit their native hills that induced them to go at the present moment, and that they could never be such ungrateful wretches as to leave the country where they had been so well treated, &c., &c., which assertions I, of course, received at their full value, and I saw them turn their faces Kashmeer-wards under the full conviction that they were leaving, partly under the belief that they would be better treated in their native land than they had been, but chiefly because mischief-loving and disloyal men had worked them into a full conviction that they were to be taxed so heavily in the Punjab as to make it undesirable for them to remain any longer. I will endeavour to find out approximately the numbers who are thus withdrawing themselves from the operation of the licence-tax of one rupee per annum, for that is the only tax by which the great bulk of them would be affected. Under any circumstances, the withdrawal of so large a number of artisans in this particular branch of industry, the staple manufacture in the upper part of the Punjab where every village almost has its shawls looms of some kind or other, is a serious affair. The weavers cannot, of course, be prevented from leaving if they desire to do so, but it will be worth the while of the authorities to do their best to trace the origin of the movement, which, I believe, will be found in the misrepresentations that are so industriously set afloat to alarm and disquiet the people, especially the lower classes, who are easily swayed by false tales and rumours of any kind that tend to bring discredit on the Government.—Englishman.

A LESSON FOR FAIR EMIGRANTS.—The following interesting little story has been sent to us (Englishman) as illustrative of two proverbs, "Look before you leap," and "There are many slips between the cup and the lip." A young lady, affianced to a gentleman in Calcutta, was hastening on the wings of love, or rather on the screw steamer Simla, to her "future," when, unfortunately, the screw being even slower than the "wings," time was given for indulging in the amusement of a flirtation in the steamer, and a gay young officer of the Madras army rather contrived to efface the memory of the distant lover. The lady, in a state of agitation, went ashore at Madras, and was last seen by herself in an hotel, sitting the image of despair, having, however, taken the precaution to advise her future in Calcutta by telegraph that a serious change had come over her mind, and that he had better forget her. Tears not being transmissible, and the wires being atrociously callous, the sensibility was left out. The telegraph department, true to its constitution, delivered the message to a person of the same name, but not the right man. Both, however, the eager lover and the surprised gentleman, went to the steamer on her arrival at Garden Reach. When the true circumstances of the case were broken to both, the astonished lover, after a stare or two and a gasp, turned to his namesake, and in despairing tones spoke thus, "I say, old fellow, let's have a peg."

CHITTAGONG.—A memorial window of coloured glass has just been inserted in Christ's church, Chittagong, to commemorate the providential escape of all the residents during the mutiny of the Sepoys stationed there in Nov. 1857. The window is a very tasteful one, and has been inserted in the chancel, which has been lately added to the church. It bears no representation of life, but is ornamented with the usual ecclesiastical emblems and appropriate texts of scripture, and it has at its base the following inscription:—"The grateful residents at Chittagong, providentially rescued from the murderous hands of the mutinous Sepoys, 1857, place this memorial of their thankfulness to a gracious God." The window has been supplied by Messrs. Frank Smith and Co., Southampton-street, Strand, London, at a cost of Rs. 600. The window and a handsome new Communion Service is a thank-offering from the residents present at the time of the mutiny.

CHITTAGONG, May 19.—Nothing could be finer than the weather we have had for the last fortnight; the ground is wet, and we have hot cloudy days to make the young plant shoot up. The sowings are nearly completed, both paddy and indigo. The market will be overstocked with the former, and a deficit in that of the latter. Mr. Herschel is revelling to his heart's content in the ruin of his countrymen, which seems to afford him the most exquisite pleasure; he is now doing his utmost to prevent them from obtaining the redress, which the new law held out to them, of damages; he dismisses the cases in the most summary manner, with scarcely the form of an investigation; he has unfortunately a large field to work on since the removal of a very efficient officer (Mr. Mackenzie) from Harrah. What a change for the poor planter, to be obliged to go to Herschel's court instead of the others, where they were treated with courtesy, and had justice meted out to them!

SIMLA, May 21.—I am sorry to say there is very little local news indeed. Saving the departure of Countess Canning and her party, this morning, for the interior, I have not heard of anything stirring. Her ladyship proceeds to Chini in the first instance, and thence across the hills to Mussoorie, arriving there about two months hence, and finally leaving the Himalayas about that time for Calcutta. These are the present arrangements, and involving, as they do, a long and tedious journey at the worst season of the year, I don't think they are very good. We are now having delightful weather, clear and cold; the recent rain has refreshed nature, and the surrounding scenery is gorgeous in the variegated tints of foliage and blossom. There is to be a subscription ball on the anniversary of her Majesty's birthday, which is likely to be a successful gathering of "beauty and fashion." The station is fast filling; many of the houses vacated by the commander-in-chief and staff and the viceroy's staff, secretaries, &c., are being secured for new arrivals, or those expected from the plains. "Peterhoff," recently occupied by Lord Clyde, has been taken for General Sir R. Garrett and a couple of "chums," so that I suppose, as the season advances, we may expect gaiety "galore!" I hear of considerable difficulty Lady Canning and party are likely to encounter in their journey across the hills. The new road to Thibet must be a very narrow and dangerous one, if all I hear of it be true. Fancy a distinguished lady being lugged up a hill or let down a descent by passing a rope round her beautiful waist, with a Puharee at each end of it! and yet I hear that this plan has been gravely recommended as the only way of overcoming some of the difficulties of the road.—Englishman.

DINAJEPURE, May 16.—A portion of the 2nd division, revenue survey, leaves Dinajepore tomorrow, on its way to recess at Darjeeling. The 1st division will shortly pass through in an opposite direction, on its way to recess at Berhampore. The superintendent's office remains at Dinajepore. By the united exertions of both these professional surveys, it is expected the survey of the entire district will be completed during the following year.

MEERUT.—A short time ago the chief bankers and respectable men of this place received a circular from some missionaries, at Benares apparently, for it is anonymous. This was a direct attack on the Hindoo religion, and denounced idolaters in no measured terms. This has created considerable excitement; indeed, it is to this that all the rumours lately so rife of disturbances and discontent are owing. At Furruckabad the excitement caused by these circulars has been very great. It is believed by every one that they were issued under the authority of Government. There is also every reason to believe that these papers have been very extensively circulated throughout the provinces. The mischief thus done is very great indeed, the distrust and suspicion of the Hindoo being again raised against Government. The Commissioner of Meerut has brought this matter to the notice of the Lieutenant-governor of the N. W. provinces, who ordered the officiating commissioner of Furruckabad to proceed at once to act as occasion might require in Furruckabad, and also referred it to the Governor-general. The Viceroy has caused a letter to be addressed to the Rev. Mr. Mullens, of Benares, on the subject, calling his attention to the very dangerous and ill-judged course pursued by some member of the mission, probably the Rev. Mr. Kennedy. The Viceroy reminded him of the effect of Mr. Edmond's circular calls to be converted, just before the outbreak of 1857, which were not so mischievous as these, inasmuch as they bore the signature of a responsible person, whilst these, being anonymous, might more readily be believed to have emanated from Government. The Governor-general pointed out that, leaving other more serious questions behind, no good could possibly be ever attained by violent attacks on the religion of the Hindoos. It would not forward the object the missionaries had in view in the slightest degree; he further pressed on Mr. Mullens the necessity of modifying their zeal, for we could not expect that the people of this country would be inclined to receive the truth when presented to them in this shape. The fact is, that the consequences would only be to rouse the people against the Christians generally, and to make them cling more obstinately than ever to their own belief. The course taken by this missionary can breed only suspicion, alarm, and hostility against the whole Christian community in India, and is too likely to lead to mischiefs of the most appalling kind. The object of the Viceroy in causing this remonstrance to be made, is to request the good services of Mr. Mullens to prevent, if possible, the recurrence of so manifestly objectionable and dangerous a proceeding should he be correct in believing that the document was issued by Mr. Kennedy. It is very far from the desire of the Government, the Viceroy informed Mr. Mullens, to discourage missionary operations in any legitimate form, but the course pursued by the writer of this circular is as much opposed to the progress of true religion as it is calculated to excite popular commotion and civil strife.—Englishman.

THE COMPENSATION COMMITTEE have sent to his Excellency the Governor-general in Council a copy of their petition to the House of Commons, and solicited a continuance of his Excellency's kind support to the object of the petition. The committee also, we are informed, have brought to the notice and recollection of Government, that the period originally fixed for payment of the adjusted claims was at the end of two months from the date appointed for closing the Commissioner's investigations. The two months expired on the 15th, and the committee have solicited the issue of the necessary orders for immediate payment.

NOORUNGABAD.—A handsome monument is to be erected over the graves of the English murdered at Noorungabad, in the Mahomdee district. It is being prepared in England, and the expense will be defrayed by private subscription, supplemented by a grant from Government.

A NATIVE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE is about to be established at Lucknow. A meeting of the commercial community was held on the 17th May, at which nearly a hundred native bankers and dealers were present. The object of the Chamber is to enable the merchants to regulate their own laws affecting import and export duties.

FORTIFICATIONS OF LUCKNOW.—There are at present in Lucknow three fortified places—the Muehee Bhawn, the Residency, and the Moosabagh. As there will seldom be a European garrison sufficient for more than one fort, measures are about to be taken to concentrate the strength of the troops in the Muehee Bhawn. General Napier's plan for the fortification of Lucknow included the establishment of military posts from the Dilkooshah to Moosabagh. The total cost of the Muehee Bhawn works has been 4 lakhs of rupees. It can accommodate a force of 3,000, and may be defended by 500.

CALCUTTA POST-OFFICE.—The Hurkaru gives Calcutta somewhat definite hopes of possessing a post-office worthy of the capital. The plans have already been drawn out by Mr. Digby Wyatt. The building is to cost £40,000. Why the flooring should consist of mosaic-work, and the spire be as high as the Ochterlopy monument, or why there should be a spire at all, we are not informed. The site is that originally intended, once occupied by the old export godowns of the trading Company, and now covered by useless Custom-house sheds. We expect to see the completion of the building in five years, when the business of the office shall have doubled.

THE "CRYING WANT" OF INDIA.—We see from the Delhi Gazette that another attempt has been made to construct a self-acting Punkah. A model for an ingenious contrivance for pulling a set of Punkahs in a large building, such as a church or barrack, has been invented by Corporal Girling, 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade. The motive power is a pair of bullocks, but we are not informed as to how the machinery acts. Plans for a self-acting Punkah have flitted through the brains of most Anglo-Indians, but owing to a want of mechanical invention and skill in the country the long-desired luxury has never come within our reach. Will no one offer a prize for the discovery? It ranks at present with such problems as squaring the circle.

DAKH BUNGALOWS.—The Hurkaru says Government has sanctioned the small sum of Rs. 4,000 for supplying the staging bungalows on the Grand Trunk-road with decent furniture. This sum will effect but little improvement on the present filth and desolation of the majority of these bungalows. Those in the North-West are on the whole superior in accommodation and cleanliness to the erections in Bengal. We should like the Post-office authorities to imitate their brethren in Madras in the publication of the receipts and expenditure on their account. There must be a considerable profit to the State.

THE ANDAMANS.—The settlement on the Andaman Islands seems to be gradually progressing. The public buildings are said to be nearly finished. The timber of the islands, bricks made on the spot, and lime from shells, are used. The convicts begin to grow vegetables, irrigating their land from wells sunk as in the North-West. Although the officials have had several interviews with the natives, their friendliness does not increase. Recently Dr. Gamack, while handing some of them presents out of his boat, was shot in the shoulder by an arrow.

JUNGLE GRANTS IN OUDE.—We have received a copy of the new rules for the lease of jungle grants in Oude. Applications for grants of waste land must be made to the deputy commissioner of the district, and be by him transmitted to the chief commissioner, through the commissioner of the division. No grant can exceed 5,000 acres in extent. The grant will be held free of assessment for twelve years, and on the expiration of this term it will be settled with the grantee or his heirs in full proprietary title at the customary rate of assessment, or 50 per cent. of the assets of the cultivated portion, subject to the following conditions:—That one-fourth of the whole be cultivated by the end of the sixth year's rent free possession. That one-half be cultivated by the end of the twelfth year's rent-free possession; a deduction, however, is made for such land as is uncultivable. That boundary marks be maintained at the expense of the grantee; that the right of the public to roads through the grant be not interfered with; that the right of Government over all running streams be recognised, and lastly, that the grantee duly perform all the duties required of landholders in Oude.

EPICUREAN WOLVES.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that in three small districts near Umritsur the number of children carried off and destroyed by wolves was 350 during the past year. It seems that the "shikarees" hitherto allowed by Government to each district are armed only with clubs. Much of the loss is due to the carelessness or criminality of the mothers. Exposure near the haunts of wild beasts, and at the brink of wells and tanks, is now the great mode of infanticide all over India.

THE OLD STORY.—The Governor-general has notified to the 47th, 65th, and 70th Bengal Native Infantry regiments who constituted the Bengal Brigade in China that, in recognition of their exemplary conduct, they will enjoy the full benefit of additional furlough to their homes.

THE ARNOLD TESTIMONIAL.—The admirers of the late William Delafield Arnold, Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab, have resolved to perpetuate his memory as the first who held that office by "the institution of a gold or silver medal as an annual prize for the most meritorious pupil in the Government schools." Mr. Wyon is now casting a die in England which will cost seventy guineas. It is to bear a likeness of Arnold on one side, and a device appropriate to the object and to India on the other. Subscriptions for the "Arnold Medal Fund," from which the annual medal will be provided after paying primary expenses, will be received by Captain Fuller, Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab.

NATIVE SERVANTS.—The Delhi Gazette mentions that the commissioner of Simla is now investigating a charge brought by a European against a native for an assault upon his daughter, a child under eight years of age. This is the second case of the kind recently. The laziness of parents who allow their children to be always with native servants to whom obscenity is the rule of life is most criminal.

THE FEUDAL RELATION of tributary provinces to the British Government is illustrated in an announcement which appears in the Gazette. "The people of Nung Klow, in the Khasia Hills, having, with the permission of the Government, elected Bor Sing to the chiefship of that district, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general is pleased to confirm the election, and to confer the chiefship of Nung Klow on Bor Sing and his lineal heirs for ever." The title of Rajah Bahadoor is conferred on Bor Sing.

THE WEATHER.—At present while the thermometer is at 130 degs. in Bengal, it is 86 degs. in the Neilgherries. The Ganges has risen three feet above its highest level, owing, we presume, to the melting of the Himalayan snows. The heat in Bengal is greater this season than even in 1858. Instances of natives dying from coup de soleil and of horses dropping in the streets are very common. Lower Bengal has had a taste of the hot winds of the north-west.

THE MAHARAJAH OF BURDWAN.—The President in Council has forwarded to the Maharajah of Burdwan a resolution expressing the satisfaction of the Government at his willingness to bear taxation. "This expression of sentiment, supported by true and correct reasons, is entirely consistent with the Maharajah's well known character for loyalty and fidelity, and proves that he properly comprehends the actual situation of affairs. Such a declaration proceeding from so distinguished and influential a subject as the Maharajah is appreciated by the Government, and it is satisfactory to his Honour in Council to observe that the Maharajah rightly understands that the new taxes will not in any way contravene the terms of the perpetual settlement of the land tax in Bengal, a settlement which will ever be kept inviolate."

TUMLOOK, May 31.—A case of rather serious smuggling has just occurred at Jellamootah. The smugglers, twenty-nine in number, were carrying away in as many bags upwards of nineteen maunds of salt from Hoodah Joychundbar of that Aurung. One of them has been captured with the smuggled salt, and the case is under trial with the salt agent of Tumlook. Some of the local poketan and preventive officers are implicated in this illicit affair. Since our last was written we have had only two or three slight showers of rain and the heat has been very oppressive. The deepest tanks have dried up to an extent seldom known before, and it is said that in certain localities, not far from the station, water has become as scarce as in the African or Arabian deserts. The fate of Midnapore is still more lamentable. There, not a drop of rain has fallen since October last, and what with the rocky nature of its soil, and its numerous population, it is not difficult to conceive how great are the sufferings of our brethren in that town. Fires are the order of the day. Within the last eight or ten days no less than eight have occurred in and near the station, thus averaging almost one per diem. Cholera is raging most fearfully among the manufacturers at Goomghur and Mysaudul, but happily there is not much sickness of any kind in the station itself. We are still without a deputy magistrate, and it is to be regretted that the rumour about Mr. Lewis's deputation to this sub-division has proved to be groundless.—Hurkaru.

SIR JOHN BARLEYCORN IN INDIA.—The quantity of malt liquor received by the Commissariat during 1859-60 was:—Ale, 24,169 hogsheads; Porter, 29,210. Of the whole quantity consigned, 2,276 hogsheads of Ale and 724 of Porter were rejected. This is too small a quantity to justify the complaints of the English suppliers that their stores are rejected on frivolous grounds.

TO THE ENTERPRISING.—A lease of the Laku Singh Coal Mines in the Jinteah Hills is advertised by Government. Now that some new river boats are nearly ready, and the stagnation of trade in Calcutta has induced the I. G. S. N. Company to send two of their steamers up the Assam rivers, the inducement to risk capital in the Eastern districts is greater than it used to be.

DR. TAYLOR, C.B., inspector of hospitals, has been appointed to organise the Invalid Department established at the Cape of Good Hope for the China force.

SUMBULPORE, May 23.—The district is fast settling down, and, with the exception of two or three ryots' heads cut off from time to time by small outlying parties of choars, nothing is stirring. The heat is something that must be felt to be appreciated; 110 in the shade is a common figure just now, and on several days the lowest temperature registered has been 93 deg. Eating is out of the question; this is rather fortunate as sheep are not to be procured for love or money. Drinking, too, down here is rather an expensive amusement, the cost of getting down stores is something frightful. Perhaps this may account for the newly-appointed adjutant of the Shekawattie Battalion throwing up his appointment; it was only to be expected that "clay" would require moistening with the thermometer at 110. On the other hand it should be borne in mind that the place is not easy of access to bailiffs; what with fever and choars they never get in alive. Rather an important consideration for most Queen's officers I should imagine. It is hard lines that Queen's men should be shoved in as they have been lately, and they really should not be allowed the additional privilege of selecting their appointments. The Shekawattie lines were entirely burnt down on the 8th, not a hut was spared. Fears were entertained that the European bungalows would catch fire; a shed in all the Commissioner's compound actually did so, and was burnt to the ground; it was only by the greatest exertions that the fire was prevented from extending further. I am sorry to say that several lives were lost. Some poor creatures took refuge in an old pukka building, attached to an indigo factory formerly in existence here, the place caught fire in some mysterious manner, and they all perished miserably. The lines are now being rebuilt in a more "convenient" situation. We are looking forward to the advent of the rains; another month of this weather would, I really believe, dry up every European in the place.—Hurkaru.

THE PRESS SNUBBED.—The Hurkaru is indignant with Mr. Seton Karr, in refusing accommodation to his reporters at the sitting of the commission on the indigo question. Mr. Karr declared that "it was against the wish of the commission that the proceedings of the commission should be published. If the reporters chose to get a table for themselves, he had no objection to their placing it in the room." This was very uncivil treatment of the reporters by Mr. Karr. If the colonisation committee which sat in England some months ago had refused accommodation to the reporters of newspapers in the same uncourteous manner, what would the public at home have thought of their conduct?

CALCUTTA SMALL CAUSE COURT.—The operations of the Calcutta Small Cause Court during the past official year show a profit to Government of Rs. 704. The income was Rs. 110,915, and the expenditure, Rs. 103,274. The number of summonses issued was 51,405, a decrease since last year when it was 70,012. The cases decided in favour of the plaintiff numbered 12,447 against only 1,412 for the defendant. 6,132 cases were nonsuited. The Madras Court can never succeed in paying its expenses.

PRINCIPALITY OF DHAR.—After repeated orders from the Secretary of State for India to the Governor-general, the latter has at last consented to give up the principality of Dhar to the young Rajah. Possession is, however, according to the correspondent of a western contemporary, not to be rendered up till the Rajah attains his majority (he is now fifteen), and in the meantime the principality is to be managed by British officers.

RAIN RETURNS.—Dr. Buist, Superintendent of the Government Press, and Editor of the Government Gazette, North-Western Provinces, has addressed a letter to the Bombay Gazette with regard to rain returns. From this letter we learn that this season the returns will be made with more than ordinary minuteness. Dr. Buist says:—

"They are expected to appear weekly in the Gazette, prefaced by a careful analysis. The result of these will be summarised and analysed monthly, a minute examination of these data winding up the wet season. In 1855 the Bombay telegraphic department purchased a large supply of barometers with the view of telegraphing from out-stations, as is done in Europe on the approach of storms. Had warning been given only six hours before of the approach of the hurricane of November, 1854, several lakhs worth of property, and hundreds of human lives sacrificed in Bombay harbour for want of precaution, might have been saved. Rain gauges are being established all along the lines of the railway here; seventeen hundred rupees have been sanctioned for the purchase of meteorological instruments for the railway department, and I have no doubt that, before a twelvemonth elapses you will see the whole of these arrangements harmonized into a beautiful system for the investigation of the phenomena of climate, both in relation to their bearings on pure physics and on the practical ends of every-day life. We have no observatory, no universities or colleges, no learned societies at Allahabad—at present we have not so much as a station library—things all in existence at Bombay. But we have in place a body of enlightened, earnest, upright public men, bent on the extension of our knowledge and the improvement of the country, and these make up for the want of other appliances."

EXPORTS (Calcutta, June 4).—Indigo.—The season progresses favourably in the eastern districts of Bengal; the sowings in the disturbed districts have not been completed, but the promise is good on the lands sown. The Government have deceived the planters in their proposed law to coerce the refractory ryots. By private instructions the law has been rendered nugatory, and the planters have now only their remedy in the civil courts, by which the ryots may be serious losers hereafter; but in the mean time the indigo season is lost. In some districts rain is much wanted, particularly in Poorena and Tihrot; their prospects now seriously depend on an early fall of rain. In the Benares districts the Khoontes, which suffered from the frosts, is now showing its weakness. In the Jompare and neighbouring districts there is a difficulty in obtaining lands at a moderate rent, in consequence of the high price of all agricultural produce. In the North-West great activity prevails, and the natives, as well as Europeans, are extending their cultivation; as the prospects of Bengal fall off those of the planters in the North-West Provinces improve. The crop will probably in the aggregate not be less than usual, extraordinary circumstances excepted. Silk Piece Goods.—Some sales were effected in Calcutta before receipt of the news of the 3rd May sales by telegram via Marseilles, since which buyers have entirely withdrawn from the market, and it is difficult to quote prices. Holders, on the other hand, are firm in their demands, and do not offer their goods. In Choppas, Bundaband, and Tossers nothing done. Sugar.—A very limited amount of business has been done for Great Britain at former prices. Saltpetre.—With a quiet market, and more abundant supplies, this article has further declined in value, and the last sales of 5 per cent. refraction have been at Rs. 9-4 to 9-8 per maund. Six per cent. has been sold at Rs. 8-12 to 8-14. Even at these prices there are not many buyers, and we believe that a larger reduction in value will soon have to be made to tempt buyers. Rice.—Business is entirely confined to purchases for Mauritius, at about Rs. 2 as 6 for Ballum. Shell Lac.—In moderate demand at for ner prices. There are but few buyers for this gum. Lac Dye.—A better, though not a large, demand has sprung up for this dye, and prices are a shade in favour of sellers. Hides.—Shippers for England purchase with great caution, and prices have given way. The supply from the interior continues ample, though the purchases have been extensive for the Continent of Europe. Buffalo hides are in demand for the United States, though not much doing in cow hides. Goat skins in moderate request. Wool and Hemp.—Wool continues quiet, an occasional purchase now and then only being made to fulfil engagements. In Hemp nothing doing. Oilseeds.—Linsed in fair demand at full former prices to a slight advance. We quote common to good small grain at Rs. 2-10 to 2-14; best picked small grain, Rs. 3; bold Patna, Co.'s Rs. 3-2 to 3-4 per md. Rapeseed in good demand, principally on account of local crushers, at Co.'s Rs. 2-14 to 3-2 per md. Teal and Poppy sell at Co.'s Rs. 2-14 to 3-2 per md. Imports (Calcutta, June 4).—Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings.—Market continues generally inactive, and prices of some description have further receded, whereas others have been required at an advance of 1 to 2 per piece; 39 inches, 50 reeds, at Co.'s Rs. 3-11 to 3-12; do., 54 do., at 4-3; do., 56 do., at 4-14 to 4-15; do., 60 do., at 5-14; 45 inches, at 4-9 to 4-8; 64 do., at 8-0. White Shirtings.—Nominally same as before; 38 inches, 50 reeds, at Co.'s Rs. 4-1 to 4-2; do., 54 do., 4-6; do., 60 do., at 6-2 to 6-4. Grey Jacquets.—There is not much change to notice in the value of these goods; 39 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1-7 to 2-7; 45 do. at 2-10 to 2-15. White Jacquets are also lower in value; 38 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1-10 to 1-30; 45 do. at 2-1 to 2-0. Grey Madapollams have further declined in value; 32 inches, 42 reeds, at Co.'s Rs. 1-15 to 2-0; do., 60 do., at 2-2 to 2-3; do., 56 do., at 2-5 to 2-6. White Madapollams.—Without change; 48 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 2-4; 60 do. at 2-6; 62 do. at 3-8. Cambrics have receded in value; 60 inches, 24 yards, at Co.'s Rs. 3-11; 60 do. at 4-11. White Twills are two annas per piece lower than before; 36 inches, 40 yards, at Co.'s Rs. 5-4. Mull Mulls are dull of sale, and prices are lower; Grey 39 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1-2 to 2-6; do., 45 do., at 2-11 to 2-15; White 39 do. at 1-6 to 2-10; do., 45 do., at 3-2. Book Muslins are in some demand at previous rates. Turkey Red Goods.—The demand for these goods has greatly fallen off; 24 inches Cambrics at Rs. 3-3 to 3-4; 33 do. at 4-7 to 4-9. Prints and Chintzes.—No inquiry. Woollens remain depressed. Coloured Yarns.—Turkey Reds are in dull request, but Orange and Green are in demand at our quotations. Turkey Red, English Dye, at Co.'s Rs. 1-5 to 1-6; do., German do., at 1-6 to 1-8; Orange at 0-14-8; Green at 0-14-6. White Mule Twist.—The market for this staple is rather inactive, but for the further decline of prices some transactions have been made. No 20 at 0-8-3; do. 30 at 0-5-9 to 0-6-0; do. 40 at 0-4-9 to 0-5-3; do. 50 at 0-4-2; do. 60, 70, and 80 at 0-3-10; do. 90 and 100 at 0-3-8.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—We (Athenæum) understand that Sir Henry Davidson, the Chief Justice of her Majesty's Supreme Court, has granted himself fresh leave of absence for several months, and has departed for the hills, leaving his colleague to do the double duty of the Court in his absence. There is nothing astonishing in this, seeing that the chief, throughout his career here, has thrown the burthen of his work upon the shoulders of the Puisne Justice, but both Sir Adam Bittlesome and the public are entitled to ask how long this state of things is to last without remedy? Two Judges are to be paid for doing the work of the Supreme Court, and it is rather too bad that the bulk of it should devolve on the one who receives the smallest remuneration.

WOOD FOR SHIPBUILDING.—The Store-Keeper-General of her Majesty's navy having made inquiry as to certain wood, stated to be the produce of Malabar, suitable for shipbuilding—it being large, straight, long, and strong—the Secretary of State referred the matter to the Bombay Government for an early report. By the Bombay Government it was referred to that of Madras, and the result of observations and inquiries made by Dr. Cleghorn, Conservator of Forests, is that there is such a wood. It is confined to the western coast, and is particularly abundant at an elevation of 3,000 feet in Malabar, Cochin, and Travancore, where it is much used for canoes, ferry-boats, and house building. Its native name is "Angelee," and botanical name artocarpus hirsuta. It stands next to teak in the estimation of shipbuilders, and Dr. Cleghorn is of opinion, having all the facts before him, that "3,000 loads of the dimensions stated, might be exported annually at a cost not exceeding Rs. 14 per candy—the greater portion being attained in Cochin and Travancore, and a smaller quantity in Malabar." The opening up of the proposed road from the Anamallay Hills to the Cochin Backwater, and of the "Carour" Ghaut in Malabar, would facilitate the delivering of the wood. The reports containing this information were forwarded to the Bombay Government and the Chief Engineer ("for his information") on the 19th of May.

INAM COMMISSION.—The number of cases decided by the deputy-collectors during the month of April was 5,880, which raised the total number of cases decided from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of April to 46,648. Besides these, the total number of village service Inams recorded up to the end of April is 3,145. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of April, was 38,483, of which 2,504 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character, 22,905 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 13,620 were personal grants enfranchised compulsorily; and 364 were personal grants not enfranchised, but confirmed on present tenures. The number of Title Deeds issued up to the end of last month was 25,856. The total amount of Quit-rent now payable to Government in addition to former jodi is Rs. 52,552, the amount paid in redemption of Quit-rent is 5,898-8-0. The combined Quit-rent annually payable to Government for the future upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders amounts to 1,03,164, which is nearly one-fourth of the full assessment of the lands, viz., 4,25,285.

MALABAR COAST, May 10.—The weather is most disagreeable on the coast, intolerably hot and oppressive. Yesterday evening it has been threatening with dark heavy clouds hovering above our heads; last night we had a heavy shower of rain, which has tended to cool the atmosphere. The sky continues overcast; to all appearance the south-west monsoon is about settling in. I regret to inform you that cholera is again making fearful ravages at Calicut and the Talooks south of Malabar—697 cases have been reported, of these five hundred and sixty seven died. The Malabar police corps has been incorporated with the newly raised police establishment; the Mountain Train attached to that corps has been transferred to the European detachment of H. M.'s 66th Regiment, stationed at Malliappooram. Lieutenant C. G. Bloomfield, Commandant of the Malabar police corps, has been appointed Superintendent, and Lieutenant R. C. Lavie, the Adjutant, Assistant-superintendent of Police of North Malabar. The detachment of the 18th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, under the command of Captain S. J. Batten, stationed at Calicut, has been ordered to join regimental head-quarters at Cannanore, their duties being taken up by the newly-raised police force.—Englishman.

COPPER CURRENCY.—To meet the scarcity of copper coin in the interior, the Madras Government has directed the payment of a certain portion of disbursements in small coin when desired by the payees. Officers of the Public Works Department are to be furnished with copper coins to enable them to pay their workpeople. The Board of Revenue is considering the propriety of coining silver annas, and of giving change for rupees at public treasuries. Although Birmingham has been at last indented on for small coin by the Government of India, the quantity ordered will be but a drop in the ocean. In Northern India we never met with a piece coined at the mint ten miles from a Sudder station. Even when the new machinery is set up in India, the mint supply will be insufficient.

CHINGLEPUT.—The Merasidar landholders of Chingleput have been allowed by the Collector to hold a meeting at Conjeeveram to protest against certain orders of the Revenue Board, which vitally affect their Merassee right in the land. The Teshildar is instructed to see that they do nothing to disturb the public peace. The complainants are to meet in a part of the great pagoda. Thus does the English custom of holding public meetings spread amongst the Madras ryots. Mr. Ellis, who was so prominent in recent Nagpore affairs, has been appointed to act as Collector of Chingleput. This is simple justice. We trust Captain Evans Bell will shortly be appointed to political duties out of Nagpore. We condemn the policy of both, but owing to Mr. Plowden's gross dilatoriness they have been grievously wronged.

THE LATE MAJOR MACPHERSON.—How is it—asks the Friend of India—that in a Madras journal only we find the following tribute to the services of the late Political Agent at Gwalior? It is addressed to Sir R. Shakespeare, Governor-general's Agent for Central India:—"Sir, I am directed to state that the Governor-general has received with deep regret the melancholy intelligence of the death of Major S. Charters Macpherson, of the Madras army, the Political Agent at Gwalior. Major Macpherson's services in the political department through a long course of years, especially the part he took in the suppression of human sacrifices and infanticide among the Khonds, have gained for him a high place in the long list of distinguished officers who have adorned the Indian service, and entitle him to the lasting gratitude of the Government and people of India. (Signed) CREIL BEADON."

THE 4TH REGIMENT N.I., under the command of Colonel Bird, arrived in Madras on the 28th May, from Rangoon, by the Sesostis and Fire Queen, disembarked in the afternoon, and proceeded to camp opposite the 1st Native Veteran Battalion lines, and to occupy the Veteran barracks.

EAST COAST RAILWAY.—Sir Charles Trevelyan has responded to the request of the Governor of Pondicherry to consider the feasibility of a railway to connect Madras with the French settlement and the Great Southern Line at Tanjore. The length of its course will be 200 miles. The cost is estimated at £7,000 a mile. The name proposed is "the East Coast Railway." It is to run from Madras via the Mount, Palaveram, Chingleput, Carangooly, Pondicherry, Cuddalore, Chellumbrum, Sheally, Mayaveram, and Combaconum to Tanjore. We fear the scheme is too large, unless English shareholders take it up. Government will not certainly give them a guarantee, nor will the French help them, even if allowed to do so. The mismanagement of railway matters in Madras has been already so gross, that we look upon all such plans with suspicion. With all our anxiety to see railways covering India, we would advise the Madras Government to wait till they can make the present line pay 5 per cent. The G. I. P. and E. I. Railways pay 7 and 8 per cent.

EUROPEAN COLONIZATION.—At the request of Sir C. Wood the Madras Board of Revenue have reported on the localities of the Presidency available for retired officers, commissioned and non-commissioned. They ask Government to make known its readiness to receive applications for freeholds from them, and to offer all military pensioners the option of settling on the Hills. They say, "the importance of encouraging Europeans to settle in this country cannot be overrated, and thousands of acres suited for such purposes are now lying waste." What a wonderful change the mutinies and the colonisation committee have wrought even on a board of revenue!

DAMNING WITH FAINT PRAISE.—It should be known to Sir Charles Trevelyan's credit that he has shown one slight instance of prudence during his administration. The tradesmen of Madras wished an interview to present him with an address expressive of their admiration at his conduct in the matter of the Minutes. He declined to receive them, but accepted the address. The occasion was too good for the re-assertion of his grievances, so that in his reply he must add—"he cannot allow that he is entitled to any credit for having done what it was his duty to do under the difficult circumstances in which he was placed." He considers it then his duty not only to publish an important State paper written by himself contrary to official rule, and the Minutes of his colleagues without their knowledge and to their great consternation, but to have published them surreptitiously.—Friend of India.

OOTACAMUND.—A letter from Dr. Davidson, superintending surgeon, Southern division, to the Director-general of the Medical department, has been referred by Government to the Collector of Coimbatore. It refers to the drainage and water supply of Ootacamund. In this letter Dr. Davidson points out that the lake at Ootacamund is the cesspool for the whole place, and that in course of time it will become in miniature what the Thames is to London. He recommends that the lake should be drained, and that the 50 or 60 acres which it now covers should be devoted to vegetable gardens. In this way the manure might be utilised, and a nuisance would be got rid of. If a lake or reservoir of water is required, it should be in a valley so elevated that the drainage of the station would not enter it, and thus be kept perfectly clean, to be used in any way as required.

A LIBERAL MINDED NATIVE.—Punyaswamy Deva, nephew of the Rani of Ramnad, and Manager of the Zemindari, has offered to place at the disposal of Government the sum of Rs. 1,200, for the purpose of founding an annual gold medal at the Zilla School of Madura, in the name of the Rani Zemindar of Ramnad; the medal to be given for the encouragement of the study of the Tamil language, under such regulations as may be approved of by Government.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—It is stated by the Rangoon Times of the 3rd May that the 15th and 39th regts. of Madras Infantry had received orders to return to Madras.

RAILWAY EXPENDITURE.—The sum disbursed in the Madras presidency up to April last, from the commencement of operation in March, 1853, was Rs. 281,16,294-14-1. From the 1st July, 1856, to April last, the total receipts were Rs. 17,51,537-0-7.

THE MADRAS SAPPER MILITIA—a corps raised during the time of Lord Harris—was to be disbanded on the 10th June. Men above five years' service were to rejoin their former corps; those under that period to be discharged, with one month's gratuity for each year of service.

WYNAAD.—Government has resolved to tax the coffee lands in Wynaad at the rate of two rupees per acre. The tax, however, is only to be paid on land actually under cultivation, and will not be levied till the third year, thus leaving the planting and succeeding year free from demand. Lands planted with grain or other crops are to be assessed at the same rate as other lands in the same talook. Planters may compound for a fixed assessment, and Government state that they will act liberally in this respect. The survey now going on in Wynaad, is for the purpose of ascertaining the boundaries of estates. This is to be done by the survey department; the detailed measurements necessary for a field settlement are to be undertaken afterwards, by a separate agency. The assessment on coffee lands is to come into operation in the official year 1860-61.

The junior scholarships and free studentships have been awarded as under:—To nine students, scholarships of the monthly value of Rs. 10, tenable for two years; and to five others, five of the same value, tenable for one year; besides free studentships to six more.

OPENING OF THE G. I. P. RAILWAY TO SHOLAPORE.—On Friday, 1st June, Captain Rivers, consulting engineer to Government, accompanied by the chief resident engineer, locomotive superintendent, assistant traffic manager, and a numerous party of other railway officials, inspected the new line from Mohol to Sholapore, which was opened to the public on the 6th. This section of 20 miles completes Mr. Bray's contract from Poona to Sholapore, a distance of 163 miles, and makes the entire length of railway now opened by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company 315 miles. The cantonment of Sholapore is the station that was chosen by the company for a temporary terminus during the period pending the completion of the through line from Bombay to Madras; and we are glad to learn that active measures are now being adopted, both by the Peninsula and Madras Companies, for the speedy construction of the whole of that important through line. Their point of junction is to be on the Moodgool and Lingasagoor road. The extensive contract now just finished by Mr. Bray, comprises the fine viaducts over the rivers Beema and Seena, and many other large works.

AN EASTERN BARATARIA.—In the Persian Gulf the aspect of affairs is hostile. The Governor of Bahrein is said to have hoisted the Persian flag, and ordered us off the island. Captain Jones went over in the Semiramis to remonstrate with him; but the Bahrein man refused to listen to reason. Captain Jones, therefore, returned to Muscat. Bahrein originally belonged to independent chiefs; and it is just possible, though not very probable, if they are supported by the Shah, that if we aid the cause of the Muscat prince, to whom the island now belongs by right of conquest, the result may be another Persian war.

TREASURY BILLS.—Government opened the tenders for the conversion of Treasury Bills at the Bank of Bombay on Saturday, the 2nd June. The tenders were granted as follows:—Four per Cent. at 83, Fives at 97, and Five-and-a-half per Cent. at 103. Upwards of 50 lacs were disposed of at those rates, principally into the Five-and-a-half per Cent. loan.

CAPTAIN HAINES, late of the Indian Navy, has at last been liberated from a confinement which he has suffered for the last six years as a debtor of the State. It is the first pardon granted by the new Governor, Sir George Clerk, and he could not have commenced his rule with a more graceful and welcome act of mercy.

MR. T. SELBY, uncovenanted head clerk in the Military Auditor General's office, has been appointed Assistant Military Auditor General, on a salary of Rs. 500 a month and Rs. 100 personal allowance. This appointment has been made consequent on the death of Capt. Forbes, and will for the first time be held now by an uncovenanted servant of Government. Mr. Charles Denton will be confirmed as head clerk in Mr. Selby's place.

NUSSEERABAD, May 22.—A few days ago two men of the detachment of the 12th regiment Bombay N.I., now stationed at Jeypoor, heard from some villagers that there was a leopard which had caused great alarm to the people of their gaum. They accompanied the villagers to the spot, where they found the leopard, and fired at, but missed him. The enraged brute charged one of the men, who received him with his bayonet fixed, inflicting a severe wound in the neck, whilst his comrade came to his assistance, and ran his bayonet into the leopard's body. They killed the brute, and presented the skin to Major Brooke, the political agent at Jeypoor, in whose possession it now is.

LIEUT. TAYLOR, of the Indian navy, having completed his survey of the Malabar coast, and having forwarded his reports, plans, &c., to the Madras Government, has been thanked for the valuable services he has rendered. In acknowledgment of them, a present of two thousand rupees has been passed to him; and his conduct has been brought to the notice of the Bombay Government.

PROSELYTISM.—The Rev. Mr. Abbott, of the Ahmednuggur mission, baptised on a recent Sabbath four persons at Rahoree, and on the subsequent Sabbath five at Shingvay; and the Rev. Mr. Barker, of the same mission, baptised four persons at Khokur. Two persons were not long since baptised at Sattara by the Rev. Mr. Wood. On a recent Sabbath the Rev. James Mitchell, of the Free Church Mission, baptised no less than thirteen persons on profession of their faith at Poona.

DUX FEMINA FACTI.—Miss Emma Stanley, who has recently been giving a series of entertainments in Calcutta and Madras, has so captivated the Parsees of Bombay that several of their ladies have for the first time appeared in public to witness her performances. The local journals notice the fact as "an epoch in Asiatic female history." Not long ago a Parsee merchant of Calcutta was always accompanied during the evening drive by his wife.

SLAVERY seems to be more active than ever on the Somali coast. In her last two trips the Lady Canning rescued 135 boys and girls at a spot not 120 miles from Aden. Notwithstanding our treaty of 1855 with the elders of the tribe, they would not surrender their captives till they were fired into. The whole trade of the coast, on which Aden depends for supplies and the great fair at Berbera for its success, suffers. The Bombay Gazette recommends the employment of two small steamers to watch the coast, and search all suspected native craft. Some of the finest districts in the interior of Africa are being depopulated. We have now a large number of Somali marriageable girls and boys under our protection. The boys are sent to Bombay, but to dispose of the girls is a serious matter. The Mussulmans say we have kidnapped them to make them Christians. French influence along the whole coast of Africa is really the cause of the increased activity of the slavers, and their disregard for treaties.

LESSA MAJESTAS.—The Government of Bombay, says the Hurkaru, has, in a recent letter, drawn the attention of the Supreme Government to the indifference with which it has lately been treated on the subject of the income-tax. The Government of Bombay states that the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab and the Chief Commissioner of Oude were severally consulted on the subject of the proposed new income-tax, whereas no such consultation was held with that Government. This may be construed by the world as the greatest insult which the Government of India can offer to the Government of a subordinate Presidency. The Governor-general in Council observed in reply to the above letter that as it is absolutely necessary to ascertain the feelings of the people of non-regulation districts before actually imposing any sort of tax, the Supreme Government thought proper to communicate with the local Governments of the Punjab and Oude on the subject. But as Bengal, Madras, and Bombay were regulation districts, no consultation with the local Governments was considered necessary before the Bill is passed into law. The above despatch is said to have been drafted by Mr. Wilson, and subsequently revised and polished by Lord Canning himself, and is couched in the most polite and conciliatory terms.

A GRACEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—At the request of Sir Bartle Frere, the Government of Bombay has presented Messrs. Morris, Ford, Bright, and Goulson, with mathematical instruments for having fitted together and launched, the four steamers of the Indus flotilla, Havelock, Lawrence, Outram, and Frere with their flats, during the crisis of 1857 at Keamaree, under unusual difficulties.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, May 23.—The London mail of the 10th of April arrived here on the 20th inst., but we are in possession of a telegram from London with one week's later news.

Sir Hope Grant still remains in Hong Kong, but preparations are making for his departure northward on the 30th of this month. General Sir Robert Napier has already left.

The continued delay of Lord Elgin excites disappointment, and it seems doubtful whether military operations can effect much, or almost anything, this year. A great portion of the British force is in movement for Chusan, where it is supposed that it is to rendezvous. The French force is reported to be about to rendezvous at Chee-foo, on the coast of Shan-tung and in the Gulf of Pechele; and there will be also a station for British stores and troops on the opposite side of the gulf. It is whispered that Sir Hope Grant may, perhaps, occupy Tien-tsin before he attempts to take the Taku Forts.

The island of Chusan has been placed in charge of an Allied Commission, composed of Mr. Hughes, of her Majesty's Consular Service, M. de Méritens, Attaché to the French Legation, and Captain Gritton, R.N. They have published proclamations intimating their authority, and forbidding any one to establish himself at Ting-hai without their permission.

There has been a rumour lately in Canton that the Emperor, who (being beyond Professor Holloway's reach) is afflicted with "a bad leg of many years' standing," has died from it, and that Senn-kolinsin has been made Emperor. To this no credit need be attached. Prince Senn, however, is the man of the day in China, being greatly respected for his upright determined character. It is out of his own private purse that he supports his troops, and he is quite a popular hero.

We are sorry to have to report that the rebels in the Canton province have again been successful, the money for buying them up not having been forthcoming on the day it was promised. They immediately attacked a force of Mandarin soldiers, and killed or took prisoners 500 of them, together with a number of war boats. Troops have been ordered up to meet them from another part of the province, but before these can arrive the marauders may commit much injury, and they have already destroyed some of the new tea. There are thousands of refugees in Canton from the disturbed districts, and both Chinese and foreign merchants have come forward to their relief. Many of them have also been employed in filling up the site for the foreign settlement, which is now in a forward state of preparation, the wall round it being in great part completed, and at least two-thirds of the space within filled up.

In the north, also, the rebels have obtained some success. They have forced the Imperialists to raise the siege of Nankin, have captured much of their arms, and have compelled them to disperse. Between Nankin and Hangchow the Imperialists are at a great discount, but between Pekin and the Yang-tsze the rebellion has been put down for the present. In Cheh-kiang the Tai-pings have had great success, under a celebrated leader, who overran Kiang-si a few years ago. Some parts of the country where these rebels have been are described as changed into a complete desert, entire towns being annihilated; but this we regard as a piece of Chinese exaggeration.

At Ningpo the Chinese steamer Paoushun has had an encounter with pirates, and run a pirate boat down. A good deal of excitement has been caused among the people in the city, by a placard which had been posted about, stating that the allied troops were about to take possession of it and of Tinghae.

In Japan, doubts have ceased in regard to the death of the Regent. In Yedo the houses of the foreign ministers are examined every night, lest any persons intending mischief should be concealed in them. The British Commissariat is trying very hard to procure one thousand horses there for service in China, and the Governor of Yokohama is said to have applied to the foreigners in order to purchase all the firearms they can spare for the services of Government.

From Amoy we have the intelligence that his Imperial Majesty's screw steamer Iseru, going into harbour, struck on the end of Kulansoo, and soon became a total wreck. She was loaded with shot, shell, and coals, and there were troops on board, who were saved.

In local matters there is nothing stirring. An action for libel brought by Mr. Caldwell against the editor of the Daily Press has been twice postponed, on account of the illness of the defendant. The members of the Club have reconsidered the rules which have proved offensive to officers of the army and navy, and have resolved to adhere to them.

At Swatow, Mr. McCann, a European in the Chinese Customs' service, has been murdered by six Cantonese carpenters, who attacked him with their axes, and quickly despatched him.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, June 11.—The topic of leading interest in the colony at this moment is the approaching departure of Sir Henry Ward, to take up his appointment as Governor of Madras, which reached him by the mail of May the 10th. His Excellency intends to meet the Legislative Council on the 19th. On that occasion he will doubtless review and defend his own policy, and trace the progress of the colony during his five years' rule of Ceylon. His government has been an energetic one, and on the whole successful. It will be matter of regret to him as much as to the colonists, that he does not leave the Railway question in a more satisfactory position; while, as regards the immigration scheme all the regret will be ours in the removal of Sir H. Ward to a sphere, where it will be his interest and his duty to leave as few inducements as possible to the labouring classes to seek for employment beyond the limits of their own Presidency. Sir Henry will not, we are sure, impede emigration to Ceylon; but we may rely on it, that under his rule, public works and coffee planting will not stand still in Southern India.

The subject of a testimonial to Sir H. Ward, has been started, and will, no doubt, be followed up. His Excellency has already an almost unexampled testimonial in the address to the Queen, requesting that he might be kept here even at an advance of salary. We suspect that address has contributed in no slight degree to influence the course of the ministry in the choice of a successor to Sir Charles Trevelyan, thus leading to the very result the memorialists deprecated. Nevertheless—and notwithstanding some altered feeling arising from the railway and immigration questions—the vast majority of the colonists rejoice in Sir H. Ward's good fortune, and regret his loss.

"Take him for all in all,
We ne'er shall look upon his like again."

We hope, however, that a good and able man will be sent to steer the colony safely through the crisis at which it has now arrived.

Sir C. Trevelyan, it is understood, has telegraphed to the effect that he will resign his Government on the 18th instant, and quit Madras by the steamer immediately following. He has intimated, that if Sir H. Ward meets him at Galle, he will be ready to communicate all the information desirable, and we believe Sir H. Ward will meet him as suggested.

A steamer is to be sent from Madras specially for the use of Sir H. Ward, so that his Excellency will embark at Colombo.

Besides the departure of Sir H. Ward we have an approaching change in the Supreme Court to notice; for it is quite understood that the acting Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Sterling has intimated his wish to retire.

Yesterday the steamer Salsette reached Galle, bringing our new Chief Justice and his rather multitudinous followers. We hail Sir M. S. Creasy as a true Colonist, as no mean acquisition to the Service and society of the Island—and we trust his career in Ceylon may enable him to record a chapter in modern history equally pleasant to himself and useful to the island.

Until within the last few days, the weather at Colombo has continued hot and dry, and the exports of coffee have gone on to some extent. The addition to the exports of the season amounts to 29,726 cwt., in the proportion of 27,636 plantation, and 2,090 native. All the coffee has gone to Britain: four ships have cleared for London and one for Liverpool. The total shipments to this date are precisely the same as those to the corresponding date last year—half a million cwt. in each case—but the proportions are very different. This season we have 360,000 cwt. of plantation against 329,000 last season, an increase of 31,000 cwt. The decrease on native is precisely the same as the increase on plantation. It is evident that this season will show the largest crop of plantation ever sent from Ceylon. The exports to 30th September, 1859, reached 406,898 cwt., although only 329,000 had been sent away to middle of June, and we believe that, from various causes, a good deal more coffee has been kept back this season than last. We shall probably, at the end of the season, again reach the limit of 600,000 cwt., although this time the proportions will likely be plantations, 440,000; native, 160,000. The exports of our other staples—cinnamon, coconut oil, and coir, are considerably in excess of those for the corresponding period of last season.

Coconut oil has fluctuated, but 1859 shewed an increase of £10,000 over 1855; cinnamon an increase of £17,000; and arrack no less than £24,000; timber £19,000; vegetable oils, lemon grass, &c., £1,600; precious stones and pearls, £26,000; tobacco, £3,000; arrecanuts, £2,000; coir, £1,000; chanks, £6,000; Plumbago, £3,000.

There is, on the other hand, a decrease of £10,000 in the value of copperah, or dried coconut kernels, exported, while cocoanuts show the same amount, but have risen largely in local value, for while 3,319,000 were only valued at £6,545 in 1855, a quantity equal to 2,566,000 in 1859 was valued at £8,414. Horns are stationary, and jaggery shows a decrease; indeed, this article is largely imported. Rum also shows a decrease.

Imports re-exported show a decrease of £36,000. Specie and bullion increased by £77,000, but, as in the case of precious stones and pearls, the returns are defective, as large quantities on the persons or in the packages of passengers are not included.

Our export trade of every kind has increased thus:—1855, £1,974,000; 1859, £2,524,000; increase, £550,000. In the import trade the advance has been equally marked.

Our obituary, on this occasion, includes the names of two well-known members of the planting community, Messrs. R. D. Gerard, and W. Cohen. Mr. Gerard sunk under long continued debility; Mr. Cohen is another victim to the dreadful dysentery of Ceylon. We have to add the name of Staff Assistant-surgeon Gorman, who died of consumption. We have heard, also, with regret, of the death of two officers formerly well known in Ceylon. Col. Hope, R.E., and Major Driberg, late of the Ceylon Rifles.

Our accounts from the interior seem to prove that rain, though still in scanty supply, is now falling pretty generally; and that the loss of crop, even in the lower districts, will not be so great as was at one time expected. Gentlemen who have just come through Kornegalle tell us that there is no harm done, even there; and at Kaigalle rain has fallen for the last three or four days. As for the high mountain districts, of course the season to them has been favourable from its dryness.

By the Benares which left on the 9th, a good many passengers quitted Ceylon. Amongst them was Archdeacon Mathias, and we fancy all who have the interests of sober religion at heart, will join in the fervent wish that he may find employment out of Ceylon—or that he may return gifted with a little ordinary discretion and delicacy of feeling.

The Candia takes from our shores the oldest remaining European coffee planter. Mr. Wm. Rudd visits his native land after an absence in Ceylon of 29 years. Mr. Rudd intends hither to return after a short sojourn in England.

Mr. R. B. Tytler has been gazetted a member of the Legislative Council; and a number of Civil appointments are notified.

The Rev. J. K. Clarke, Presbyterian Chaplain, Galle, went home in the Benares, carrying with him a testimonial of esteem from his congregation. The Rev. J. Rippon, of the Wesleyan mission, is to act for Mr. Clarke during his absence. —Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.

By the Dutch mail steamer we have Java papers to the 8th May:—

During the preceding fortnight no intelligence had been received from Banjermassing. The setting in of the dry weather and the reinforcements of troops which had been sent there it was hoped would enable vigorous measures to be adopted against the insurgents, but it was questioned whether the military force was sufficiently large to put down the insurrection at once. One consequence of the disturbances is that the coal mines are not worked, and there appears no prospect of their being speedily re-opened, as we notice a large number of labourers formerly engaged in them have returned to Java. The Dutch Government has therefore been obliged to advertise in Europe for the delivery of not less than 30,000 tons of coal in Netherlands India, which will cost about 2,000,000fl.

The rainy and stormy weather prevailing in Java during the greater part of April had undergone a favourable change, and the coffee, sugarcane, and rice crops on the whole promised well.

The troops which had returned to Batavia from the expedition to Boni were entertained in a liberal manner by the public.

The telegraphic communication between Batavia and Muntok as well as between the latter place and Singapore is interrupted. The necessity for having a new cable between Batavia and Singapore is being discussed.

The N.I. barque Fatul Kariem, with 500 tons on board, was completely destroyed by fire at Ternate on the 7th April.

Pirates are again beginning to make their appearance in the seas of the Archipelago. Accounts having been received at Batavia that they had been observed in the vicinity of Bawean, three steamers were immediately sent out in search of them. On the 20th April nine large pirate prahus appeared off the island Sapudi to the N.E. of Madura, and a number of the pirates landed, but they were driven off. During the latter part of March different parts of the coast of Celebes and the neighbouring islands were visited by pirates. On the island Kapoasang they surprised three men, eight women, and a child burning lime. They killed the men, and carried off the women and child. A native trader who had arrived at Makassar from Pare Pare reported that he had seen four pirate prahus near the island Puti Anjing, proceeding in a northern direction.

The nutmeg collection at Banda during the month of February amounted to 47,844 lbs. nutmegs and 14,309 lbs. mace.

The crop during 1860 promises to be a very heavy one, but there is a great scarcity of labour, and provisions and supplies of all kinds are very dear.

On the evening of the 28th March, about 8 o'clock, a very severe horizontal earthquake took place, accompanied by frightful subterranean noises.

May 24.—The news from Banjermass containing accounts of numerous military expeditions in different directions against the insurgents, ending in the defeat of the latter whenever they make a stand, but it appears evident that the military force in Banjermassing is at present inadequate to the duty imposed upon it. It is found impossible to follow up the successes over the insurgents, the scanty numbers of the columns sent out making it necessary after a certain time to return to their fortified posts. The Batavia Handelsblad is of opinion that the insurrection in the kingdom of Banjermassing is far from being ended, and that unless large reinforcements are made to the troops there, the reduction of the country to order will be a very tedious business and attended with the sacrifice of many valuable lives. In the last affairs two officers, Lieut. van Dam van Ysselt, and Lieut. J. M. D. T. de Jongh, were killed.

Cholera made its appearance about the middle of April in one of the districts of Java, and out of 29 persons attacked 26 died before medical aid could be afforded. A number of patients were afterwards treated by a native doctor, and up to the latest accounts they were progressing to recovery. They were given what is styled the well-known cholera mixture, in the use of which the natives are said to have great faith. Smallpox also prevails to a considerable extent in some parts of Java and in other quarters of Netherlands India.

In the Benecoolen Residency a fatal epidemic appears to be raging amongst the wild animals in the jungles. Besides the bodies of many deers and other animals, those of 26 elephants had been found which had evidently died from this disease. —Singapore Free Press.

3rd.—With neglect of duty as regimental orderly officer of the day, at Umballa, on April 4, in having failed to visit the quarter, rear, hospital, and mess guards of the regt., in the course of that night.

4th.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Umballa, on April 5, in his report as relieved regimental orderly officer of the day, falsely stated that he had visited the regimental guards at ten and eleven o'clock the preceding night.

Registration of Money Packages by Railway.

Id. Qrs., Simla, May 4.—The C. in C. desires to notify, for the information of officers and soldiers travelling by rail, that it is necessary that all boxes containing money or other valuable private property should have their contents declared, and the packages specially booked; the extra charge specified in the Railway Act, Section X., being paid.

Without these precautions the railway authorities are not responsible for their safe custody or transit.

Thanks to the Bengal Native Infantry Brigade lately in China.

No. 557.—Fort William, May 26.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has great satisfaction in publishing for general information the subjoined copy of a General Order, dated Canton, April 5, 1860, issued by Maj. gen. Sir C. Van Straubenzee, K.C.B., commanding the troops in China [47th N.I., 65th N.I., 70th N.I.], on the occasion of the return to India from that command of the three regts. of Bengal N.I. above-named, after the completion of two years' service in China.

These regts. volunteered for service in that country at the time when the body of the Bengal native army swerved from its allegiance and rose in arms against the State. They were again entrusted with their arms, and the Gov. gen. in Council allowed them to proceed to China in full reliance on their loyalty.

That reliance has been entirely justified by the exemplary conduct of these regts. in China, and the Gov. gen. in Council, while publicly recording circumstances so creditable to these corps, tenders to Brigadier W. R. Corfield, and to the officers of the 47th, 65th, and 70th regts., the cordial acknowledgments of the Governments of India for having maintained these corps in the state of order and discipline described by Maj. gen. Van Straubenzee.

These regts. will proceed to the stations assigned to them; and will, under the orders of H.E. the C. in C., enjoy the full benefit of add. furl. to their homes, which forms one of the privileges of foreign service.

Canton, April 5, 1860.

DIVISION AFTER ORDER.—H.M.'s 70th Bengal N.I. having embarked, and the 65th being on the eve of returning to India, the brigade of Bengal N.I. in China will cease to exist.

Maj. Gen. Sir Charles Van Straubenzee takes the opportunity of recording his cordial thanks to Brigd. Corfield for the ready support he, not only as a brigadier, but as next senior officer in the command, has at all times afforded him; and also for the order and high state of discipline he, with the assistance of the officers commanding corps, has maintained in his brigade, against which there has not been a single complaint on the part of the inhabitants of this vast city during the two years they have been quartered here.

The Bengal brig. left India volunteers for service in China at a time when their former comrades of the late Indian army were in a state of open mutiny and revolt, and their conduct here has been such as to prove the sincerity of their loyalty to their Sovereign the Queen of England.

Their obedience to orders, respect for their officers, uncomplaining conduct under difficulties incident to their position, in a land where the customs are so utterly foreign to their own, merit the Major gen.'s praise.

The Maj. gen. congratulates all on their return to India, and assures them they carry with them his best wishes.

By order of H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India in Council, R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen., Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Rules for Retirement.

No. 569.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 148, of the 14th April, 1860, is published for general information:—I have had under my consideration in council the rule under which officers of twenty-two years' Indian service are entitled to retire on the pay of their regimental rank. This privilege, which is granted to officers under the joint operation of the regulations of 1796 and 1854, may in some case be rendered inoperative by the regulation of 1801, which precludes them from claiming for retirement the benefit of which they may attain after the expiration of twelve months from the date of their landing in England. It has therefore been resolved to rescind this restrictive rule so far as it affects the cases of officers who, after twenty years' Indian service counting for retiring pension, may return to this country on leave, and to allow such officers to claim for retirement the benefits of any rank they may attain prior to the expiration of their twenty-two years' service.

Return Home of Sir W. O'Shaughnessy.

Copy of a Minute by Lord Canning, Governor General of India, on the departure of Sir William O'Shaughnessy, knight, superintendent of electric telegraphs in India and Ceylon.

Sir William O'Shaughnessy, the superintendent of the electric telegraph, has obtained leave of absence to proceed to England.

As I understand that his return to India is doubtful, and as in any case it is little likely to take place in my time, I wish to place on record my sense of the value of Sir William O'Shaughnessy's ability and energy, in extending and maintaining during the last four years the gigantic work of the Indian telegraph, with which his name is lastingly associated.

The grateful duty of recommending Sir William O'Shaughnessy for distinction fell to my predecessor, and the superintendent's subsequent labours have consisted mainly in maturing and carrying into new provinces the work which he had then already securely established. But it would be ungrateful in me if I were not to testify my high appreciation of his services in this respect, and my regret at being deprived of them.

By the departure of Sir William O'Shaughnessy, the Government of India loses an officer of great ability in the walk of science to which he has devoted himself, and of remarkable energy.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA.—The following resolutions were adopted on the 9th inst., by the Committee of the Church Missionary Society in reference to the Duke of Marlborough's recent motion respecting "the authoritative exclusion of the Word of God from the course of education afforded in the Government colleges and schools" in India:—

1. "That this committee are thankful to record the fact that no less than 1,950 petitions have been presented to the House of Lords from all parts of the United Kingdom, in favour of the removal of the restriction upon the Bible in Government schools in India; that these petitions were sent up on a very short notice of the Duke's intended motion, without organized efforts to procure them, and under many other disadvantages.

2. "That the thanks of this society are due to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough for his able, Christian, and determined advocacy of the cause of Bible instruction; and that his grace be respectfully requested to print his speech, and to allow this society to aid in its general circulation.

3. "That the thanks of this society are also due to the Right Hon. the President and Vice-Presidents, who on this occasion have aided the cause in their places in Parliament.

4. "That this committee regard the recent expression of public opinion and the proceedings in the House of Lords as having greatly helped forward the cause of Bible education in India, and being fully persuaded that the removal of the authoritative restriction which now exists will be a safe as well as a Christian policy, they cherish the hope that her Majesty's Ministers may see it right to provide for such removal before the next session of Parliament; for should this hope be disappointed, the object, they are persuaded, will be demanded by a far more general and powerful expression of opinion than on the present occasion."

FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS SERVING IN INDIA.—During the year 1859 the Emigration Commissioners chartered, under direction from the Horse Guards, 13 vessels for the conveyance to India of soldiers' wives and families. Of these four sailed from Gravesend, three from Liverpool, three from Plymouth, and three from Southampton; six sailed to Calcutta, three to Kurrachee, two to Bombay, and two to Madras. The number of emigrants conveyed in these vessels amounted to 5,237 souls, equal to 2,547 statute adults; of whom 163 were adult males, 2,384 adult females, 1,376 boys, and 1,314 girls. The number of deaths that occurred on board 11 of the ships, of which returns have been received, amounted to 412, or 0.08 per cent.; the mortality was the smallest among the adults, being only .05 per cent., and the largest among those of four years of age and under, amounting to nearly 32 per cent. on the whole. The principal diseases were measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and diarrhoea.

EUROPEAN SETTLERS IN INDIA.—A deputation waited on Sir Charles Wood on Tuesday to urge the Indian Government to promote English settlement in the plains of India, for the cultivation of cotton, sugar, flax, and other products, by encouraging the construction of canals for irrigation and navigation. Mr. Ewart, M.P., chairman of the late Committee on Colonisation and Settlement in India, introduced the deputation. Proposals for canalising Scinde and the Punjab, Gujerat, and Khandeish have been submitted.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

RAILWAY COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

It may at first sight appear singularly inopportune to recommend the immediate commencement of a railway through the Turkish dominions at a moment when fanatical barbarians are massacring helpless Christians, and the power of the Sultan's Government is set openly at defiance. A little reflection, however, will show that there is nothing so likely to prevent the future occurrence of such deplorable outrages as the increase of Christian influence and the introduction of European civilisation. It is probable, indeed, that if the contemplated line from Seleucia to Aleppo, and thence to Bagdad, had been even in course of construction, the present disturbances would never have taken place. The English Ambassador at Constantinople would have taken care that the safety of his countrymen and the protection of their property were efficiently provided for by the presence of a reliable force of Turkish soldiery. The very stations on the line—fortified, as they would have been to repel a sudden assault—would have afforded a secure asylum to the fugitives, if the Druses had still ventured to attack their harmless neighbours. Instead of fleeing in vain to Damascus and other cities of the plain, the trembling Maronites would have made their way northwards, and by means of the railway would speedily have found themselves in safety at Seleucia under the guns of European men-of-war. Unfortunately, at the time when the Euphrates route to India was brought to the notice of the Porte, the British ministry was tamely subservient to the Emperor of the French, and that magnanimous potentate had no wish to see English enterprise and capital gain a footing in the heart of the Turkish empire. The French Ambassador at Constantinople was accordingly instructed to oppose the scheme by every means in his power, while the British Government withdrew their support from their own subjects, and played into the hands of their deceitful and selfish ally. The principal obstacles had already been removed. The Arab Sheikhs had agreed, in consideration of a yearly tribute, or black mail, not only to abstain from annoyance, but also to furnish every assistance within their means. It is needless to point out the immense benefit that must have accrued to the cities and districts along the line of the proposed railway. Real and artificial wants would have arisen in every direction to stimulate industry and commerce, develop the latent resources of the country, and humanize the people. Equally superfluous it must be to insist upon the advantage both to India and to this country of more rapid, frequent, and certain intercommunication. Mr. W. P. Andrew, the indefatigable and far-sighted chairman of the Company, has placed the chief points to be considered in such a clear light that we feel it unnecessary to apologise for the length of the following extract from a letter addressed by him to one of the most influential of the London daily papers:—

Placing India and England, he says, in hourly telegraphic communication is a first necessity, and this with a railway 800 miles in length, of singularly easy construction, from Seleucia, on the Mediterranean, by the plains of the Euphrates and Tigris to Bussorah, on the Persian Gulf, would give England the first strategic position in the world.

On behalf of this route I would remark—

1. It would save 1,000 miles in distance, and half the time now occupied.
2. That both its termini being on open seas, are easily defensible by England.
3. That the Euphrates Railway throughout its whole length is far removed from the Asiatic frontier of Russia.
4. This railway, taken in conjunction with the system of steam transit now being established in the valley of the Indus from Kurrachee to Lahore, the large force stationed in the Punjab and Upper India would be rendered of incalculable importance by steamers in the Persian Gulf uniting the line of the Indus with that of the Euphrates, for in that case any hostile force advancing towards the Indus would not only be met on the line of that river, but would be threatened along the sea-board of the Persian Gulf and the line of the Euphrates and Tigris in the flank and rear.

5. The Indus and Euphrates thus united, the dangerous isolation of Persia would be at an end, and the invasion of India by Russia or any other Power would cease even to be speculated upon.

6. By the Euphrates Railway Persia would be afforded a short, cheap, and easy outlet on the Mediterranean for her trade with Europe, in place of the existing long, expensive, and difficult route to the Black Sea by the borders of Russia, and which is entirely at the mercy of that Power.

7. The resources of England being made promptly available on any emergency, Chatham and Southampton would become the basis of operations as easily as Kurrachee or Bombay, and would enable this country to anticipate or repel, whether in Europe or Asia, any attack with the rapidity and advantages of an irresistible force.

8. On an emergency in India troops could be landed at Kurrachee in two weeks, and in little more than another week at Lahore.

9. The route proposed is at once the shortest and the easiest between England and India; the whole length of the Valley of the Euphrates is so free from impediment that it would seem as if Providence had especially ordained it to be the great highway of nations between the East and the West.

This exposition of the question is so complete and incontrovertible that it becomes a matter of astonishment that the Government should any longer hesitate to afford every encouragement, if not active support, to a scheme so full of promise. The late ministry granted a subsidy of £78,000 a year for a packet service that was not of any urgent importance; but the present one, though lavish enough of the public money where France is to be conciliated, hangs back from even countenancing an undertaking which proposes to unite India with England, and to make British influence paramount in Syria, Mesopotamia, and Persia.

An alternative route to India, observes Mr. Andrew, in conclusion, always important, is now a pressing necessity. The navigation of the rivers Euphrates and Tigris may be made available pending the completion of the railway from sea to sea. From Seleucia to Jabor Castle on the Euphrates is 150 miles in length, and would cost £1,500,000. All the physical difficulties on the route are between Seleucia and Aleppo, and the navigation of the Euphrates is very inferior to that of the Tigris below Bagdad. From Seleucia to Bagdad is 600 miles, and would cost four millions. From Seleucia to Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf, is 800 miles, and would cost six millions. There is good reason to believe that there would be no difficulty in establishing steam communication between Seleucia and England, and the Indian Government are understood to be favourably disposed to granting the necessary support to the establishment of steam communication between Bombay, Kurrachee, and Bagdad, via Bushir and Bussorah. A railway from Bagdad to Seleucia, 600 miles in length, would at once give us a new and alternative route to India, far removed from the intrigues and interference of either our friends or enemies.

In the ancient times, when Babylon was "the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency," the commerce of Phœ-nicia with India was conducted by caravans along a portion of the very route selected by this Railway Company. At a later date Alexandria became the emporium of Europe and Eastern Asia, until the improvement of navigation and the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope opened up a new route for the interchange of commodities. Now-a-days we gradually revert to the original straight line. The railroad through Egypt has, in a great measure, superseded the long sea voyage round the southern extremity of Africa, but probably in a few years hence that in its turn will have given place to a direct communication between Seleucia, Bagdad, the Persian Gulf, and Bombay, or Kurrachee. And thus the world revolves in a circle, and after a handful of centuries men find themselves confronted by the same first principles from which their forefathers diverged in the days of yore.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE N. W. PROVINCES, FOR THE YEAR 1858-59.

CIVIL JUDICATURE.—For the first six months, the frontier districts being in the hands of the rebels, the total number of original suits and appeals for the whole year was only 45,750, or 36,388 fewer than were instituted in 1856-57. Of these, 29,270 were decided on their merits, but 6,299 were ex parte decisions, while 10,922 were disposed of on confession of judgment. It is suspected that the frequency of confession of judgment is a collusive arrangement in order to furnish additional security to the lender, who refuses to advance the loan agreed upon until the applicant has gone through the form of a suit, and allowed judgment to be given against him. It is also feared that the number of ex parte decisions is owing to "collusion between the plaintiff and the officer entrusted with the process to be served on the defendant, who is designedly kept in ignorance of the institution of the suit." The proportion of appeals to suits tried was rather more than 6 per cent., and of reversals to appeals tried about 33 per cent. Out of 31,454 applications for execution of decree, the orders of the civil courts were completely executed in only 7,041 cases, and partially in 5,376, while 19,037 were struck off the files without any action being taken upon them. During the period of anarchy forty native judicial officers sided with the rebels, and have, consequently, been either executed, transported, or dismissed the service. At the close of the year 958 cases were still pending, the average duration of suits being sixty-eight days, for which discreditable result the Sudder Ameen of Hoshungabad and the Moonsiffs of Baitool and Seonee are held chiefly accountable.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.—Owing to the unsettled state of the country the ordinary returns have not been submitted from several important districts. From the reports which were received it appears that 46,915 persons were charged with various offences before magistrates and their subordinates, of whom 18,041 were convicted, 4,688 committed for trial, and 20,452 acquitted, but to the last category belong all those who were released under the amnesty, though their guilt was beyond a doubt. The number of witnesses examined in the course of the year amounted to 119,561, of whom 102,257 were detained for only a single day; nevertheless, the average duration of suits was seventeen days, while the average duration of the detention of a prisoner from the date of his apprehension to the final disposal of his case by the Nizamut Adawlut was 191 days. The proportion of acquittals to convictions in cases tried by the sessions judges was as 1,321 to 3,887, which is justly held to "indicate either want of judgment in the committing officers, or a too great regard to the letter, and not the spirit of the law on the part of the judges." In accordance with the sentence of the Criminal Courts, 19,742 individuals were punished in the year under notice, of whom 536 were hanged, and 410 transported. On the charge of adultery only three persons were brought to trial in the whole of the N. W. Provinces, though it would hardly be philosophical thence to infer that the population was remarkable for its chastity. For aiding and abetting Suttees 25 persons were tried, but only two convicted. For dacoity with murder 530 were tried, and 45 convicted; and for dacoity, unattended with aggravating circumstances, 1,337 were arraigned, and 238 found guilty. Burglary figures prominently on the list of crime, and 584 trials resulted in the conviction of 324 offenders; for perjury, on the other hand, only 54 men were placed on their trial, of whom 43 were convicted. The increase of dacoity is attributed to the number of disbanded sepoys in the Benares division and Ghazepore district, who, while appearing to have quietly settled in their respective villages, were known to have formed themselves into disciplined and organised gangs of marauders. On the borders, moreover, of the Ajmere and Neemuch districts, merchants, traders, and travellers complained bitterly of the depredations of the Meenah dacoits, issuing from the ill-governed little State of Meywar.

POLICE.—At the close of 1858 the military police was composed of 101 European officers, 16 non-commissioned officers, 5,557 horse, and 19,249 foot, who were employed for months on strictly military duties. An unsuccessful attempt was made to raise a troop of native Christians, but they proved dirty and slovenly in their habits, and were generally inefficient. The low caste levies turned out equally unsatisfactory. "The officers report them to be dirty in their habits, given to drink, and rarely making good soldiers (which they were not required to be). They are said, moreover, to disregard punishment, and to be prone to malingering." Care was taken to make the men feel and understand that they were Nujeebs and not Sepoys, and commandants of divisional and district battalions were vested with full powers to requite merit and inflict summary punishment for breaches of discipline; the conduct of the men, however, was for the most part excellent. The disarming of the population was carried out with great industry and perseverance. In the six divisions of Meerut, Agra, Rohilcund, Allahabad, Benares and Goruckpore, with a male population, estimated in 1853 at 14,306,428, there were collected 435 pieces of ordnance, 134,733 fire-arms, 711,017 swords, 247,794 spears, and 590,777 daggers. Much, however, remained yet to be done. The number of prisoners confined in jails during the year was 12,574, at an average cost of 44 Rs. 7a. 6p. per man.

REVENUE.—As the rains of 1857 were abundant, while those of 1858 were deficient, the rubbee, or spring crops were above, and the khureef, or autumn crops below the average. The total demand was Rs. 4,19,82,617, of which Rs. 3,92,87,626 were received, and Rs. 8,35,978 expected to be realised; the remainder being "doubtful, nominal, and irrecoverable." It is gratifying to learn that recourse was had in only a few cases to "simple process and severe measures of coercion," and few, likewise, were the sales of estates, and even those mostly on account of the proprietors having abandoned them to join the insurgents. The net Abkaree, or Excise Revenue amounted to Rs. 16,80,146, against Rs. 10,55,537 in 1857-58, and Rs. 20,80,631 in 1855-56. Stamps produced Rs. 10,42,006; Sayer, Rs. 1,14,658; Customs, Rs. 36,08,214; making a grand total of revenue from all sources of Rs. 4,57,03,340. The charges of collection, 15½ per cent., were unusually high, but not more so than might have been expected from the peculiar circumstances that characterised the period.

EDUCATION.—At the close of the official year 1858-59 there were in the N. W. Provinces 8,471 colleges and schools of one kind or another, attended by 123,235 boys. The educational institutions maintained by the Government were three Anglo-vernacular colleges at Agra, Benares, and Bareilly, with 828 students; four Anglo-vernacular schools at Ajmere, Saugor, Allyghur, and Shahjehanpore, with 815 boys; and 260 Tehseelee schools, with 13,757 boys. We give these numbers as they appear at the commencement of the Report, but they do not agree with the detailed notices which follow; indeed, these Indian reports are almost invariably confused, complicated, contradictory, and uselessly minute. The population of these provinces being assumed in round numbers to be three millions and a-half, and 350,000 being taken to represent the number of boys of an age to go to school, it appears that only one in 284 avails himself of the opportunity. It is scarcely necessary in this place to allude to the Thomason Civil Engineering College at Roorkee, as that is chiefly attended by Europeans, but the Agra Medical school must not be passed over, its object being to educate native doctors. On the 20th April, 1859, there were 96 students in this school,—Christians, Hindoos, and Mahomedans; but it cannot be said that much good has yet been done.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WILL THE PEOPLE OF INDIA BEAR AN INCOME-TAX?—I.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—There is no community among the civilised and mercantile nations of the world so lightly taxed in the mass as the inhabitants of India under the British Government. On the other hand, no people who cultivate the soil are more severely oppressed by the weight of taxation than the agricultural classes of that country. Till the present period it seems there has been no one under the Company's rule to whom the task of financier has exclusively been assigned; but one of the first acts of her Majesty's Government after assuming direct charge of the administration of India has been to depute from England a gentleman bearing the character of one of the most sound political economists of the day. He has a seat in the Council or Cabinet of Calcutta, and fills the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer of India. He has not disappointed the expectations of his friends and acquaintances in this country. He has grasped with no feeble hand the main features of our difficulties, and has exposed them in a manner which admits of no dispute. With singular prudence, too, he at once travelled to the furthest limit of the Bengal Presidency. He availed himself of the little leisure permitted him in a very hasty journey, to make inquiries of the official and mercantile bodies, both European and native, on his route, not only to ascertain the present mode of realising the revenue, but he even condescended to enter into fair discussions with some of the most opulent and intelligent of the best-informed natives in the interior, on the broad principles of political economy, in which controversy, however, he appears to have met with little success in converting them. How, indeed, was it to be expected that men who had not had the advantages of witnessing the practical effects of the application of that science could be at once taught to comprehend it, when we witness in enlightened Europe how extremely slow has been its progress, theoretically or practically, among the nations of the West. On his return to Calcutta Mr. Wilson proposed to apply the principle to India, which for the last half century has been slowly making its way among English financiers. When we take into consideration the above facts, and the circumstances in which the Indian legislature has been acting up to the present time, we ought not to be astonished that scarcely any portion of the Indian community, with the exception of the comparatively small body of Englishmen carrying on trade in the city of Calcutta, should recognise the justice and expediency of imposing an income-tax on the whole body of the people whose receipts exceed £20 a year, and the levying a duty on all handicrafts and mechanics to be classified into three grades, varying from 2s. to 20s. per annum for a licence to exercise their calling. In his opening speech on the subject of finance he had no hesitation in pronouncing the country to be one abounding in riches, and he quoted the authorities of the Hindoo law for levying an income-tax. But Mr. Wilson, in common with a great portion of the civilians in India, had no knowledge of the mode in which the income-tax alluded to was to be collected, nor in what way the Government could acquire the knowledge necessary to carry the measure with justice into effect.

With respect to the Hindoo law quoted, had it not been carried out in modern times, its antiquity alone would perhaps have induced statesmen of the present day to repudiate its validity. But a law that has not lain dormant, which has been continually acted on, which is in operation in all well-regulated native States, has never been superseded by any more modern edict. A code derived from a law which is held in veneration as of Divine origin by the Hindoos, ought no more to be treated with contempt or be set aside hastily than the Ten Commandments delivered by Moses, or any other of the Levitical laws, some of which are binding on the Christians, but all of which are imperative on the Jews.

Now, what says the Hindoo law giver on the subject of taxes in general. He lays it down as an axiom that the King is the original owner of the soil. Yet he adds: "He who first breaks up wild land and renders it fruitful, establishes a property in it, subject to certain conditions."—Menu, chap. iv. v. 44.

These conditions are that a fixed portion of the produce shall be rendered to the King (as is afterwards explained), for the purpose of protecting his subjects.

There has been much controversy on this condition. Some Europeans consider that the so-called proprietor is only a co-partner with the sovereign, and that, although he may sell or transfer his land, the Sovereign as co-partner has always a claim on a part of the produce. Yet the proprietor can transfer his land independently of the King. In England almost all land which is saleable has one or more conditions attached to it. In some cases there is a land-tax payable to the Crown; in most cases there is tithe or tenth of the crop to the Church; but we are not in the habit of considering either the Crown or the Church co-partners with the only party who holds the land in undisputed possession, and may transfer it without the consent of the parties having claims on its produce.

Now, the condition on which the Indian proprietor holds his land is precisely that of the English proprietor. It is true the State and the parish officers in India have claims on part of the produce; but, as in the case of tithe, where the land lies fallow, and there is no crop, there is no means of fulfilling the condition; for it must never be lost sight of that the claim is in kind, and on the actual produce of the year. And although the Hindoos and Mahomedans in some cases, and especially ourselves, have substituted money payments in lieu of payments in kind, yet both Hindoo and Mahomedan legislators are agreed that the conversion of the portion of the produce assignable to others into money must, by right, be left to the option of the owner of the land, or the actual cultivator; and so universally recognised is this principle, that no Government, even the British, has ever insisted on payment of the public demand from a field that has lain fallow during the whole year. What, then, is this impost of a portion of the produce but a tax on income?

Now let us examine what the great Hindoo legislator says on this point.

Menu, chapter vii., verse 127: "Having ascertained the rates of purchase and sale, the length of the way, the expenses of the food and of condiments, the charges of securing the goods carried, and the net profits of trade, let the king oblige traders to pay taxes on their saleable commodities."

He then proceeds to state the rates at which taxes on the following articles should be levied, it being always understood that the tax is payable in kind for the king to dispose of in what manner he thinks fit.

Chap. vii., v. 30:—"Of cattle, of gems, of gold, and silver, added each year to the capital stock a fiftieth part." And it is worthy of notice that Tavernier, a French jeweller, travelling in India in the seventeenth century, found that 2 per cent. of the produce was in his time the seigniorage at the mines of Golconda. "Of grain an eighth part ($12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.), a twelfth part ($8\frac{1}{3}$ per cent.), a sixth part ($16\frac{2}{3}$ per cent.), according to the difference of the soil and the labour necessary to cultivate it."

Chap. vii., v. 131:—"He (the King) may also take a sixth part of the clear annual increase of trees, flesh meat, honey, clarified butter, perfumes, medical substances (gy. drugs), liquids (gy. fermented liquors), flowers, roots, and fruit."

Provision is also made by the legislator for the emergencies of war.

Chap. x., v. 118:—"A military king who takes even a fourth part of the crops of his realm at a time of urgent necessity, as of war or invasion, and protects his people to the utmost of his power, commits no sin. Again, chap. x., v. 120:—"The tax on the mercantile class, which in times of prosperity must only be a twelfth part of their crops, and a fifth part of their personal profits (in trade), may be an eighth part of their crops in a time of distress, or a sixth, which is the medium, or even a fourth, in great public adversity; but a twentieth of their gains in money and other moveables in the highest tax."

"Serving men, artisans, and mechanics must assist by their labour, but at no time pay taxes."

The italics are the commentary of the Editor of the Institutes. Those exempted from direct taxes in the last part of the above sentence are under the native governments required to give one day's labour per month, or the value of twelve days' labour per annum. Hence originated in the Deccan under the early Mahomedan conquerors the mot-harifa, or tax on Hirfa labour, which has been so little understood by the English financiers that, in order that each mechanic should bear his fair proportion of the tax, a certain amount was laid on the instruments of his trade, whereas under the native governments where the mot-harifa, or motrifa, is levied, a fixed sum is imposed on the guild of each trade, which is made up by a municipal assessment among themselves.

It will be seen from what has been now said, that, so far, all the taxes authorised by the great ancient Hindu law-giver were DIRECT TAXES ON income, on the annual increase or profit of labour or trade.

In order, however, to enable the Governments to carry out in practice what was laid down in theory, it became necessary to have recourse to inspectors. Thus, in every township there was a clerk who kept a register, not only of the cultivated fields, but of the nature of the crop. At harvest-time a collector realised the Government share, and either conveyed it away, or sold it on the spot to grain merchants ready to purchase. It may be admitted that a tax leviable in kind is highly objectionable, but a fixed composition in money, calculated on the ordinary edible grain of the country, as in the case of corn-rents and tithes among ourselves, and regulated according to the proportion due to the State, as was done in the Tanjore collectorate half a century since, has led to the increased value of land, and to the substantial comfort and opulence of the agricultural community in that part of India.

In respect of mines, too, there were Government inspectors to claim the seigniorage for the Crown. With regard to commerce, the imposition of town duties enabled the collectors to ascertain the quantity of each article of trade introduced, and afforded an index by which the Government, at the end of the year, could levy the legitimate tax of two or five per cent., according to circumstances, on the annual increase acquired by each class of traders. The distribution of assessment in detail is left to the several guilds in market-towns and cities. Such taxes, under the native Governments, are realised without demur or difficulty. With us, town duties are abolished, and the key, and the machinery, and the revenue, are all lost. To insist on inspecting merchants' books would lead to the keeping of two sets, which would defeat the end of inquiry. Another source of revenue existed by means of tolls on the highways on certain descriptions of goods classified under four or five different heads, which were levied only on entering each pergana or county embracing from one to two or more hundred cities, market towns, villages, or hamlets. The goods having once paid the toll were not liable to pay again within the pergana, and all the produce raised within it was free of tolls, but liable to town duties. The latter were confined to market towns and cities. The proceeds of the tolls were partly expended in protecting the traffic in transitu, while the town duties were available for local improvements, for payment of the clerk of the market and his police officers, and other purposes. This officer, well known by the name of Cotual, was vested with great judicial authority in market towns. The tolls and town duties have under our Government everywhere fallen before the political economists. The tolls instead of being levied in gross as under the several heads of, as for instance, Kirana (grocery and drugs), our Government thought fit to convert into ad valorem duties, so that every bullock or cart-load or boat-load had to be examined at each toll-house, and a duty levied separately on each article. The result was that the detention was so vexatious as well as expensive, that ill-paid Custom-house officers made their own bargains with the merchants, and either passed the goods on with a very partial examination, or detained them for the purpose of extortion. Now it is not intended to defend this mode of raising a revenue, open, as it was, to so many abuses; but under the native Governments these tolls are farmed by competition. The rates are published, and each toll-keeper is bound to keep and exhibit them. The farmers of this branch of revenue enter into heavy securities, not only for its due payment, but also not to levy higher rates than are authorised, on conviction of which they are liable to be fined, and informers are remunerated by repayment of the extra sum levied. Instead of the tolls being imposed on goods, it would have been easy to have confined them to the carriage, whether on animals' backs, in carts, or on tonnage of boats, without reference to the merchandise at all. It would rest with Government to fix the rates and to regulate them according to circumstances, but political economists of the present day are so much disposed to relieve all impediments to free trade, that they overlook the necessities of the State and the important question of revenue. Taxation acts on national wealth as friction does on machinery; both one and the other have a tendency to retardation, but inasmuch as the wheels of Government could not work without taxation, so neither could the wheels of a machine give impulsion without friction. It is the business of the financier as well as of the engineer to apply the weight and the friction in proportion to the capacity for sustaining it, with the least possible tendency to retardation. It has been ascertained that the reduction of the rate of duties leads frequently to an increase of revenue, while on the other hand, an additional duty as frequently produces a reduction in the revenue. The former has been singularly exemplified among ourselves in the article of coffee, while an additional duty on port wine, imposed many years ago, proved that two and two, in the science of finance, often made one instead of making four. It is not easy to ascertain at once what amount a taxable article will bear without a falling off in the revenue, but it is the business of the financier to ascertain it and act on such knowledge.

There are several sources of revenue, which, like the transit tolls and the town duties, we have given up in India, because they were either old-fashioned or novel to the European financier. The tendency of our administration has been to reject the cheap and popular aid of municipal government pervading every branch of native rule, and to substitute in lieu of it complicated forms requiring the employment of an expensive European machinery, with a host of ill-paid native functionaries to conduct duties the most important to the public welfare, on a system to which the latter have been unaccustomed, and who eventually only understand it sufficiently to improve their own condition at the expense of the whole community.

Independently of the two sources of revenue referred to, others have been relinquished without equivalents. Sir John Malcolm, when Governor of Bombay, strenuously urged the expediency of requiring from every successor to an hereditary official estate the usual feudal fee for a re-grant, equivalent to a legacy duty. This fee was never less than one year's income, but more when the successor was a collateral heir, or an heir by adoption. The recommendation was rejected, on what plea was not stated, but perhaps because it was the policy of the then existing government to claim heirship to all property, real or personal, except in the case of sons legitimately born. We have paid dearly for this policy, not only in purse, but in the loss of the European "prestige," which no sum of money can restore. Another source of revenue was given up, namely, the tax on lands granted to hereditary officials, or sinecures granted out of favour by our predecessors. These, under the title of Lakhiraj (exempt from tax), or Enams (free gifts), were also required to pay by the Mahratta Government annually, under the title of Enam tijai, the third of the amount payable by similar lands in the same vicinity, or the full amount payable once in three years. The exaction of these taxes which we have relinquished, gave to the holders of this description of property a sort of security that the Government recognised it as held of right, whereas the endless threatenings of resumptions, the actual resumptions after many years, and the frequent investigations into titles, has rendered a very large and influential class of the community dissatisfied with our government, and suspicious of our integrity. Sir Charles Trevelyan (than whom no one in India understood better the feelings of the natives, and their rights) cut the Gordian knot at once on his arrival as Governor of Madras. He directed the commission appointed to investigate ancient titles, to fix the amount payable by each Enamdar for his estate at one-fourth of the local land-tax; and confirmed the validity of all such lands held uninterruptedly within the period of our rule. In this manner a considerable addition has been made to the revenue, and a large and influential class has been converted from enemies to our Government into interested friends.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

THE MORISONIAN SYSTEM of MEDICINE.

1. The vital principle is in the blood.
2. Everything in the body is derived from the blood.
3. All constitutions are radically the same.
4. All diseases arise from impurity of the blood.
5. Pain and disease have the same origin.
6. From the intimate connection subsisting between mind and body, the health of the one must conduce to the serenity of the other.
7. Proper vegetable purgation is the only medicinal mode for effectually evacuating disease.
8. The discovery of a vegetable medicine was a desideratum.
9. This discovery was made by James Morison, the Hygeist, who also proclaimed "the medical liberty of the subject."

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the
MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL
APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STA-
TICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr.
Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay papers received by the mail of the 22nd of June are, strange to say, unanimous, at least on one point. It is agreed on all hands that the recall of Sir Charles Trevelyan was a matter of necessity, though subject of deep regret to the native population, whose hopes of resisting the Income-tax have been completely dissipated by the prompt action of the Home Government. In Bombay a numerous and influential meeting had been held, at which it was resolved to present a sympathetic address to the ex-Governor, and to request him to sit for a full-length portrait, to be placed in the Victoria Museum. The native community of Madras are equally affected by this sudden overthrow of any expectations they may have formed of successfully opposing Mr. Wilson's financial measures. It is now evident that the new tax, however unpopular, will be patiently submitted to ingeniously evaded. Some delay, however, has occurred in carrying it through the Legislative Council, in consequence of "the Chancellor's" illness, but the next mail will probably bring the intelligence of the Bill having finally passed through committee.

The seat in the Legislative Council, vacant by the resignation of Sir Charles Jackson, has been filled by Sir Mordaunt Wells, one of the Puisne Judges. The Bombay member, Mr. Le Geyt, has also left Calcutta in bad health, and Sir James Outram is likewise absent, without much hope of being able to resume his seat. Sir Hugh Rose, the new Commander-in-Chief, was waiting for his patent.

The new Revenue Board, of which Mr. W. Muir, senior member of the Sudder Board, has been appointed president, is to be constituted after the model of the Legislative Council. Each of the three Presidencies, the North-West Provinces, and the Punjab, will be duly represented, and the business of the Board will be strictly confined to questions of income, the state of the Treasury, and the necessary expenditure for the year.

The disturbances in the Banswarra district appear to have been greatly exaggerated, no political importance whatever is to be attached to them. In the neighbourhood of Ragooghur, however, a sharp skirmish took place on the 7th of June between a party of Mayne's Horse under Lieutenant Bradford, and some 250 rebels, in which Lieutenant Jennings was shot through the heart while charging at the head of his troop. In all other parts of India profound tranquillity prevailed, and it has been ascertained that the mysterious earthen water-pot which was lately circulated through Gwalior was nothing more than the superstitious act of a native anxious to avert sickness from his household.

According to the Bombay Gazette, a telegram had been received from Muscat announcing the loss of the Indian Navy sloop Elphinstone, in the Persian Gulf.

The illustrious nobleman from whom that ill-fated vessel took her name has sunk under the combined effects of excessive labour and a lengthened residence in India. Lord Elphinstone, we regret to state, died yesterday, at his apartments in King-street, Jermyn-street, worn out by anxiety and incessant toil since the first outbreak of the Sepoy mutiny.

A native vessel, says the Bombay Times, brought news from Zanzibar of a fresh instance of the overbearing insolence of the Napoleonic Government. The Imaum having refused to make certain concessions, the nature of which is not stated, a French frigate, in brutal reliance on superior strength, opened fire on the place, and compelled the Imaum to surrender at discretion. The atrocity of this outrage is aggravated by the previous courtesy of the unfortunate native ruler, through whose assistance the frigate had been floated off a shoal on which she had grounded on her arrival. We trust that this matter will be made the subject of Parliamentary inquiry.

General Lord Clyde, late Commander-in-chief of H.M.'s forces in India, has arrived in London, with all his honours thick upon him, which, it is said, will shortly culminate in a field-marshal's baton—unless, perchance, the freedom of the City of London, presented in a box valued at 100 guineas, be regarded as a higher distinction.

Dr. J. R. Ballantyne, late Principal of Benares College, has been appointed to succeed the lamented Professor Wilson as librarian at the East India House.

BENGAL.

SIR W. O'SHAUGHNESSY.

The departure of Sir William O'Shaughnessy from India furnishes a suitable occasion for noticing the present condition of the department over which for some years he has presided, with great credit to himself, and much advantage to the State and the public. The "General Report of the Administration of the several Presidencies and Provinces of British India during the year 1858-59" is now before us, and from this unattractive looking tome we glean some interesting particulars in reference to the lightning post. Much will ever covet more; and the information we have only sharpens our appetite for an additional supply. The results obtained at the end of the official year '59 are so very gratifying and encouraging, that curiosity to know precisely the point reached at the present moment is not very inexcusable. But we must make the best of what we have, and supply the deficiency by estimates formed on past progress. At the date down to which the official information given to the public reaches, this Presidency had no less than 1,676 miles of wire spread over the country, by which intelligence was flashed from place to place with the quickness of thought. Several additional lines were contemplated and many were under construction. A school had been opened at Coonoor for the instruction of signallers; a (comparatively) very small number of complaints had been made of irregularities or misconduct on the part of subordinates—a fact which we note with much pleasure, as we have been reluctantly compelled to growl on some occasions; the influence of a firm and vigilant superintendent was felt throughout the department, and the public evinced an increasing appreciation of the advantages placed at a moderate cost within their reach by the most wonderful discovery of this or any other age. From the report we learn that of 23,394 messages sent throughout Madras during the period included in the report before us, rather more than three-fourths were unofficial; but while the number of private messages considerably decreased as they approached to the higher rates, the reverse was the case with the service telegrams. The figures given display this fact in a very striking light, but as we know the arithmetical antipathies of the public, we forbear to publish a table which would only scare our readers and serve no better purpose than to prove what every one knows already, that we are all likely to be liberal when we can indulge our wishes at the expense of others, and that nothing can be done by Government at as moderate a cost as by private individuals. The pecuniary result in the case under notice of the very natural desire to spare our own purses which most of us experience is, that the proceeds from private and service messages are almost equal, while in numbers they are to each other as three to one. In other words, the report proves that Government pays about three times as much for getting its intelligence sent as private parties do; and this fact enables us to conjecture the price which the State pays for its whistle where we have no particulars affording ground for contrast. The report further discloses the gratifying facts that the increase in receipts for private messages was 20 per cent. more in 1858-59 than in 1857-58, and that the entire sum realised from this one source between 1855 and 1859 was no less than Rs. 1,33,956 8 3. We also learn that nearly one-fourth of the paid messages was despatched by natives; and their growing appreciation of this new and wonderful medium of communication is patent from the fact that the difference in the income of the department in the first and fourth years of its existence amounted to Rs. 30,162 6 3. In the same period the value of all the messages received was upwards of two lacs and a half, "while the whole amount expended on account of salary and contingencies, both on the construction and working accounts," was little more than three lacs. So that our rapid intelligencer is as cheap as it is useful and wonderful, and bids fair to make good returns even as a pecuniary speculation.

On the whole, there is much cause for satisfaction with the progress that has been made and the results that have been obtained. Now and then an awkwardness occurs, and we are perhaps not distinguished for our patience of obtuseness, carelessness, or perverseness when either affects the speed and regularity of our own messages; but as we are not suffering at this moment, and are, in consequence, in a generous mood, we can see how very unreasonable it is to expect perfection in a department worked so economically, that except in the more responsible offices the instruments employed are of an inferior quality. It is scarcely necessary to say that there are very highly intelligent men connected with it. Its energetic head is universally allowed to be "the right man in the right place;" and he is ably supported by some of his subordinates, who thoroughly understand their business and efficiently perform it; but in moments when calm judgment is not upset by irritating irregularities and disappointments, it is a matter for wonder that business is so well conducted in the postal and telegraphic departments, considering the intellectual and moral qualifications of many who have functions not unimportant to perform. The annoyances to which newspaper subscribers and proprietors are exposed by the carelessness and dishonesty of paper-carriers afford some idea of the difficulties with which the authorities in Post and Telegraph are compelled to contend. Sir William O'Shaughnessy makes the most of the instruments with which he has to work, and the public is indebted to him, to a greater extent than many are aware, for the wholesome fear with which he has inspired those over whom he bears rule. We hope that his successor will be as great a terror to evil-doers, and as ready to commend those that do well, and then if the department be not perfect, an exception to all things with which human and Indian nature have to do, it will at least prove immensely useful to the public and the State, and, even as a pecuniary speculation, will yield no small returns.

But the superintendent of telegraphs has laid the public under obligations for something else besides the firmness displayed in dealing with subordinates. He has taken the wisest measures for reducing to the minimum the inconvenience arising from unavoidable accidents. The inefficiency and carelessness of signallers and other employees are not the only influences at work to mar the usefulness of the wonder-working wire and tax the patience of the message-sending public. Lightning, storms, and falling trees contribute their several quotas to the same vexatious objects, and increase the difficulties of the superintendent. Until lately the conservancy of the line was committed to the care of "Native Lascars, generally one for every ten miles." These persons had to go over their respective beats daily, but on breakages of the line occurring, the distance traversed was of course greater. The system was, however, found to be very defective, and the main object in view—the rapid restoration of communication during interruptions—was totally defeated. The patrols either would not or could not do their duty efficiently. Under recent arrangements, therefore, the whole body of Native Line Guards are being dismissed, and replaced by a staff of European and East Indian horse patrols; they are posted at each telegraph station and at intervals of twenty miles, where substantial huts are being built for their accommodation. "These men inspect their beat twice a week, and during interruptions they are ready to move rapidly on the line, at a moment's notice. They are furnished with tools, wire, and all requisites for making a zinc ingot joint. Notice is also given, whenever practicable, to the artificer in charge of the section of the breakage of the wire. Thus any section of the line of 100 miles could be travelled over, and an interruption remedied with certainty within twelve hours at longest." Nor is this all. "Provision is also being made for the construction of huts at every dangerous river crossing, in addition to the junction cable houses, in order to secure communication during the monsoon at every river crossing. Where danger is apprehended, offices will be open on either bank, and signallers, batteries, and stores will be supplied prior to the setting in of the monsoon. This remedy was not resorted to before, and hence the cause of some of the interruptions through the failure of river crossing." Thus the most efficient means that could be devised by a very able as well as energetic man have been taken to provide against contingencies which experience proved to be possible; and nothing that science, industry, and a strong will could accomplish have been left undone to bring the telegraph department to the highest state of efficiency possible in this country.

Upon the effects which the telegraph must produce, and indeed to some extent has already produced in this country, it is almost needless to dwell; they are obvious to the most superficial. The immense convenience of speedy communication at a tolerably cheap rate is an advantage which most persons are capable of appreciating rightly. The facilities which the telegraph affords the Government of communicating quickly with its servants at a distance and providing for the peace and security of the country were seen in a striking light while the thrilling tragedies of 1857-58 were being enacted. But its moral influence upon the people is scarcely if at all less valuable than the service it renders to commerce, the convenience it proves to the public generally, and the aid it affords the Government in promoting the cause of law and order. It is worth remembering that we rule Hindostan as much if not more by moral than by physical force, that the conviction of the people of our moral and intellectual superiority over them has much influence in inducing them to submit to a foreign yoke. It is necessary sometimes to give most disagreeable reminders of this superiority; to revive the impression when it begins to fade, by some signal display of our power to achieve great successes with what, in the hands of Asiatics, would prove very inadequate means. A few thousands of Englishmen scattering myriads of the conquered race as chaff before the wind conveys a lesson as useful for the subject as for the dominant people. But how much better is it when we can impress the same truth by means which cost no lives, cause no miseries; but, on the contrary, afford invaluable advantages alike to the rulers and the ruled! Such a means of instruction do we possess in the telegraph, and even in the railway. It may be doubted whether many are so listless or obtuse as not to be impressed with a sense of the intellectual greatness of a people capable of inventing such extraordinary means of conveying persons, property, and intelligence as India now witnesses for the first time; but it is quite certain that inferences productive of respect for the conqueror and security for the country will be drawn from the wire post and railway by those whose intelligence makes them the oracles of their several circles and who have enormous power to cause mischief or prevent it. It may be hoped, too, that the more intelligent natives of the country will see that the solid advantages which India derives from British rule much more than compensate her for the selfishness or moral obliquity of a stray Englishman who enjoyed for a time the power of doing evil and did not neglect to avail himself of it. Instances more numerous, than they should, exist of indefensible proceedings on the part of British Indian Governments, and our system of administration is confessedly not productive of unmixed advantages; but a comparison of India as she is and as she was a hundred years ago will convince natives whose minds have been enlightened in State and Missionary schools, that, taking it for all in all, British Government has been a priceless blessing to the country, and that our sins of omission and commission are as nothing when weighed in the balance against the immense advantages accruing to the people from our rule. It may well be doubted whether England has derived as much benefit from her connection with India as India from her subjection to England. It might have been better for a few nabobs had the Company and its belongings directed their steps and enterprise in some other direction; but there can be no question of the advantages reaped by the masses from a change of rulers, and the growing intelligence of the people throughout the country will more and more strengthen their attachment to a Government which understands how to promote the welfare of those under its rule, and, shortcomings notwithstanding, has done much, very much, to advance the interests of India.—Daily Times and Spectator, June 11.

COLONISATION IN THE PUNJAB.

The subject of inducing Europeans to colonise hilly tracts in India has lately been under consideration by the Punjab Government. Two European soldiers, time-expired men, applied last year to Sir Robert Montgomery for land at Murree, with a view to permanently residing there, and obtaining their livelihood. The Lieutenant-governor was inclined to assist them in obtaining land. His Honour considered that many of the European soldiers whose term of service was about expiring would readily stay in the country if they saw a prospect of being able to maintain themselves and families, in preference to returning to England. Possessed of a small capital, and with a knowledge of the country, limited though that knowledge might be, his Honour thought these men were in a better position than a small cottier who might emigrate from England, inasmuch as they were on the spot, had become acclimatised, had been accustomed to order and discipline, had seen life, and had a knowledge of human nature; that a man of the class, therefore, inclined to work—and none would stay that were not—would have a fair chance of success; and his Honour considered that if an experiment was to be made in establishing European colonists, the time was a good one for trying it. The cost to Government would be nothing. All the Lieutenant-governor proposed to do was to afford the aid of Government officers in obtaining land for the men to rent or purchase, and give them all the countenance and support possible consistent with justice to the natives. It was thought that the prosperity of the natives would be increased by the location of industrious, well conducted Europeans, and that the British Government would benefit by the increased European element. The Lieutenant-governor called for opinions on the matter from several commissioners of divisions.

From the following extracts from a report by Mr. Cust, the officiating financial commissioner, it will be seen that the scheme is not likely to be quite so successful as our excellent Lieutenant-governor hoped. Lord W. Hay, the deputy commissioner of Simla, says:—"In discussing this question, three points demand attention. 1st,—What extent of land is actually available? 2nd,—On what terms should it be granted them, and what aid should Government render to those wishing to become settlers? 3rd,—What prospect has a European soldier as a colonist in India?"

With regard to the first point, the extent of land available is extremely limited; water is scarce, and has in almost every instance been appropriated by the native zemindars, so that wheat and rice could not be produced by the European. Tea and potatoes, it is true, are unirrigated crops; but what European soldier possesses capital for the one, and with what chance of success could he compete with the native producer in the other?

With regard to the second point, the Deputy Commissioner recommends that the land granted should be in fee simple; that revenue should not be demanded; and, further, that as few soldiers would, unassisted, have capital sufficient for a first attempt, money, which would otherwise be spent by Government in re-conveying the soldier to England, should be given to him as a gratuity;

after certain probation, and under suitable limitations. An extension of the period in which a soldier can re-enlist in India is also considered allowable, on the ground that it would give the man an opportunity of trying the country with some employment to fall back upon in case of failure. With the same object in view, the Deputy Commissioner advocates the advantage of a liberal leave system, so devised as to enable a few of the oldest and most deserving men in each regiment to make their first experiment in farming even before the period of their discharge.

With reference to the third point, the Deputy Commissioner remarks that it is the average soldier, whose prospects we have to consider, the man of no special qualifications, of slender means, somewhat addicted to drinking, and not disposed to regard the natives of the country with a friendly eye. In India such a man is certain to fail. The accumulation of years gone, he finds himself a beggar in a country where more obstacles exist to earning a livelihood than in any other part of the world. Again, to the European settler, marriage is almost impossible, for he has no opportunity of procuring a wife, and no prospect of providing for his children. In the Deputy-Commissioner's opinion Government will be chargeable with a grave political error if it go out of its way to induce European soldiers to settle in the hills as colonists. The duty lies rather in affording information and assistance to those who voluntarily come forward as settlers, in taking pains to secure as colonists men of approved good character, in inducing English women to come to the country, and in making provision for the rearing and educating their children.

Major Lake, the commissioner of the Trans-Sutlej States, remarks that, assuming that lands are procurable, still it may be a question whether, in a large majority of cases, European soldiers will make successful colonists. As a general rule they have a great dislike for the natives of the country, and are imperfectly acquainted with their language and habits, and from having had everything provided for them during a long course of years, they are at a loss when they have to depend upon themselves.

Mr. Melvill observes: "The real question is not whether land is available, but whether discharged soldiers would be successful in maintaining themselves." After discussing the various crops which offer a chance of profit to a European cultivator, the commissioner records his opinion that it is impracticable to locate discharged soldiers in the hills of his division, since while the capitalist has every chance of success, the prospect of the man who has nothing but his own energies to depend upon is hopelessly discouraging.

Lieutenant Paske, who is specially employed in buying land for European capitalists who wish to settle in the Kangra district as tea producers, opines that a considerable extent of land might be made available at Kumaon and in the neighbourhood of our hill sanatoria; but that for the present, owing to the dread which the natives of the interior entertain of European settlers, and European soldiers in particular, it would be advisable (as regards the Kangra district) to confine the experiment to the immediate vicinity of Dhurmsala.

Mr. Cust's opinion is that we should follow, and not lead, this movement. He says we have duties to the Government, to the people of the country, and to our own countrymen; let us hold the scales fairly. "If European soldiers apply for land, I would take a liberal view of the matter, and purchase land for them, or assign to them Government land within five miles of a sanatorium or head-quarters station, but nowhere else; whatever it would cost the State to transfer the soldier and his family to England, should be spent in this way; an agreement should be taken from him to act as special constable under the magistrate, if called on to do so; and if he parted with his land to anybody but a European similarly situated as himself, Government must have the pre-emption." The European soldier, with his many noble qualities, from his having been provided for so many years by a careful commissariat, is very helpless; ignorant of the language, rather irascible, and not ready to adapt himself to new ways, the chances are that he will fail, and will curse his fate. I would therefore always give him the option of making over his land to Government if tired of it, and being shipped off to England with a free passage."

One or two intelligent Europeans, with a little capital, would make a good living by supplying the wants of a European community at each sanatorium; but this is not colonisation. European soldiers might be employed as jail daroghas, thanahdars, road surveyors, &c., in the hill tracts with great advantage.

The Lieutenant-governor concurred in the opinions thus expressed by the experienced officers above-mentioned. His Honour will gladly aid parties desirous of getting land and settling; but unless they have capital, and are acquainted with the language and people, they are not likely to succeed.

His Honour has ordered that this matter be published, as the information may be useful to those thinking of becoming colonists.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR R. C. TYTLER.—It is not ordinarily our custom to notice the departure from this country of any one whose career has not been passed in that public circle which more peculiarly attracts the attention of the outside world. The life of the merchant, the civilian, and the military man possesses, in ordinary times, few marks of interest to the general reader: the dull current of monotony runs through all their daily avocations, and when they leave this country it is but seldom that one can associate their career with the progress of the Indian Empire, or with any well-known achievement. It may, indeed, sometimes happen that some man bid farewell to these shores whose silent labours have not been acknowledged, and with whose earnestness and devotion, therefore, the public are debarred from sympathising. It must be a matter of regret that this should ever happen; for it is most desirable that England should know and appreciate the men whose modesty would confine to their own immediate circle the relation of deeds of courage and devotion. We have been induced to make these remarks from observing in the Gazette that Major R. C. Tytler of the 38th L.I. is about to proceed to Europe. The gratitude of many of those who escaped death on the occasion of the outbreak at Delhi in 1857, has recalled to our mind the part which that officer took on that occasion. We are reminded of the rare presence of mind and the heroic devotedness with which, when all appeared lost, when the ladies congregated at the Flag-staff Tower were surrounded by a mutinous crowd of sepoys, Major Tytler educed order, inspired almost confidence, and organised a safe retreat. But for his exertions, his cheering example, and his ever-ready mental resources, the fate of that band of fugitives could not have been long doubtful. If it be a gratification to Major Tytler to know that the part he played on that eventful day, is still cherished by the relatives of those whom he saved, and by the rescued themselves, if he can derive pleasure from knowing that his name is held in reverence and respect by many whom, probably, he has never seen, that pleasure and that gratification may be his, for it is on behalf of those who, but for him, would have been unable to express their sentiments, and on behalf of their relatives, that we now offer him our best wishes on the occasion of his departure, sure as we are, that in so doing, we express, likewise, the united sentiments of the community of Calcutta.—Englishman.

MR. SHEETZ.—The Governor-general, we learn from the Phoenix, has conferred the honorary rank of assistant-surgeon on Mr. J. Sheetz, well known for his medical services in Central India during the mutinies. Mr. Sheetz was educated at the Medical College of Bengal.

EXPENSIVE TRAVELLING.—The expenses of dakh-hire paid to one company alone, for the conveyance of the Governor-general and Commander-in-chiefs' staff down to Rancegungee last month (May) was Rs. 14,000! "

DR. REID, H.M.'s 75TH REGT.—It is with extreme regret, says the Mojussilite, that we record the death of Assistant-surgeon Reid, of H.M.'s 75th Foot, which event took place on the 26th May. Since the departure, last cold season, of Dr. Donichetti to England on leave, the deceased took the medical charge of the regiment, and continued to hold it up to a few days previous to his death. When the cholera set in amongst the men, the duties of Dr. Reid became arduous in the extreme, and day and night he was to be seen constantly in his hospital. His unremitting attention, combined with his anxiety on the occasion, brought on an intermittent low fever, which, from his persisting in his attending the sick, graduated into typhus, which rapidly ended his life. In the death of Dr. Reid the service has lost an able and zealous medical man, the society in which he moved an excellent member, while a very large circle of friends and acquaintances, both here and in England, have to sorrow for one who well merited the regard in which he was held by them.

OFFICERS AND THE INCOME-TAX.—All officers, native and European, of the army and navy, who receive less than the regimental pay and allowances of a captain of the Queen's or Indian army in India, that is, less than Rs. 374 a-month, will be exempt from taxation on their income. A captain's regimental pay and allowances since 1846 have been as follows:—

I. Within 200 miles of the seat of government of each presidency—

Horse Artillery or Cavalry	Rs. 521 11 4
Foot Artillery and Engineers ...	392 5 0
Infantry	374 1 0

II. Beyond 200 miles of the seat of government of each presidency—

Horse Artillery and Cavalry ...	Rs. 563 0 4

Thus all the native officers, and the ensign and lieutenant are untaxed. Apart from the justice of the exemption its reason is obvious.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—We (Hurkaru) have been informed that the jurisdiction of the Director-general of Post-offices is to be increased. The Government of India has directed that the management of the bullock-train department in Central India, which was hitherto under the control of the Governor-general's agent in that part of the country, should be made over to the Director-general. For the more efficient management of the bullock-trains in particular, and of the postal department in general, Mr. Riddell, we hear, has proposed that a separate postmaster-generalship be created in Central India, at an expense of about Rs. 2,000 a month.

THE DELHI PRINCES.—Eleven princes of Delhi were State prisoners, of whom five have escaped. The remaining six were ordered to Kurrachee, but they object to that place, and decline going on any terms.

DISQUIETING RUMOURS.—We (Oude Gazette) are informed from Luckimpore that the police thanadar of Etawah, named Cheddiah, reported that he had intercepted a Hindee letter which had been circulated from village to village, and had come from an easterly direction. The order contained in it was to the effect that copies of the same were to be sent to three other villages, and that a small gratuity of ruppas, or supplies, was to be provided for a Brahmin pundit, who would arrive at some future day from the East. Orders have been issued to the thanadars to trace the course the letter has taken, and to apprehend any one who may have passed it on. There were five Hindee letters only written in the note, viz., "seen," "peh," "peh," "mim," and "alif."

YOUNG OFFICERS who remain unposted are to pay only the regular subscription to messes and bands of the corps with which they are doing duty, leaving donations to be adjusted with the regiment to which they may be finally posted.

THE KAREN MUTINY.—Letters have been received from Lieut. Hill's party up to the 10th of May. The party was at Bin-ya-tau-tai on the Yoonzaleen, two marches distant from Pahpoon. They had met no enemy. On the 6th, Lieutenant Harrison was at Pahpoon. A letter from him of that date addressed to the commissioner had failed to reach its destination; one, however, written the day following, had been received. It mentions that the mutineers had burned down the Karen settlement at Pahpoon. After murdering one man, the "Karen Levy" then went north, in the direction of the frontier. The Karen that was killed was put to death with every circumstance of barbarity. They first tortured him to make disclosures relative to his property. They squeezed his thumbs between split bamboos, and then shot him through the chest. Another unfortunate man was tied up to a bamboo, and after chalking out a target on his chest, they threatened to shoot him, but thinking better of it, let him off. From Captains Briggs and Grant, intelligence had arrived up to the 10th of May. They were in camp at Beeling, but nothing special had occurred to their respective parties."

THE 8TH IRREGULAR CAVALRY.—The Governor-general has granted several jagheers to officers of the 8th Irregular Cavalry, as a reward for their conspicuous loyalty.

WASTE LANDS.—Government having ordered a return from certain districts as to the quantity of waste lands in each which might be available for European settlers, the Board of Revenue has made a return showing that in the districts of Bhagulpore, Monghyr, and Poorena there are none; of the Damun-i-koh there are no trustworthy statistics. In Mymensingh there may be in the Garrow hills, but they also are almost unknown. In Sylhet there are about 200,000 acres, in Cachar many thousands of square miles covered with forest; in Backergunj, Dacca, and Furreedpore none; in the 24 Pergunnahs two mehals; in Barraset 5,000 acres; in Balloosa, Chittagong, 2,500 acres. In Chittagong an unlimited quantity of land. In Tipperah none. The Board promised that further information would be supplied hereafter.

WILD ANIMALS IN THE PUNJAB.—During the year 1859 the number of people killed or injured by wild beasts in the Punjab has been very numerous, as will be seen by the following statement:—

Killed.			Injured.
Men	6	Men	33
Woman	1	Women	3
Children	467	Children	83
Total	474	Total	119

The following number of wild beasts were destroyed during the year:—

Tigers.			Bears.
Males	6	Males	110
Cubs	3	Females	40
			Cubs	37
Total	9	Total	187
Leopards.			Wolves.
Males	109	Males	337
Females	36	Females	308
Cubs	47	Cubs	529

The amount of rewards paid for the destruction of these animals, 1,567 in number, was Rs. 5,724. The total number of animals destroyed during the year is nearly double that of 1858, but the loss of life is much greater. The casualties are chiefly in the five districts of Umballa, Umritsur, Goordaspore, Sealkote, and Goojranwalla, and the last four especially among children. In Goordaspore (144) and in Sealkote (160) the number of children's deaths exceed the total number of casualties in the rest of the Punjab. It is dreadful to think that so many as 467 children should have been killed by wild animals. Wolves are the most destructive, and it is remarkable that nearly four times as many children were killed in the Umritsur district as wolves.—Delhi Gazette,

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN GRIFFIN.—We (Delhi Gazette) are rather relieved to find that the Griffin case is not settled after all, and that the unfavourable view we took of it in a previous issue, as regards Capt. Griffin, is premature. We were not to blame, however; for when we find that a court-martial, and the Commander-in-chief agree in sentencing an officer to be cashiered, all information as to the grounds of the sentence, or the evidence produced at the trial, being carefully kept from our knowledge—what are we to do but take it for granted that the case has been fully considered, and doubt inadmissible? The publication of the proceedings of courts-martial is as much the right of the public as that of trials before the civil courts. In the latter, generally speaking, few people are interested beyond the parties to the suit, but no court-martial can take place in India in which every officer and soldier in the army does not feel an immediate and lively interest. In the present instance this gross neglect has been supplied by the superintendent of the Government press in these provinces, to whose exertions Captain Griffin has been so deeply indebted all along. A small tract, with the title "Postscriptum," gives the proceedings of the court, with the opening and conclusion of the defence, written by Dr. Buist, but which the rules of the Court did not allow to be delivered. It is impossible to read it without an unpleasant suspicion that the Court must have had in their minds certain other alleged delinquencies of Captain Griffin, not mentioned in the charge, and that on these his sentence is really grounded. This, if true, is the height of injustice; for every charge ought to be determined solely on its own merits, without the least reference, direct or indirect, to any other. Captain Griffin, we understand, has appealed to the Horse Guards for a new trial, or a reversal of his sentence. He alleges that the present charge (about the beer and brandy) is brought against him at the instance of Mr. Palmer, the merchant at Allahabad, in revenge for his pressing a suit for the recovery of some jewels. He withdraws his charge against Mr. O'Callaghan, of having imposed a forged hoondie upon him, under the fictitious name of Lieutenant Turner, alleging now that he was deceived by an accidental resemblance, and that the real culprit is one of two persons named respectively Collier and Carney, against whom regular proceedings will be instituted. If so, we may hope that the whole of this mysterious case will be unravelled; and till then we suspend our judgment.

THE ROW AT CAIRO.—We (Delhi Gazette) find we were partly wrong after all in our surmises about the disturbance in the mosque in Egypt, and the position, &c., of those engaged in it. There were no missionaries, or chaplains, or merchants, or lawyers, or editors concerned; but there was one lady at least; no cadets, not even, we believe, a subaltern, and so far we were right. The gentlemen who distinguished themselves on this occasion, strange to say, held the responsible posts of captains; how officers of such high and respectable standing could so far forget themselves, especially as they were by no means without Indian experience, and must therefore have been fully aware of the feelings of Mahomedans regarding intrusion on what they hold sacred ground and misbehaviour thereon, is indeed unaccountable.

FURLOUGH.—The Secretary of State for India has decided that "those officers who have come to this country on duty with discharged troops, and have been granted extensions (not exceeding six months) of their privilege leave, on medical certificate or private affairs, shall not be considered to have vitiated their claim to furlough at the end of ten years' service, though they may not have been six years in India since their return from this country."

THE CIRCULATING GHARRA of the Gwalior district has been traced to its fountain head, the man who first set it going. He states, in explanation, that the object was to get rid of disease which was in his family.

THE KING OF OUDE, says the Hurkaru, intends to submit a petition to the Government of India, praying that the Bank of Bengal Notes, worth about twenty thousand rupees, being a portion of the amount of his pension then received, which were consumed by the late conflagration at Garden Reach, may be re-issued to him in duplicates. His Majesty intends also to apply to Government for the restitution of the Golden Throne, which was not returned to him, along with other jewels made over to him a few days ago, and which does not appear to have reached Calcutta with the said jewels.

CENTRAL INDIA.—Lieutenant Bradford, with a party of Mayne's Horse, attacked and dispersed some 250 rebels from Bundelkhand, on the 7th June, near Ragoooghurh, killing numbers. Lieut. Jennings, 3rd Corps Mayne's Horse, was shot dead whilst gallantly leading on his men.

EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—The gentlemen composing the engineering staff of the East India Railway in the Agra district met at Beaumont's Hotel on Thursday evening, the 7th June, for the purpose of giving the district engineer a farewell dinner and presenting him with a testimonial of their respect prior to his removal to another portion of the railway works. About twenty persons sat down to dinner, and the proceedings were conducted with great harmony and good fellowship. Upon the presentation of the testimonial (a massive silver tankard, with a suitable inscription engraved) to Mr. Smith, he "thanked the gentlemen present for that very handsome mark of their confidence, but more especially for the untiring exertions of every member of his staff, from the highest to the most subordinate, in carrying out their several duties upon the works entrusted to his care in the best possible manner, and professed his regret at leaving so many of his assistants, whose acquaintance had in the course of their business relations warmed into personal friendship."

MORAR, June 14.—In the last six months there have been great changes made in the Fortress of Gwalior. Six lofty barracks have been built for European troops facing east and west, four of which are situated very advantageously nearly in the middle of the fort and in the highest part of it, making a very noble show. The road from the foot of the fort is getting metalled, and a nice site is taken up for the officer's quarters, which will be commenced as soon as they have enough workmen. There are at present four companies of her Majesty's 71st Highlanders, a company of sappers, and a detachment of a Punjabee corps, garrisoning the fort. It has been remarked that the fort is much cooler and healthier than any other part of Gwalior with the exception of the water, which in its quality is rather hard and saponaceous. The well water is blamed by the natives for originating guinea-worm, which is a common disease in this part of the world and they use a very singular form of treatment for its cure, which is as follows:—Steep a few leaves of tobacco in warm water, and with the liquid the affected part is frequently washed, and afterwards a poultice of the same material with bran is applied and covered over with castor leaves and bandages; with a few applications of the above, and with the help of a few grains of assafoetida internally a complete cure is effected.—Delhi Gazette.

INDORE, June 5.—Intelligence has been received here of the rebels having moved further north, and were last seen in the neighbourhood of Dongurpore. His Highness the Nawab of Jorah unfortunately was seized with an attack of colic, which caused all his martial zeal to evaporate, and he returned to his capital in company with the Aden Horse. The weather just now is anything but pleasant for campaigning, the thermometer being somewhere about 130° in the sun, with a hot wind blowing as though it came off a blast furnace. However, the politicals are all on the alert, and I hear that troops are held in readiness at Neemuch and Mhow to move at a moment's notice, should the rebels break cover. Indeed, it would be little short of madness to employ European troops until we have had the first burst of the monsoon, after which there is usually pleasant weather for a month before the rains fairly set in. Some people express surprise when they hear of bodies of insurgents turning up from time to time, quite overlooking the fact that there is probably no other country in the world where it is so easy to collect bodies of disaffected men as in India. In the first place there are Bheels, Bagees, Soondies, Menos, and Meywattees, robbers by profession, and who are always ready for anything that may turn up in the shape of plunder. Then, again, if you go into any moderate-sized town under native rule, you will find hundreds of men with no ostensible employment or means of earning a livelihood honestly, more especially Mussulmans, who are generally too proud or lazy to follow any occupation except that of sowar or chuprassi; failing these, it is a problem to me how they manage to exist. Then, again, every native Rajling swells his state by entertaining a larger number of men as sepoys than he can afford to pay; or, if he does pay them, it is at such a miserably low rate, and keeps them so long in arrears, that the men are always in a chronic state of mutiny, and ready to join the standard of any leader who can hold out the most distant prospect of bettering their condition. Almost every second man you meet here is a "Vullaittee," natives of Oude or Hindustan, and though probably not in the receipt of more than three or four rupees a month, they swagger about looking as truculent as if nothing particular had ever occurred. It is also well known that there are hundreds of rebels and disbanded sepoys knocking about Central India, "waiting for the good time coming," who, if not openly countenanced by the village authorities, their presence is winked at, as they are allowed to come and go at pleasure. Although it may not be very flattering to our ideas on the subject, yet it nevertheless is an undisputed fact, that our rule is anything but popular, and were it not that the iron heel is firmly placed on their necks, they would speedily be up and doing. As I write there is every appearance of a change in the weather, dark masses of clouds are working up all round the horizon, and the atmosphere is disagreeably close and sultry.—Bombay Times.

SIMLA, June 12.—The echoes of the mountains have frequently of late been awakened to the sound of inspiring strains of lively airs played by the excellent band of the Rifles, now here on leave for a month. Yesterday morning, however, our ears were startled by a novel sound in Simla, the solemn movement of the "Dead March in Saul," denoting that a soldier was being borne to his last resting-place on earth. On inquiry I learnt that Lieutenant Myers, of the Rifle Brigade, was buried; that he had met with his death by a sad and sudden accident. Lieutenant Myers was out on a shooting expedition, accompanied by Captain Norris, of his corps, close to the snowy range, about 130 miles from Simla; he appears to have mistaken the path in the snow, his foot slipped, and he fell. About thirty feet below he was caught on a rock, but the impetus was too great for him to save himself—he bounded from rock to rock to a depth of nearly 350 feet. Life, no doubt, was extinct long before he reached the bottom of the frightful precipice. The poor shattered body was brought in almost a decomposed state into Simla, and interred in our little cemetery. The officers of the Rifle Brigade on leave here had issued invitations for a ball and supper, to be given on the 22nd; but in consequence of this melancholy event the ball has been postponed until the 27th.—Delhi Gazette.

CANPORE, June 12.—The following is the present state of the Memorial Church question. The building repaired with part of the fine levied on the city, is almost completed, and as a monument of the successful suppression of the rebellion, and triumph of Christianity over paganism, is an object which no Englishman can see without satisfaction. It is, however, so near the city, and consequently so far from barracks and bungalows, that it is not particularly well adapted for the use of the English residents. Of course, those who can go to church in carriages would not care for the distance; but it is impossible for soldiers to go so far. It is therefore proposed—and the proposition has been submitted, as I understand, to the authorities and other parties interested at home—to build another church, within the site of Wheeler's entrenchment, and close to the barracks, as a memorial church, where the troops can attend service every Sunday with ease, the expense to be defrayed by the memorial fund, aided by a grant raised (unless I am mistaken) by the Propagation of the Gospel Society, the latter society receiving in exchange the now useless building near the city, for the use of their Cawnpore mission. As to the well, a design is under consideration for that too, unless, indeed, it has passed the consideration stage, and is under execution. It is suggested by the plan of Napoleon's tomb at Paris, comparing small things with great. I have never seen the conqueror's mausoleum; but I believe the arrangement is briefly this: You go round to the back of the high altar in the church of the Invalides, and then, turning right round, are confronted by a massive portal, with a funeral genius of colossal proportions on each side. Over this door is inscribed the sentence from the Emperor's will, in which he expresses his "desire that his ashes may repose on the bank of the Seine, in the midst of that French people whom he loved so well"—and slaughtered so scientifically. Entering, you descend by successive flights of steps, along a corridor lighted, of course, only by lamps, deep into the bowels of the earth, to emerge in a wide excavation of elliptical form, dimly lighted through coloured windows far up above, in the lofty dome of the Invalides, which is suspended over your head. In the centre is the marble sarcophagus, containing—not the ashes, but the mummy—of the illustrious dead; upon which you may, if you please, look down from the floor of the church, over a balustrade. Those of your readers who have seen it will be able to correct any errors in my description—and I dare say they are not a few. Of course, only a small part of all this can be adopted at Cawnpore. But it is not desirable, for strategic reasons, to encumber the spot in question with a prominent building, and accordingly it is proposed to hollow an excavation, at and around the mouth of the well, into which the spectator may look down upon a monument to be placed in the centre, the particulars of which design I am not acquainted with.—Delhi Gazette.

HYDERABAD, May 25.—The resident, Col. Davidson, has been instructed by Government to call upon the Nizam's Government to make good the losses, estimated at Rs. 127,000, sustained by its subjects, by the plunder of Nelungee, a village of the assigned districts. The reason for demanding compensation from the Nizam, which, if it be restricted to that alone which is now asked for, is lenient in the last degree, is, that two officers of some note in the state harboured and abetted the plundering Rohillas. It is due in justice to the minister that I should say these officers were not subordinate to him, were not under his control, and were altogether beyond the reach of his influence. I understand that the Nizam's Government will be required to make good the plunder of Jugyahpett, a mart of some consideration near Masulipatam, when proper accounts shall have been received from that place of the amount of loss. These measures are not retributive, but they will do much good by showing that, if they cannot arrest misconduct in the servants of the Government, the measure of their punishment will necessarily become progressive. Roopa, the Bunjara, who commanded, and personally assisted at the murder of thirty-nine persons, has been decapitated. Two others concerned with him who were alike sentenced to death, have purchased from the heirs of the murdered persons their exemption from punishment. So much for Mahomedan law. The Moulvies must have exercised considerable ingenuity to discover the parties, who, as heirs to the thirty-nine murdered persons, had the right to condone.—Englishman.

ENSIGN G. P. CONBE, of H.M.'s 27th foot, was recently arraigned before a general court-martial, charged with conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having on several occasions, duly specified, entered the quarters of non-commissioned officers of the corps and remained there for two hours at a time drinking with them. He was further charged with having been drunk under arms, with neglect of duty, and with having made false reports. He was found guilty of all the charges and sentenced to be cashiered, a judgment which was, as a matter of course, approved and confirmed by Lord Clyde.

BANGALORE.—We (Herald) are informed that the increase in the revenue of the year just closed is no less than eleven lakhs and a half. By some the Cubbon policy would appear a paradox, for the revenue, year by year, increases without any application of the taxation screw; in fact, it has been by reducing fiscal imposts that we have arrived at these most gratifying results. The recently projected Bangalore Bank may be said to be fairly launched. The meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday (June 12 and 13) at Messrs. Nelson and Black's was attended by Europeans and natives in numbers sufficient to initiate the scheme and give it the stamp of success. The capital to commence with is to be a lakh of rupees, nearly half of which was subscribed on the spot.

TREASURY BILLS.—On Saturday morning, June 2nd, at ten o'clock, the tenders for the conversion of the Treasury Bills were opened at the Government Office in the Fort. The Chief Secretary presided, and commenced the proceedings by placing a sealed envelope, containing the Government minimum prices, in the hands of Mr. Nelson, the President of the Bank of Madras. On the tenders being read only one was accepted, and the others to the number of about a dozen were rejected. The envelope containing the Government minimum was then opened, and the prices were found to be as under:—5½ per cent. loan, 3 per cent. prem.; 5 per cent. loan, 3 per cent. dis.; 4 per cent. loan, 17 per cent. dis.; the parties representing the bulk of the tenders then accepted the above terms, their offers having been only about half per cent. lower. Mr. Harrison, the Accountant-general, assisted the Chief Secretary in conducting the business.

VIZAGAPATAM.—The Report of the Orphan Asylums at Vizagapatam for 1858-59, has been submitted to Government. These institutions, which are intended for the orphan children of Europeans and their descendants, are under the management of a committee composed of the collector, the senior military officer of the station, and the chaplain at Waltair. Fifteen boys and twenty-five girls were on the establishment at the date of the report. The progress of the boys is stated to be satisfactory, but as the report is silent as respects the girls in this matter, Government have requested that the omission should be supplied in future reports, and the course of the instruction pursued stated. The institutions own some houses in Vizagapatam, and the committee requested that Government would place at their disposal, as in the case of private contributions, a sum equal to double the amount realised from the rent of the buildings. Government have replied that they are unable to accede to the request. The principle on which they have proceeded, Government add, in doubling the subscriptions, is to stimulate private benevolence. To double the income of the institution derived from other sources would not have this effect, but rather the reverse. Major Gompertz, one of the committee, proposed to increase the number of the officers associated with him—a step which the Government does not consider desirable, as it would render the committee needlessly large. They have been asked to suggest the names of two persons resident or stationed at Vizagapatam, whom they would wish to associate with themselves, who are willing to serve, and are likely to take an interest in the institutions.

MYSORE.—Her Majesty's Government have ruled that Mysore is not to be given over to the Madras Government during the lifetime of the present rajah.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN.—It has been resolved to present an address to Sir Charles Trevelyan previous to his departure, expressive of the views of the community of his administration, and of the feeling with which he is regarded. Sir George Clerk, the Bombay Times says, is perhaps the only Governor India has ever had, who looked amongst the servants of the East India Company for his private and military secretary. We thought Mr. Carmichael a member of the Madras civil service, and that the 45th regt. Madras N.I. claimed Colonel Crewe; the Madras army list supports our impression, and therefore we do not hesitate to claim for Sir Charles Trevelyan the honour which our Bombay contemporary would confer upon Sir George Clerk. All honour to Sir George for the disinterestedness displayed in selecting his staff, but we cannot allow anyone to appropriate for him that which belongs to another, namely, the credit of being the first Indian Governor who, in the selection of his own household, acted on public grounds regardless of personal considerations. Sir Charles Trevelyan, as he himself assured us, at the dinner given last year by the Volunteer Guards, and as we all knew long before that assurance, "came over the side of the ship alone." His private and military secretaries were appointed on the recommendation of those at the head of the civil and military services, who were supposed to know who were the most deserving and, at the same time, most likely to be efficient. The choice of the Governor met with general approval, and up to the moment when his Excellency left office, we do not think that he, the public, or the services, had the slightest ground to regret the appointments. The aides-de-camp were chosen almost in the same way. One, an officer of our 37th Grenadiers, had been on the staff of Lord Harris, and he continued to serve on that of the new Governor, most likely because it was not thought desirable to leave Government house without "an old face," in the common acceptance of the term. In appointing the other aide-de-camp Sir Charles Trevelyan resolved to pay a well deserved compliment to our glorious Madras Fusiliers just then returned from Bengal; his Excellency therefore wrote, informing the commanding officer of his intention, and asking to be supplied with the name of the officer most deserving, and Colonel Fischer was named, and the Governor, without a moment's hesitation, appointed the adjutant of the regiment. Sir Charles appointed a native aide-de-camp also, selecting the officer recommended to him as the most worthy of the honour. Subsequently, when a vacancy occurred, his Excellency took advantage of the opportunity, and very properly appointed an officer belonging to one of her Majesty's regiments of the line.—Examiner.

BOMBAY.

UNIFORMS AND MUFTI.

Sir William Mansfield has always passed for a bit of a martinet; and no sooner has he been appointed Commander-in-chief than, with a vigour which another "Sir William" might envy, he has begun to reform the dress of the Bombay army. The following circular order embodies the opinions of the new chief on the propriety of an officer appearing before the civilian public without his uniform:—

Adjutant-general's Office,
Head Quarters, Poona, 9th June, 1860.

SIR,—The Commander-in-Chief desires that the officers of all branches of the Bombay army may be discouraged as much as possible from the use of "plain" clothes. They are to follow her Majesty's regulations in this matter, and, according to the orders applicable to the season, are to appear dressed in uniform in all places of public resort.

2. In short, whenever an officer leaves his own lines after 10 A.M. he is to be dressed in uniform.

3. This rule is not to interfere with the dress of officers when they may be engaged in sport, or during their morning rides when off duty.

4. Officers commanding regiments must be well aware what a great additional expense it is to the young subaltern to keep up two wardrobes, viz., one of "uniform," and another of "plain" clothes. Many young officers are led into extravagance and debt upon this account, because they cannot resist the example set by their richer comrades; that which is a convenient fashion in England is really productive of nothing but a foolish and unnecessary expense in India.

5. It will be understood that officers dining out, whether at the presidency or at military stations, are to appear in their regimental or staff uniform—either in "full" or "undress," as occasion may demand.

6. This order does not apply to officers in civil employment under the Government.—I have, &c.

(Signed) T. Strock, Major,
Officiating Adjutant-general.

To the Brigadier Commanding—Brigade.

The officers of our army are, perhaps, justly accused of not being sufficiently professional. They like to "doff the lion's hide" whenever they can, and to appear for a time like other men. Indeed, the first observations a Frenchman makes, if one talks with him of the English army, is that the officers can have no proper pride in their profession, or they would not cast off their uniform as if it were a nuisance as soon as they are relieved from work. The French officer would think it an indignity to appear in "mufti," and he cannot conceive why an Englishman should have a different feeling from his own. The reason of the contrast probably is, that the French are a military nation—the soldier being with them the highest caste, whereas with us the army is quite subordinated, and an officer is taught to hold it a higher thing to be an English citizen than to command a regiment. We think Sir William Mansfield will not take much by his motion. It is difficult to change long-established habits. The argument about increased expense is absurd. Officers must have a civilian dress, and if they be forced to wear it less and their uniform more in future, the saving thereby will be inappreciable. Besides, the health and comfort of the officers are of more importance than professional appearance; and any one can calculate what is likely to be the result of compelling every officer to do office work all day in his thick cloth uniform. If Sir William Mansfield makes the tour of the military offices in Bombay, he will, we imagine, find that shirt-sleeves are commoner than shell-jackets.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. W. HART, one of the Puisne Judges of Sudder Adawlut, retires from the Bombay Civil Service in October next.

MR. GARRETT has been appointed Postmaster of Bombay, in the room of W. Blowers, retired. The office of Deputy-Postmaster-General here has been abolished.

AHMEDABAD.—There is a great deal of excitement in this station at present, as the worthy political agent of the Rewa Kanta has reported 5,000 men of Tantia Topee's late army, and under his nephew, to be in arms in the Ban-swarra jungle. Three hundred of the 4th King's Own Regiment, with three companies of H.M.'s 14th Regiment N.I., and all the available men of the Guzerat Irregular Horse, under Capt. Whitehill, left this place on May 30. Since then four companies of H.M.'s 11th Regiment N.I. and one company 14th Regiment have been ordered to be held in readiness to start at a moment's notice. We are in great doubts as to what all this will lead to, as the late 5,000 men have dwindled down to about a hundred.

"RECEPTION" AT POONA.—His Excellency the Governor held a special durbar on Wednesday afternoon, for the purpose of receiving His Highness Meer Jaffer Ali Khan Bahadoor, of Surat, and the Imaun of Muscat, who is at present in Bombay. Their reception was very cordial, and we understand that the two princes left Parell exceedingly well pleased with the new Governor and all his staff.

CAPTAIN TRIPE, late of the 50th Madras Native Infantry, whose melancholy death at the English Hotel has been announced in the local journals, is the officer who, a few weeks since, was removed from the Madras army by order of the Secretary of State for India, on a wretched pittance of £60 per annum, and this too, it is believed, for an offence committed against discipline fifteen months previously, for which the unfortunate victim to some secret agency had undergone trial and sentence. Captain Tripe would appear to have been tried for ineptitude, and was sentenced by court-martial to six months' suspension. On the expiration of his sentence, Government availed themselves of his services to do duty with the 26th Native Infantry stationed at Kaptee, for a period of twelve months. During the entire interval, Captain Tripe discharged his duty in a most satisfactory manner, not having committed a single breach of discipline. We may, therefore, well ask why this officer permitted to return to duty, or why removed from the service so long after he had committed a crime for which he was tried and punished? Well may officers, after such proceedings, consider their position insecure. We were under the impression that the days had gone past when officers could be summarily removed without a court-martial: but it seems we have been mistaken. The case of Captain Tripe appears a peculiarly hard one, and, we think, demands inquiry.—Bombay Telegraph.

LOSS OF THE AMERICAN SHIP "SQUANTUM," WITH A CARGO OF ICE.—It is with deep regret we (Bombay Times) inform our readers of the loss of the American ship Squantum, Captain Miller, near Allybaugh, on the night of Thursday, the 14th June. She struck on a rock near "Coorla Boula." The sea at the time was very rough, and the wind blowing strongly. Three lives were lost—the carpenter, the cook, and a seaman—and fifteen of the crew are now on shore near the wreck, including the captain's wife. The chief mate came to Bombay yesterday, June 21, in the ferry-boat for assistance. The agents of the ship, Messrs. Dossabhoy, Merwanjee, & Co., with a praiseworthy zeal, have despatched every requisite that will tend to the comfort of these unfortunate people. The Squantum left Boston, U.S., on the 18th February last, with 925 tons of ice, and about 50 tons of general cargo, and made the Line in less than twenty-five days, or what is called a "clipper run" for a vessel deeply laden. After crossing the Line she experienced light winds in the S. E. Trades, which continued until off the Cape, towards the last of April. After doubling the Cape, strong winds from the N. and N. E. bore her off in sight of the Roderique island. From this time she made fair sailing weather until in about latitude 5 deg. or 6 deg. south of the line, when light baffling airs from the north and west, and a strong current setting in from the west continued until in lat. 8 deg. N., when the weather changed suddenly to stormy, with heavy squalls, the wind hauling to the south-west. This weather continued, with boisterous seas, and on the 12th of June broke away for a few hours. Soon after, however, the sky was overcast with thick heavy clouds, so that no observation could be taken, and this continued until the 14th, at noon, when Capt. Miller ordered soundings to be taken; she was then in twenty-five fathoms water, with a bottom of blue soft mud, Lat. about 18 deg. 5 m., weather cloudy, with frequent squalls. The ship was steering N., and the lead going every hour. At 2 p.m. it cleared away a little, when they sighted land, which Capt. Miller judged to be about fifteen miles off. The soundings were continued every hour, the 3 o'clock cast bringing up mud and shells at twenty-four fathoms. Continued soundings showed 23, 19, 10, 13, and 11 fathoms; this last cast being about 7 o'clock p.m., when the two lights were sighted bearing N. E., the wind being then from the S. W. The yards were squared, and the vessel continued running before the wind until about 8 o'clock, when the ship hauled off to N. W., with the tide ebbing, when the wind died away. The ship was taken aback by the sudden change of wind, and tremendous seas were breaking over the decks, and having lost sight of the lights, Captain Miller was unable to determine his position only by soundings, the lead being constantly kept going. A calm soon intervened, and the ship being unmanageable against its continuance, as also a strong tide, she dropped anchors in six fathoms of water about 9 o'clock p.m. About twenty minutes after the anchors were let go the vessel struck in five fathoms of water. Heavy seas were now sweeping over the decks, with a perfect calm prevailing. After the first shock, she parted her port anchor, and went ashore, and by almost a miracle on a sandy point, jutting out between jagged rocks, on either of which points had the ship struck every soul must have perished. The masts were then cut away to ease her as much as possible, as she was now lying stern to the sea, which was making complete breaches over her; the captain, his wife, and the crew, betaking themselves to the topgallant forecastle for safety, fearing that the ship would go to pieces before daylight. As soon as daylight appeared an English life-boat, of the most approved construction, which was yet unharmed, was got ready and launched at about eight a.m. The mate and two men then got into her, but she had barely cleared the ship's side when a heavy sea struck the life-boat, splitting the bow open, and rolling the boat over, turning out the officer and his two men, who were, however, fortunate enough to again grasp it, when they were safely landed by the line being slacked away from the ship. This means of communication with the shore was, however, lost to those on board the wreck, having got foul of the broken spars in the heavy surf. An attempt was made to renew this communication, by letting over water casks with lines attached, which safely reached the shore, but of which the natives would take no notice. Light rafts were then constructed of spars, but Captain Miller could not persuade any of the men to venture upon them, after the ill luck attending the launching of the life-boat. His aim was to see every man clear of the ship before the departure of himself and wife, to accomplish which only one course seemed left him to pursue. He knocked out the panel of a door lying on the deck, and asked his son if he would go, to which the latter cheerfully replied "yes." This lad was then bound to the panel by his father, his arms and legs being left free, and launched into the surf. Being a good swimmer, he succeeded nobly in braving the seas which now and then washed over him, and when half way to the beach turned, and, throwing himself almost wholly from the water, saluted his mother and father, who were anxiously watching the result of this venture from the ship, now rapidly going to pieces. The noble lad's success encouraged the men to action, who then went off in twos and threes on light rafts constructed of spars. The cook got foul of the rigging before leaving the ship's side, and, becoming exhausted, went down within a cable's length of the wreck. After the last man of the crew had gone, Captain Miller fastened his wife to a plank, and with rattlings to bear them up and a life line passed around her body, pushed off from the wreck. The heavy surf rolled them over and over, but with almost superhuman strength they were enabled to keep their heads above water, until when about half way to the shore Captain Miller succeeded in getting the light plank head-on, and then went safely and more comfortably to the beach. When ashore, it was discovered that the carpenter and a seaman were missing, of whom none of those saved knew anything. The captain, his wife, and son and the crew, safely arrived here on Tuesday morning, June 19, from Allybaugh, whence a boat was sent for them by Messrs. Dossabhoy, Merwanjee, & Co., the American agents.

CHOLERA is raging at Bhosawul (the junction of the Nagpore and Jubbulpore lines of railway), where the mortality amongst the cartmen employed in removing the railway material is very great. Several Europeans have also died from this scourge.

THE EASTERN NARRA.—The mouth of the Eastern Narra was opened on the 31st May, in the presence of a vast number of the native population of Sukkur and Roore. Lieut. Penny, the energetic superintendent of the works, was at his post at early dawn, directing the operations of the workmen in cutting away the upper portion of the bund. Shortly after sunrise, Captain Wallace, settlement officer, Mr. Surtees, deputy collector, Mr. Newnham, assistant collector, and Mr. Strettle, deputy forest ranger, arrived in the police barge. The ceremony began by Lieut. Penny presenting longies to the principal darogahs and moonshees, with an appropriate address in Sindhi, which was received with acclamation from the assembly. An opening was then made through the bund, and the water moved through with gradually-increasing violence until the whole of the bund disappeared amidst the loud cheers of the assembled multitude. Sweetmeats were then distributed, and the party broke up.—Our Paper (Kurrachee).

EAST INDIA MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY.—This company, of which the firm of Messrs. Dirom, Hunter, and Co. are secretaries, is about to be dissolved by mutual consent, the operations of the company being of so limited a nature as not to admit of its being carried on.

Under instructions received by telegram from the Government of India, H.E. the Governor in Council hereby notifies that, on and from the first day of September next, the pass duty on Malwa opium will be Rs. six hundred per chest, and that this rate will remain in force for at least a year. By order of H.E. the Hon. the Governor in Council.—B. H. ELLIS, Sec. to Govt. Bombay Castle, June 7, 1860."

A NEW COTTON SPINNING FACTORY.—The Bombay spinning factories are about to receive an addition to their number. A project has just been set on foot by some of the enterprising native merchants for the establishment of a cotton spinning factory. It is proposed to raise a capital of Rupees 12,50,000, divided into 500 shares of Rupees 2,500 each, for the purpose. The prospectus has met with a favourable response. We understand that the whole of the shares have been subscribed for.

DEATH OF LORD ELPHINSTONE.—We regret to announce the death of the Right Hon. Lord Elphinstone, which melancholy event took place on Thursday, in King-street, St. James's. The deceased nobleman, who was 13th Baron Elphinstone, in the Peerage of Scotland, was born in 1807, and succeeded his father in 1813. After having filled the office of Governor of the Madras Presidency from 1837 to 1842, he returned to England; but shortly after again visited India in a private capacity, and travelled much through our possessions in Hindostan as well as in Cashmere. Having again returned to England, he was a Lord in Waiting to the Queen from 1847 to February, 1852, and from January to October, 1853, when he was appointed Governor of Bombay. It was during the latter part of his tenure of this office, on the occasion of the outbreak of the Indian mutiny, that Lord Elphinstone displayed an amount of tact and resolution which secured him the hearty goodwill of all parties. On the suppression of that outbreak he received the thanks of Parliament for his great services, was made a Grand Cross of the Bath, and also created a Baron of the Peerage of the United Kingdom. His lordship, as our readers are aware, had only recently returned to England, having prolonged his stay in India at the express request of the Government. That delay, however beneficial to the public interest, proved fatal to a constitution already enfeebled by a tropical climate and worn out with work. Lord Elphinstone returned to England only to expire; he sank from no organic disease, but from sheer exhaustion, and has thus added another to that long list of public servants whose lives have been sacrificed in the faithful discharge of their onerous duties.—Times.

COOLY EMIGRATION.—During the year 1859 44,397 Indians were introduced into the Mauritius—viz., 23,180 from Calcutta, 15,975 from Madras, and 5,242 from Bombay; 31,643 were men and 12,754 women, the proportion of women was, therefore, 40·31 per cent.. The deaths at sea were at the rate of 1·73 per cent. on the whole immigration; the mortality from Calcutta was 2·66 per cent., from Madras 0·60, and from Bombay 0·99. The number of Indians who returned to India during the year 1859 was 5,118, of whom 4,147 were men and 971 women, the return passages bearing the proportion of about 13 per cent. to the immigration, and the women returning to their country being about 23 per cent. on the number of the men. In the Mauritius Madras labourers are preferred by the planters to those from Calcutta, the Bombay immigrants are described as inferior in capability for mere agricultural labour, but superior in skill and intelligence. The number of immigrants introduced into the West Indies in the past year amounted to 9,496; of whom 3,767 reached Trinidad, 4,746 British Guiana, 555 St. Lucia, 299 Grenada, 103 St. Kitt's, and 26 Antigua. In 1859 two ships arrived at Martinique from the French possessions in India with 971 coolies; 18 deaths occurred on the voyage, being at the rate of 1·8 per cent. on the number embarked. Three ships arrived at the same destination from the coast of Africa with 1,408 souls; the mortality in one of these ships amounted to 80 deaths, or 12·4 per cent. for the number embarked. One ship also arrived from Shanghai with 331 Chinese, having lost 24 on the voyage.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

WHATEVER truth, if any, there may have been in the half-earnest, half-jocular allegations formerly made against the Madras Presidency as being par excellence "the benighted," it is very certain that such prejudices are at the present day entirely unfounded. Partly owing to the genius of Colonel Cotton, and partly also to the enterprise and clear-sightedness of the European community, great public interest has lately been evinced in the magnificent undertakings which have been set on foot for the purpose of supplementing the handiwork of nature. Large tracts of land, possessing a most fertile soil, neutralised by the insufficient supply of moisture, and inadequate means of communication with the coast, are at length being raised to their proper standard of value. The Government, indeed, is entitled to no small credit for the great works in progress connected with the Cauvery and the Godavery, and it is much to be desired that nothing may again occur to delay their completion. But still higher praise is due to the public company who have taken in hand to make up for the shortcomings of the Government. It is unnecessary in these columns to dilate on the great benefits likely to be conferred on the Presidency by the labours foreshadowed in the prospectus of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company. Our object at present is simply to draw attention to the proposal made by that Company to raise capital in England for the prosecution of most profitable operations in Orissa and the adjacent provinces. We regret, however, to observe that her Majesty's Secretary of State for India appears to regard their proposition with indifference, if not with suspicion. It is not easy, at least, in any other way to account for the reference made to the Government of Calcutta, that "Paradise of Fools," and Limbo of all projects not having for their aim the glorification of a certain clique, the exaltation of the natives, and the humiliation of European settlers. Possibly, however, the memorial of the Cotton Supply Association may induce Sir Charles Wood to judge for himself of the merits of the new programme put forth by the Company to which we have just alluded, and in that hope, rather than in that expectation, we shall endeavour patiently to await his final decision.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE BENGAL PRESIDENCY, 1858-59.

original suits were instituted; of which 17,860 were connected with land rent, 13,066 with land, 55,534 with debts, wages, &c., 422 with caste, religion, &c., and 2,675 with indigo, sugar, salt, &c. Those suits which were brought to trial and decided on their merits were about 2 to 1 in favour of the plaintiff, or to speak more exactly, 30,012 against 19,480 in favour of the defendant. The number of appeal cases was 21,268, of which 8,344 were pending at the close of the year. The total number of persons that came under the cognisance of the criminal tribunals amounted to 112,249, while the total number of criminals apprehended was 108,177, or 10 per cent. in excess of the preceding year. They were disposed of as follows:—Discharged without trial, 1,017, acquitted, 34,570, convicted, 67,995, committed to the sessions, 4,922, otherwise disposed of, 652, under trial, on 31st December, 1858, 3,003. Before the sessions' judges, 3,771 persons were brought up for trial, of whom 30 were discharged without trial, 906 acquitted, 1,446 convicted, 749 referred to Sudder Court, 140 otherwise disposed of, and 480 under trial. The Sudder Nizamut, on their part, had to do with 1,784 persons, of whom 285 were released unconditionally, 1,371 convicted, 19 otherwise disposed of, 3 died in jail, and 106 cases were still pending at the close of the year 1858. Sentence of death was passed on 58 criminals; 19 were sentenced to imprisonment for life, and 234 to transportation. The ratio of crime to population was 1 to 311, or 110,654 cases to 34,442,118 inhabitants. The average percentage of recovery on stolen property was no more than 12½ per cent., which is little creditable to the police; important improvements are said to have been introduced into that force, and certainly not before they were needed.

NON-REGULATION PROVINCES: JUDICIAL.—In the non-regulation provinces of Assam, Arracan, Chota Nagpore, Cachar, and the Tenasserim provinces, 14,423 original suits were instituted in the Mooniffs' Courts, of which 3,249 were pending at the close of the year; 6,789 original suits and 134 appeals came before the Sudder Ameens, who disposed of all save 432 of the former, and 11 of the latter; 1,738 original suits, and 244 appeals were disposed of by the Principal Sudder Ameens in Assam, with the exception of 344 of the one, and 27 of the other; the assistant commissioners, again, had to deal with 11,426 original suits, and 4,297 appeals; but 614 of the former and 760 of the latter were still pending on the 31st December, 1858; while the commissioners were called upon to decide in 11 original suits—instituted in Cachar—and 654 appeals, of which 102 remained undecided, and one original suit. In the same year, 15,662 criminals were apprehended, to whom must be added 106 under trial at the close of the preceding year, and 95 transferred. Of these, 10,397 were convicted, 4,968 acquitted, 271 committed to sessions, 18 discharged without trial, and 108 otherwise disposed of. The commitments to the sessions resulted in 121 convictions, and 98 acquittals, while 27 were referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, and the remainder still pending or otherwise disposed of; capital sentences were passed in only 8 cases. The nature of the offences committed is thus analysed; offences against the person, 3,186; against property, with violence, 242; against property, without violence, 3,024; malicious offences against property, 646; forgery, &c., 7; miscellaneous offences, 2,937. The ratio of crime to population was in Assam as 1 to 276; in Arracan as 1 to 187; in Chota Nagpore as 1 to 914; and in Darjeeling as 1 to 98; giving a mean average of 1 to 388, or 10,042 crimes in a population of 3,901,356. In the first three provinces the proportion of stolen property received by the police was about 16 per cent.; in Darjeeling rather more. It must be remembered, however, the value of the property reported to be stolen is that stated by the owners. A great improvement was introduced into the procedure with regard to petty offences, entailing imprisonment for not more than six months, by adopting throughout the non-regulation provinces the viva voce system that had been found to answer so well in Assam. The depositions of all plaintiffs and witnesses, and the answers of defendants are taken orally—the substance merely being recorded in the handwriting of the presiding officer, either in English or the vernacular tongue as most convenient to himself.

DACOITY.—In the 24-Pergunnahs there was one case of dacoity, and one attempt. In Baraset, none. In Harrah, one of dacoity, and one attempt were committed. The Hooghly district figures for 27 cases, against 136 in 1852; several river dacoits were arrested, and a portion of a gang "composed mainly of the servants of the Boro Melliah and the Melliah Ramchunderpore indigo factories, who were under some influential protection." In Burdwan there were 20 cases of dacoity, and the Commissioner expresses his belief that "the small talookdars and landowners in Burdwan are generally more or less in league with dacoits, and are the receivers of all stolen property." In Nuddeah 15 dacoities were committed, and 40 dacoits sentenced to transportation for life. Jessore appears in the list for 15 cases, and Moorshedabad for 29; in the latter district there were 2,301 known and registered dacoits, of whom 67 only were apprehended. In Pubna the number of gang robberies was 6, the same in Furreedpore, and 15 in Midnapore. The general results of the year's operations are described as satisfactory, 254 dacoits being transported for life, against 126 in the preceding year, and 108 sentenced to imprisonment for various terms, against 20 in 1857.

PRISON DISCIPLINE.—The Inspector-general visited 43 jails, some of them more than once, in the course of the year, and in doing so travelled over 5,546 miles. The number of prisoners in custody between 30th April, 1858, and 30th April, 1859, was 75,095, and on the first-named day 21,612 persons were in confinement, of whom only 588 were females. During the year 53,055 males and 428 females were "admitted into jail," as the report euphuistically expresses it. Of these 75,095 prisoners, 11,736 were transferred to other districts, 39,974 were released, 1,401 escaped, 2,440 died, and 145 were executed; 10,390, including 617 females, remaining in jail on the 30th April, 1859. The whole cost for the year amounted to Rs. 8,83,920, or rather less than Rs. 44 per head; in the Kossiah Hills a prisoner costing Rs. 118½, and in Sumbulpore little over 24. In the course of the official year there were 5,511 prisoners employed in handicraft, the net profits of the year being Rs. 1,05,377 11 8, to which should be added Rs. 21,308 6 4 on account of the printing department of the Alipore jail. The gross financial results of the year, including the value of convict labour, are estimated at Rs. 3,94,467 10 11, or about one-half of the actual outlay. Thirty of the jails seem to have been overcrowded to an extent extremely prejudicial to the health of their inmates. Sickness and mortality were from various causes excessive. Between January 1 and December 31, 1858, there were no fewer than 2,800 deaths, giving an average of 9.29 per cent. on the Hindoos in custody, 3.93 of Mahomedans, and 1.20 of other denominations. Of the total number 138 were life prisoners, while 1,284 had been less than six months in confinement. Epidemic cholera caused 360 of these deaths, or 13.07 per cent., but dysentery was the chief agent in this unusual mortality.

COURT OF SMALL CAUSES, CALCUTTA.—The total sum credited to Government was Rs. 1,10,915 11 9, from which Rs. 1,03,274 11 0 must be deducted for expenses of the Court. The number of cases instituted amounted to 29,950, and of summonses to 70,012. The amount litigated was Rs. 7,65,412 11 1, and the average number of cases per diem 121.7 Judgments for plaintiffs were 12,447, for defendants 1,412, nonsuits 2,996, struck out and compromised 13,133, and postponed after hearing 91.

REVENUE.—The total demand in the shape of land-tax was Rs. 4,12,92,788, of which Rs. 3,77,90,636 were collected, 1,91,892 remitted, and 33,10,251 left outstanding. In other words the aggregate collections amounted to 91½ per cent., the remissions to less than ½ per cent., and the balance to 8 per cent. The revenue derived from Customs was nearly £310,000 in excess of that of the preceding year, while the charges of collection were £3,000 less. The total receipts were Rs. 1,61,60,868—namely, merchandize, 71,46,856, and salt 90,14,012; charges, Rs. 5,16,327; and the net revenue Rs. 1,56,44,541. In addition to this the Maulmain import collections yielded Rs. 53,410, and the exports Rs. 10,774. The opium department yielded Rs. 4,64,08,000, from which Rs. 90,34,880 must be deducted for charges, leaving a net revenue of Rs. 3,73,73,720. From Abkaree opium the gross receipts were Rs. 10,59,284, and the net ditto Rs. 10,16,284. The net revenue from the Abkaree generally, amounted to Rs. 35,93,760, and the charges of collection to 17 per cent. on the gross receipts.

SHIPPING.—The British sailing vessels that entered the port of Calcutta were 497 in number, representing 382,116 tons; American, 130, of 113,035 tons; French, 100, of 45,644 tons; other countries, including native craft, 116, of 31,358 tons; steamers, 107, of 99,987 tons. The departures were: British sailing vessels, 502, of 390,350 tons; American, 132, of 117,211 tons; French, 110, of 47,790 tons; other countries, 116, of 30,200 tons; and 100 steamers, of 88,645 tons.

EDUCATION.—At the entrance examination there were 706 candidates, of whom 107 passed in the first division, and 233 in the second. Out of 41 candidates for degrees in the faculties of Art and Law, 10 passed in the former and 3 in the latter. The colleges were reported as doing well, and so likewise the zillah schools. Female schools were 8 in number, the pupils in each varying from 22 to 129, but the results on the whole appeared to be very satisfactory. Of Government vernacular schools there were 15 in South and 27 in North-East Bengal.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The approximate estimate of the expenditure during the year was Rs. 56,50,000—namely, military works, Rs. 27,60,000; civil works, Rs. 5,10,000; repairs, Rs. 12,80,000; establishment and contingencies, Rs. 11,00,000. The available accommodation for European troops in the Lower Provinces was sufficient for 17,082 men (one married soldier reckoning as four single men), while buildings were in progress for 2,150 more.

CALCUTTA.—The assets in the hands of the Municipal Commissioners amounted to Rs. 8,30,105 3 0, their expenditure for the year being Rs. 7,56,093 14 5, including Rs. 1,48,070 5 4 set apart on the new drainage account, and Rs. 30,094 9 9 on the water supply account. The total amount of rates and taxes levied on the inhabitants of Calcutta was Rs. 7,09,598 5 4—namely, house rate, Rs. 4,99,013 14 10; carriage and horse tax, Rs. 89,209 8 6; and lighting rate, Rs. 1,21,374 14 6; to which should be added Rs. 3,853 from licence fees, and Rs. 7,046 7 3 from fines levied under the Conservancy Act. In the year 1858 there occurred 16,584 deaths, against 18,504 in 1857. The mortality among Europeans included 346 seamen and 643 soldiers, reducing the deaths among the fixed population to 673, or 131 fewer than in the preceding year. Of the Europeans 593 died of cholera, 252 of dysentery, 166 of fever, 40 (children) of convulsions, 33 of diarrhoea, 30 of consumption, 2 of small-pox, and 585 from various causes. The coolie emigration continued to be popular, and was decidedly on the increase. To Mauritius there emigrated 13,951 men, 4,990 women, and 2,451 children, and to the West Indies 3,391 men, 2,211 women, and 648 children. The returns were, from Mauritius, 3,959 men, 653 women, and 457 children; and from the West Indies, 304 men, 67 women, and 58 children. Many of those returning home again emigrate, taking with them a large number of their village people. The number of ships proceeding to Mauritius was 58, and the mortality on board never exceeded 1½ per cent.

LUNATIC ASYLUMS.—In the Bhowanipore Asylum, which receives only European and East Indian patients, 95 cases were treated, at an expense of Rs. 39,016 6 4. The Dullanda Asylum contained 261 natives on the 1st January, 1858; the cures were 20 per cent., and the cost of each patient per month, 5 rupees 3 pice. In the Patna Asylum, at the above date, there were 128 patients, and the cures among the recently admitted were especially numerous; the mortality under 10 per cent. The Moorshedabad Asylum received 122 patients, of whom 50 per cent. were cured. In these institutions the patients are chiefly employed in making rope, string, morahs, &c., and in weeding the grounds.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg to forward to you a list of the lieutenant-colonels of the three corps of Indian artillery, showing the proper position in which they should stand if the regiments are amalgamated, to form, as I believe is in contemplation, the second regiment of royal artillery. I have added to the above a few of the senior captains, merely by way of illustration of the principle of calculation—the lowest decimal fraction taking the highest place on the general list.

By this means, anyone who will take the trouble to consider the subject will perceive that every officer will be placed in the position, or the one equivalent to it, which he would occupy if he remained in his own corps as at present, and would have as fair a chance of promotion.

There are certain abstruse calculations of probabilities, which actuaries delight in, giving perhaps a different result to the one now under consideration, but I submit that arithmetical laws are our only true guides in the classification of officers when the amalgamation really does occur; and as a correct plan for carrying it out I recommend it to Sir C. Wood, and invite through your columns the fullest criticism thereon.

I will mention how unfair it would be to arrange the lieutenant-colonels in the general list by the dates of their regimental promotion; should such a course be decided on, the senior lieutenant-colonel in the Bombay artillery would be placed somewhere twelfth on the list instead of fourth, his proper position. This plan can only be resorted to when the decimals are equal, as I have shown in the list.

I trust you will give this letter publicity, and that it will serve in some measure to assist the parties who are supposed to be deliberating on the question in arriving at a just conclusion, as well as to prevent the Indian Government being inundated with a heap of grievance memorials. Meanwhile we, out in this country, in the spirit are as patient as may be,—our philosophy inculcates patience and long suffering suspense. But in the flesh we grumble, and wonder what is coming next; after close on two years' delay, including a Commission and its report, we humbly pray for a little (indecent?) haste.—Yours truly,
Bombay, 7th June, 1860. MATROSS.

As the lieutenant-colonels of artillery of the three presidencies would stand in the General List if the three regiments of Indian artillery were amalgamated.

EXPLANATION OF THE ABOVE.—There are 12 full colonels in the Bengal artillery, 7 in Madras, and 5 in Bombay; therefore the senior lieutenant-colonel in Bengal has twelve men to give him one step, the fraction representing his position is 1-12th = ·0833; the second lieutenant-colonel has thirteen men or 2-13th's = ·1538, and so on.

The senior lieutenant-colonel in Madras has seven men to give him one step or 1-7th = ·1428; the second lieutenant-colonel eight men ditto, or 7-8th's = ·2500.

The senior lieutenant-colonel in Bombay, five men ditto, or 1-5th = ·2000; the second lieutenant-colonel in Bombay, six men, or 7-6th's = ·3333.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE CHINA WAR.

On the Report of the Committee of Supply of the Vote of £143,896 for arrears due to the Indian Government on account of the last Chinese war,

Mr. ROEBUCK took occasion to condemn the war with China as utterly indefensible as regarded either the interests or the honour of England. The war began, he said, by an attempt to force opium upon the people of China, and he asked whether the people of this country would tolerate the forcible introduction of arrack into Liverpool. We bombarded Canton, and compelled the Chinese Government to agree to a treaty stipulating, among other things, to allow a British Minister to reside at Peking. But the origin of the war being unjust—and this had been admitted by the Chancellor of the Exchequer—we were now sending a large force and spending millions of money to enforce a treaty the result of that unjust war.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER admitted that this was a question which could hardly be too much discussed, and that, in dealing with Eastern nations, we should adopt the principles of truth and fair dealing. As to the merits of the quarrel with China, he denied that the treaty was one which the Chinese Government was not bound to fulfil; he thought it was a valid contract. The question was not whether this or that provision in it ought to be enforced, but whether a treaty recognised by the Emperor of China should be set at naught.

The report was then agreed to.

DELHI CUSTOMS.—The collections on the Delhi customs line for the official year 1859-60, exhibit an increase on the collections of the previous year of Rs 3,36,700.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—MEMORIAL.

To the Right Honourable Sir Charles Wood, Bart., M.P., &c., Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

Showeth—

That the correspondence between the Secretary of State for India in Council, and the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, subsequent to the presentation of their former memorial to the Secretary of State for India in Council, on the 10th day of April last, regarding the proposal made by that Company to raise, in England, sufficient capital to construct throughout the province of Orissa and the adjacent territories, works of irrigation and means of water transport, has been brought to the notice of your memorialists, who have given to the same the most careful consideration.

That, looking to the extensive natural capabilities of the territories in question, for producing a large and continuous supply of cotton to this country, if provided with the proposed works; and considering, also, the important and additional fact that such works will, when executed, form the most convenient and advantageous outlet to the coast for the produce of other districts notoriously adapted to the growth of that article, your memorialists view with considerable interest the proceedings of a Company seeking, without material aid from Government, to open up to the consumers of cotton in England a field of future supply of so large and so promising a character; and they respectfully, but firmly, submit that it is of vital importance that the most prompt and liberal encouragement and support should be freely given by Government to such an enterprise, not only on account of its own peculiar merits, but because its success will inevitably be the means of attracting to the rapid and complete development of the resources of India, and the consequent benefit of England, the surplus capital of the latter country; and by thus securing the social and material welfare of the former, create firm and lasting feelings of loyalty on the part of the native population, based upon their prosperity and contentment.

That their perusal of the correspondence before adverted to, has produced in the minds of your memorialists feelings of deep regret and disappointment, inasmuch as they cannot view the reference to the Government of India at Calcutta, therein proposed, for the purpose of transferring to that distant authority negotiations which have already taken up much time in this country, and should be concluded here, otherwise than unnecessary—productive, at best, of indefinite delay, and calculated to check, if not wholly prevent, the future flow of British capital into India; for it is manifest that English promoters and directors of undertakings for the improvement of that country will not, at their own expense and risk, enter into an uncertain negotiation to be carried on by the unsatisfactory medium of written correspondence, and to result only in an arrangement with a subordinate and distant portion of the Government, upon which it would be unsafe to attempt to raise capital in this country.

That your memorialists submit that, as those terms which the Secretary of State for India in Council has, after full consideration, suggested as fit and proper to form the basis of an arrangement with the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, have been accepted as such by that company, and as they are willing to procure the necessary funds thereon, it is neither desirable nor necessary that such arrangement should be further delayed, much less that the whole matter should be re-opened and re-discussed between that company in England and the Government at Calcutta in the mode proposed, the more especially as the only item of such terms in respect of which it can be considered essential that local knowledge should be brought to bear for its proper settlement, will even then be left for the decision of the Legislative Council at Calcutta. And your memorialists are informed that the fullest information, regarding the views of the whole of the local authorities in India, upon the general question of entrusting to private companies works of irrigation, is now in the possession of her Majesty's Government.

That your memorialists are firmly persuaded that it is not only for the good of India, but also to the direct pecuniary interest of Government that the works now under consideration should be forthwith carried out by private enterprise, and that it is wholly impossible for the former to undertake their construction without prejudice to those other works, for the speedy execution of which they now stand pledged, and irrespective of numerous projects of great magnitude urgently required for the general government and advancement of the country.

Your memorialists therefore most respectfully pray,

That the Right Hon. her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council will forthwith conclude with the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company an arrangement for the construction by the latter of works of irrigation and water transit in the province of Orissa, and adjacent districts, based upon the terms which have been mutually considered proper for that purpose without referring the same to the Government of India at Calcutta, and,

That he will also afford to such company every encouragement and support necessary to enable them to carry out those important works with success.

And your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

Signed at a meeting of the Executive Committee held at the offices of the Cotton Supply Association, Manchester, on Tuesday, July 10, 1860.

JOHN CHEETHAM, President.

EDMUND ASHWORTH, Vice-President.

G. R. HAYWOOD, Secretary.

CEYLON RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that they are prepared to recommend to the shareholders to consent to annul the contract, on being paid off at par, with an alternative proposition that the guarantee should be changed into a uniform 6 per cent. on the entire capital. It was not obligatory on the colony to accept either of the propositions made by the directors. The Ceylon Government might determine to abide by the contract as it stood, and it was equally in the power of the shareholders to come to a similar decision. The company's capital would then remain a six per cent. stock to the extent of £800,000, with a liability to raise £1,072,000 more, either on shares or debentures, at 5 per cent. The directors were of opinion that the company's stock afforded a better investment than any Indian railway stock. Besides their interest in the surplus profits of the railway, the proprietors had the guarantee of a very flourishing colony, free from debt, whose revenue had risen in five years from £108,000 to £747,000, and appeared to be yearly on the increase. Mr. Hawkshaw's report adopted and confirmed the conclusion of a committee of the colonial legislature, that the railway would yield a surplus profit beyond payment of the guaranteed interest on the total outlay; and if railway communication should augment the traffic in Ceylon as it had done elsewhere, the surplus might be considerable. Half the surplus profit was pledged to the repayment, without interest, of the Government advances, but the other half from the first was applicable to dividend, subject only to a power given by the contract to Government to modify the fares and tolls, so as to limit the dividend to 8 per cent. Although the proprietors held a complete security for the interest at 5 per cent. on whatever capital it might be necessary to raise beyond the £800,000 subscribed, the directors believed that a general impression prevailed among the shareholders, that so large an additional sum as a million could not be raised at that rate; and it was because they participated to some extent in this opinion that they proposed a relinquishment of what they considered intrinsically a valuable contract.

Mr. Hawkshaw, in his report to the Secretary of State for the Colonies respecting the plans, sections, and estimates of the Ceylon Railway, stated that the only tenders that had been received were from Messrs. Thomas Brassey and Co., and from Messrs. Waring, Brothers. They had been based upon the specification made by Mr. Gregory, the company's consulting engineer, and corrected and approved by him (Mr. Hawkshaw). The tender of Messrs. Brassey for the first section, from Colombo to Gordon's-bridge, about 60 miles, was £777,937; the second section, from Gordon's-bridge to Kandy, about 19½ miles, £663,273; and the expenses of estimating and examining the country £1,443,010, together with maintenance for one year after opening, £150 per mile per annum. Messrs. Waring, Brothers', tender amounted for the first section to £1,161,562, and for the second section to £548,987; total, £1,710,549, and maintenance for one year after opening, £250 per mile per annum. The expenditure of the company past and future, independently of the sum in the contractors' tender, would be £160,000, and Messrs. Brassey and Co.'s reduced tender, £1,400,000, would make the total cost of the line, exclusive of one year's maintenance, £1,860,000, or £23,250 per mile. Apportioning the total cost to the two sections of the line, the first section of sixty miles would, with Messrs. Brassey's tender, cost £1,154,154, or £19,235 per mile; and the second section to Kandy, of twenty miles, would cost £705,845, or £35,292 per mile. Mr. Doyné's estimate for the whole line was £2,214,000, or £27,675 per mile. This was for an inferior line, as it contemplated stationary engines and inclined planes on its upper portion. The specifications on which the present tenders had been obtained contemplated a locomotive line, with gradients not worse than 1 in 100 in the lower country, and not worse than 1 in 50 in the upper country, with the exception of 2 miles of 1 in 40. Adding £12,000, as the maintenance of the line for one year after opening, to the tender of Messrs. Brassey and Co., the cost of the better line contemplated by Mr. Hawkshaw would be £1,872,000, or £342,000 less than the estimate for the inferior line. He states that, considering the character of the works generally, that labour in Ceylon must be imported, and that a portion of the line passes through a sickly district, it was not to be expected that a less costly line could be made in Ceylon.

In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

Newly-invented and Patented Application of Chemically Prepared
INDIA RUBBER
IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.
MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON DENTIST, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE, is the sole Inventor of the above new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared India-rubber, in lieu of the ordinary gold or bone frame.
9, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.
From the "Court Journal."

EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION IN DENTAL SURGERY.—To Mr. Ephraim Mosely, of 9, Grosvenor-street, London, may be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoveries of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive as to fix securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spiral springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the ne plus ultra of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified India-rubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect manner, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from becoming painful on the absorption of the gum, and enabling the patient to use any force in masticating or striking the teeth together, without the percussion or rattling that attends the action in general cases.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unalloyed, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.
"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
"W. J. NEWMAN,
"Surgeon Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."
Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS PURE AND MIXED,

APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STA-
TICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS
with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry,
Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by
the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr.
YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess
a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact; but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions, written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE venerable adage which informs us that haste is not synonymous with speed has received a fresh illustration in the case of the Calcutta Mail of the 19th of June, which was telegraphed as having arrived at Aden three days before it was due. Notwithstanding, however, this auspicious start, it has reached London only this day, in company with the Bombay Mail of the 7th of July. The news thus tardily received is so little interesting that the delay will not prove of any public importance, however seriously it may have affected private individuals.

The absence, through ill-health, of so many members of the Legislative Council, had prevented the passing of the Income-tax Bill, but on the 28th of June all the principal clauses were agreed to, and scarcely anything remained to be done except to arrange some questions of detail as to the best mode of collecting the tax. The only point, indeed, which led to any difference of opinion related to the imposition of one per cent. for the purpose of public works. Mr. Sconce was opposed to the additional charge on the wealth of the country, at a time when so much distress was prevalent, and at the same time expressed his belief that the deficit would prove to be greater than Mr. Wilson anticipated by at least one million sterling. The Government party, however, successfully argued that it was only by developing the resources of the country that it could ever be possible to extinguish the tax entirely.

On another subject there appears to have arisen an unusually animated discussion. The Arms Act, as originally proposed, rendered liable to a fine of 100 rupees any man who carried arms without a license. To this it was objected by the two learned members of the Council, Sir Barnes Peacock and Sir Mordaunt Wells, that it was an insult to Europeans to require them to take out a license to carry arms, which were, in fact, indispensable in the present state of the country. On the other hand, Mr. Wilson and Sir Bartle Frere contended that all class legislation was impolitic, and that the laws must be equally applicable to all ranks and races—the latter even going so far as to assert that it was in the case of Europeans that the Act was most necessary, by reason of their violence, and ill-treatment of the natives. Finally, it was agreed that any person carrying arms without a license might be detained and examined by any magistrate or police officer, should there be any reason to suspect his motives. But after this amendment was adopted it was suddenly discovered that it reduced the Bill to a nullity, for if only those who were dangerous characters were required to take out a license the great mass of the people would have no occasion to apply for one. The new clause was therefore cancelled, and the Bill virtually abandoned.

Sir James Outram had returned to Calcutta, but so little improved in health that it was expected he would be compelled to proceed immediately to Europe. The fate of his colleague, Mr. Le Geyt, the Bombay member of Council, will probably act as a warning to the gallant general not to put off his departure too long, for that gentleman died at sea on his way to Galle.

Sir Charles Trevelyan left Madras on the 24th of June, after receiving farewell addresses from all classes of the community. Mr. Morehead, senior member of Council, was to act as head of the Government until the arrival of Sir Henry Ward from Ceylon.

Lord Elgin and Baron Gros were at Singapore on the 13th of June. The news from China is only so far interesting that it presents the Allies in the anomalous position of supporters of that Imperial Government against which they have commenced hostile demonstrations. The city of Shanghai being threatened by the insurgents, troops had been landed from the English and French ships for the protection of the place.

We have been requested to state that military pay will be issued on Monday, August 13th, and following days, at the India Office.

BENGAL.

HORACE HAYMAN WILSON.

The first of Oriental scholars cannot be allowed to pass away without a brief tribute to his genius in the land where he laid the foundation of a brilliant scholarship which couples his name with that of Sir William Jones. At the age of 75, he died in London on the 8th of May, after an operation for calculus. Max Muller, who will probably succeed to the place he has left vacant at the head of Orientalists and philologists and to the Boden Professorship of Sanscrit, which he has so worthily held since its institution, was with the dying scholar almost to the last. Till the near approach of death his eye was not dimmed nor his intellectual strength abated. His was the satisfaction of knowing that he had accomplished the last great work of his life, the translation of the Rig Veda. He left it ready for the press, with the notes only wanting. He had feared being anticipated by death if he delayed until Muller's printed text appeared, and finished his translation from the MSS. The next number of the Edinburgh Review will probably contain a paper which he contributed on Vedic Literature. To it will attach a melancholy interest. The great scholars who have sat at his feet, and the students whom he trained to love while they revered him in Oxford, do not regret his departure more than the old Pundits of Calcutta, who retain the most vivid impression of his gigantic attainments in their special lore.

To the Medical service belongs the honour of having introduced Wilson to India and to Oriental pursuits. Like Leyden and Sprenger and others who might be mentioned, the liberality of the Indian Government put him in a position congenial to his tastes. For twenty-three years he was Secretary to the Bengal Asiatic Society, and with him and James Prinsep its old glories passed away. When he left India in 1832 to fill the new chair of Sanscrit in Oxford, just founded by Colonel Boden, Dr. Mill and Sir Edward Ryan, on the part of the Society, presented him with an address which records in the language of deserved eulogy his great merits as a scholar and his inestimable services to the cause of Oriental literature. Their language is now that of all who mourn his death;—"none after Sir William Jones, if even he is to be excepted, have stronger claims on our grateful recollection." It was then that they requested him to allow his bust to be taken by the most eminent sculptor in England. That bust adorns the Society's hall. It is now invested with a sacred interest. It is not our desire at present to record the services or to give a list of the works of Wilson. The latter would fill one of our pages. But from his first publication in 1809, a translation of Calidasa's Cloud Messenger; his Sanscrit Dictionary, of which the first edition appeared in 1819; his "Hindu Drama," which has reached a second edition; and his Sanscrit Grammar, which appeared in 1841, to the greatest of the benefits he has conferred on English literature—a complete translation of the Rig Veda, the oldest uninspired book on earth, Horace Hayman Wilson's career has been without a parallel in the history of Oriental philology. To him and to Sir William Jones, followed by Colebrooke at a distance, does Europe owe all the materials it possesses for the study of the Hindoos. In green old age, with his work accomplished and his renown at its height, amid the regrets of the learned of Europe, and the reverence of the Pundits of Bengal, the Prince of Orientalists has resigned his sceptre to another.—Friend of India.

ACADEMIC BARBARISM.

All our efforts to save the universities of India from the contempt which they court have thus far proved in vain. They are not yet so popular with thinking men, nor have Europeans, as a whole, yet taken such an interest in the education of the natives as to accord to them that support which as the infant abodes of learning and the future nurseries of men they deserve. In India Europeans are too busy to ask if there is any necessity for universities, or, satisfied with a superficial inquiry, they come to the conclusion that they are not wanted because Bombay has nothing better than a dame's school. In India we live too much in the present, and are too liable since 1857 to dwell on the uncertainty of the tenure of our power to legislate for a future which we hold by so slight a tie. Paris and Padua, Oxford and Cambridge, once taught the trivium and quadrivium to savage Franks and shoeless Celts. Men did not despair of them, and it is because we, with our eye on a future that must come, would not despair of our Indian universities, that we ask the Legislative Council to save them from the immolation they are so anxious to prepare for themselves.

The Government of Bengal wants respectable pleaders for its courts, but without the trouble of examining candidates. The Calcutta University is prepared to send out bachelors of laws, who are also bachelors of arts, to raise the native bar in intelligence, honesty, and gentlemanliness. It has already sent out some, of whom the Advocate-general said he would welcome them to the Supreme Court. But, the Sudder says, we want men of an inferior stamp who have not been forced to prove their literary and legal attainments by gaining such honours as B.A. and B.L., men who shall be cleverer rogues, but as ignorant barbarians as the mook-tars who now infest our courts. We are not content to take them as we have hitherto done with a recommendation from their college, we want them to plead before us in all the plenitude of the unknown honour of licentiate of laws. We know that such a degree was never heard of, except as the title of an Italian law professor in the middle ages, but we ask the University to confer it on schoolboys whose education has just been sufficient to sharpen their corrupt acuteness. Men like the Advocate-general are deluded by this; scholars such as those who constitute the faculty of arts yield because it is a purely professional question, and Sir Bartle Frere, with the blandest suppression of the facts, introduces a Bill into Council to force the Indian Universities to grant this and similar barbarous degrees. "The number of degrees they are now permitted to confer is limited." Was Sir Bartle ever at a British University? No more limited, with the exception of divinity and science, than those of London, Edinburgh, Dublin, or Oxford. "To confer such degrees would be an undoubted good, and so to give an assistance which they only can afford to education in the state in which it is now in the presidency towns." Are universities to lower themselves to Indian schools, or Indian schools to be gradually raised to the level of universities? "He needed not now to argue the reasonableness of the proposition now made." We trust he will when the Bill is read a second time. He has once before done evil, in the case of the Shrines Bill, by fancying he needed not to argue.

The Government want a guarantee for the very small modicum of legal knowledge requisite to empower pleaders to practice in their lower courts. By all means let the universities examine candidates and grant a certificate of having passed. This will satisfy the Government, and it will not flatter the vanity of half-educated, half-honest, attorneys' clerks. But true to their own functions, proud of their own dignity, jealous of their own honour, ambitious of their own success, let them refuse to grant degrees unknown to literature, for professional attainments on a par with those of the quack. We beseech the Legislative Council to save the universities of India from the fruit of their own folly. We invite Sir Bartle Frere to argue. We assure him there is need for it.—Friend of India.

THE SUPREME COURTS—DO THEY NEED REFORM?

Sir Charles Wood's Bill for the Amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts will revive a subject that was much discussed rather more than three years ago. Since the beginning of 1857 nothing has been said of that change in the constitution of the Indian Courts of Law which proved part of the general design of the codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure, framed by the Indian Law Commissioners. In January of that year, the present Chief Justice, when introducing his Bills for the codes, said, so much of the changes proposed in the report of the Commissioners as related to the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, could not be carried out. Either on account of the effect of certain Acts of Parliament which were thought by some to place the Supreme Court beyond the reach of the Legislative Council, or with reference to the views of the Court of Directors, he declined to introduce what was the first and most important object contemplated by the Commissioners. The question of amalgamation, moreover, was looked on as so identified with the subjection of Europeans to heathen Courts that 1857 was not a time to press it. Nor, we believe is there any fear, if the Europeans are only true to themselves, that the Black Act in any shape will ever be revived. We trust to see the political difficulty of the spread of uneducated Europeans over the Mofussil met by Circuit Courts as in England.

But there can be no doubt as to the expediency of amalgamating the courts, if that amalgamation is properly carried out. On general principles there must be an advantage in a uniform administration of the law, and in the present state of things, with two courts of law in each presidency, there is a waste of power and resources. It must not be forgotten that the greater part of the business of the Supreme Courts is between native and native, not between Europeans, or European and native. And it is with reference to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts over the native inhabitants of the presidency towns that an unanswerable argument in favour of the amalgamation is raised. As far as the interests of the natives are concerned, impediments to justice constantly arise from the want of local jurisdiction within Calcutta, Madras and Bombay in those Courts to which the country at large is subject; and on the other hand, the limited nature of the authority exercised by the Supreme Courts occasions much difficulty. If it were desired that points to illustrate "the Conflict of Laws" should be discovered as frequently as possible, the present state of things ought by all means to be maintained, but that is hardly the object of legislation; and however interesting to the lawyer it may be, it is not conducive to the ends of justice that the Supreme Court should be able to entertain a suit against a person who sleeps a night or two in Calcutta, and should have power to appoint a receiver over his land in the 24-Pergunnahs, without having the power to grant an injunction to restrain other persons, or the local courts from interfering with the same property. It has not been altogether seemly that the same Court should have extended its jurisdiction, as it has done, by constructions put upon plain words, very much against their ordinary meaning; that one set of judges should give effect to contracts made by an inhabitant of India with a British subject, to the effect that the inhabitant of India will be amenable, in a particular matter, to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, although the British subject may have no interest in the matter with reference to which the contract is made; and that another set of judges, not so desirous to extend their jurisdiction as the others, should do exactly the reverse. There must, at the same time, be a mistake somewhere, when we find it to be the case that although the Supreme Court administers the law of the defendant in causes in which Hindoos and Mahomedans are parties, in reference to "contract, marriage, and inheritance," yet, in many cases, the contending parties are dealt with in a manner very different from that in which they would be treated in the Zillah courts, and in the Sudder. The latter courts would be guided in many cases by principles wholly different from those which would direct the Supreme Courts, although the facts might be the same; so that the rights of her Majesty's Hindoo subjects may be varied in a great degree by their living on the one side or the other of the Circular Road, or Tolly's Nullah.

Setting aside the question as to the criminal jurisdiction over Europeans, it is not easy to know what is the real opinion of the public as to the Supreme Court. It is not sufficient to recognise in that Court the just administration of the criminal law at Sessions. Some persons do no more than that, and fall into a mistake something analogous to that of Mr. Weller, who thought that the Old Bailey was the most important court of judicature in England. The Court must be considered with reference to all its branches of jurisdiction, and especially in regard to its administration of the law between native and native. Many persons exalt it as the very shield of their rights, and it may be admitted that, in their origin, the courts established by Royal Charter were intended to check abuses likely to arise under the government of the Trading Company. But for that purpose they are no longer required, even if they ever answered it, for if such abuses existed under the present administration, a local court of law would not be their proper remedy. Those, too, who have been loudest in praising these courts have ever been those most interested in their preservation. The unqualified approval of the Supreme Court which the barristers and attorneys have given it is very much like the opinion of the silversmiths of Ephesus on the merits of Diana of the Ephesians.

It cannot be denied that the present procedure of the Supreme Court is ill-adapted to this country. The distinctions between the Common Law Courts, Equity Courts, Admiralty Courts, and Ecclesiastical Courts,—the last now too antiquated for the conservative home in which they were bred, are most unsuited to India. If any instance were wanting, if proofs were not daily occurring, of the abuses arising from the clinging to old forms, we might take a lesson from the forgery of Sibkissen Bannerjee. In that case the parties who succeeded in getting the will set aside were nearly four years in accomplishing their work. Probate had been granted on that most worthless kind of evidence, an affidavit, and to obtain the recall of that probate by means of caveats, libels, responsive allegations, and all the paraphernalia of the ecclesiastical procedure, was a task of no little difficulty. In that court where some of the most important questions that arise about property are decided—the validity of wills, and the right to administration—the old Doctors' Commons' forms of procedure are adhered to. They have borne the change of climate pretty well, and yield fees bearing a fair proportion to those which enriched the Proctors; and as they have been abolished in England, perhaps there is all the more reason for preserving these interesting relics in India. The machinery of English law, which all know to be rather the growth of historical events than a scientific system, has continued unreformed in the Supreme Court, and the obstructions which in England have been swept away by the Common Law Procedure Acts still beset the approaches to justice in India. If we except the reform in the law of evidence in 1855, and a few changes in the system of pleading introduced by Sir Lawrence Peel, no change of late has been introduced. Fictions are now unknown in the Courts at Westminster, but John Doe and Richard Roe still drag on their mysterious and expensive lives in the Supreme Courts. The courts as Courts of Equity will still do the very opposite of that which they would be forced to do as Courts of Law. In the latter character they will nonsuit a plaintiff when his case is such that if appealed to as Courts of Equity they would accede immediately to his request, perhaps even taking care of his property longer than he might consider necessary. In fact, the rules and practice of the Supreme Courts on all their sides contrast most unfavourably with the simple and scientific procedure under Act VIII. of 1859,—the Civil Procedure Code, and some kind of reform is at once required.—Friend of India.

THE WORLD'S HIGHWAY.

Twenty years ago the fertile genius of Rowland Macdonald Stephenson conceived the gigantic project of connecting the farthest extremities of Asia with those of Europe by a colossal railway. As he watched the progress of steam communication with the East, as he traced the success of the monster of wealthy monopolies, the P. and O. Company, as he saw the iron path creeping up the valley of the Ganges, extending North-east and South-east from Bombay, and stretching South-west from Madras, his scheme assumed more definite proportions. Confining his intentions for the time to the great break between the farthest terminus of the Indian railways in Scinde and the outpost of the European lines at Belgrade, in 1850 he made definite proposals to the Governments of Europe for the construction of a great national highway from Scinde through Beloochistan, Persia, and Anatolia to Constantinople, or, if necessary, to Belgrade. In the first instance, the eastern terminus was to be Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf. A traveller might thus journey by rail from Calcutta to Aberdeen, changing carriages only twice, at the Dardanelles and the Straits of Dover. The whole was to be under the protectorate of the European Powers. These Powers, with the exception of Russia, promised their cordial co-operation, and the Governor-general, who gave India both railways and telegraphs, expressed his readiness to afford all proper assistance. There seemed to be a prospect of the citizen of Calcutta reaching London in nine days. The fever-stricken official in Scinde already anticipated the time when a week would place him amid the health-giving breezes of an English summer. But the Indian rebellion, followed by a general excitement among the Mahomedan population of Asia, and afterwards by political troubles in Europe, has, with other causes, suspended the great project for girdling the eastern hemisphere with an iron way. The scheme is not abandoned. That railways were at all possible, seemed less likely half a century ago than that a quarter of a century hence the Viceroy of India will journey from London to Calcutta by a special train in six days.

If, meanwhile, a literal highway for the nations of the East and West must be postponed, why should not a highway of intelligence be constructed? If Puck is not yet strong enough to put a girdle of iron round the earth, why should he not erect a girdle of electric wire? If capitalists shrink from a railway, 1,300 miles in extent, through the lands of fanatic Moslem and treacherous Beloochees, there is nothing to terrify them in the cost and the risk of telegraphic posts and wires. Accordingly, a line of telegraph from Constantinople to Bussorah has engaged the attention of scientific men and speculators for some time back. With the guarantee as to protection of the Porte and the Shah, the line would be more secure in the valley of the Euphrates than in that of the Ganges. By laying down a marine cable for the short distances between Bussorah and Bushire, where our Resident is stationed, thence to Bahrein, the great pearl island, thence by the promontory of Ras El-Jebel to Muscat, and thence to join the Aden and Kurrachee cable, India would have an overland line in which the uncertainties of marine telegraphy are reduced to a minimum. A slight payment of black mail to the tribes of Beloochistan would allow of a second line by land alone, connecting the merchants of Bombay and Kurrachee with their numerous correspondents at Bushire and Bussorah. That either one or both of these lines is absolutely necessary is evident from the comparative uselessness of the Red Sea Telegraph hitherto. Experience has thus far proved that no electric line can be trusted which passes for any distance through water. Where distances are short, as from Malta to the various ports of Europe, the uncertainty is not so great, but even then it is annoying. The science of marine telegraphy is yet in its infancy. The plan proposed would give three lines to Europe. 1. By the Red Sea, as at present. 2. From the frontier post of Scinde through Beloochistan to Bushire, Bussorah and Constantinople entirely by land except at the Dardanelles. 3. From Kurrachee by the present cable to Ras-El-Had, the south east promontory of Arabia, thence by Muscat, Ras-El-Jebel, Bahrein, and Bushire to Bussorah and Constantinople. With three lines, we might certainly depend on one being always open.

While English speculators refuse to move without an official guarantee, a French company has offered to the Porte and to the Shah to lay down a line to Bussorah, and to connect with it Teheran and the leading towns of Persia. Whether it be a dispute among the Lebanon tribes, a Suez canal, a rebellion in Abyssinia, a rising in Zanzibar, or a telegraph through Persia, France has her eyes open in the East. She is less active and more vain-glorious only than Russia. Like the Anglo-Saxon, Russia works without talking. Like the Irishman, France talks without working energetically. Sir Henry Rawlinson, our Persian Ambassador, consulted by the Shah, has referred the matter to the authorities in England. If one post is put in the ground by the new company French influence will become as paramount in Persia as it is in Egypt. Treaty or not, there is a singular accord at present between Russia and France. They would spoil the East and divide it between them. It is not likely that the English Government will offer a more effectual opposition to a French telegraph in Persia than to a French Council in Egypt. But whatever may be the political result, the commercial advantage is evident. A telegraph whose terminus will be at the head of the Persian Gulf will soon be made from Constantinople. It must be connected with the Indian lines.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GORRUCKPORE.—The intelligence which we (Englishman) published some time ago of a band of rebels approaching the frontier of Goruckpore from the Terai Jungle, and marching apparently to the eastward, having drawn the attention of Government to the subject, inquiries were instituted, and the officer commanding at Goruckpore reported to the following effect:—A native spy sent out to the place where the rebels were said to be, on his return stated that a band of some 600 or 700 men, armed with muskets, mostly bearing the Government marks, were in the jungle to the eastward at Sooryia Soota, on the banks of the Sootan Nulla, east of the Ban Gunga. They said they were king's troops, and were under the command of Zorawur Lohar; they had no accoutrements and could not have had much ammunition. There were some Sowars armed with swords and pistols. It was also said they had a European prisoner with them. The Governor-general, dissatisfied with this report, desired that further inquiries should be made regarding that band of men, and an European was sent out to reconnoitre. He reported that no band of men now were to be found in that part of the jungle, but the Koormee Zemindar stated that some twenty horsemen and some foot had come from the westward to make arrangements for the provisioning of 700 or 800 men, but they fled after remaining two or three days.

NORTHERN KRISHNAGHUR, June 7.—The indigo, and, indeed, paddy sowings, are all completed throughout the district, and preparations are being commenced for manufacturing, that is, i there is to be any, for cattle trespass is now the order of the day. This is a constant complaint, but the magistrate has thought light of it, and only given the owners of the cattle a month's confinement in jail and a trifling fine; the consequence is, the nuisance continues: had he given them three or four months in the first few cases, fear would have been instilled into the minds of the ryots, and our plant might have had a chance. As many as three or four cases of trespass have occurred in one village, and still herds of cattle are daily to be found grazing at large, or perhaps in charge of a "rakhal" three feet high.

UMRITSUR, June 18.—All the taxes that have been imposed in the Punjab—whether trade or licence—are to close on the 31st October, 1860. This is a pre-arranged matter. By the time these taxes close the Income-tax will come into full play—to try the patience of the public after this experiment. The people are supposed to become quite accustomed to the imposition. The Punjabees do not possess a clear idea of the magnitude of the tax which they are to suffer. The Punjab may follow in the wake of the other presidencies in a revolt, but will never take the lead. No other presidency, I think, has to deal with a more savage race of people than those who live in the hills to the N.W. of the Punjab. They are wild and impatient of rule. Physical force represses their immunity, only to break forth at the next occasion, be it ever so trivial. No moral force acts upon their moral consciousness. It is downright thrashing that gains a temporary submission. Their example is not likely to be followed by the people of the plains. Great reductions have been made in the assessments of the Punjab. Many have the sense to appreciate the boon. Agriculturists had been exempted from all taxation save what they paid in tributum. But where an agriculturist follows also a trade, he is taxable only for the amount he trades in. Hitherto the difficulties of paying the Government demands have daily yielded to these reductions. The Wilsonian folly, however, promises early to multiply them. The Income-tax, will, no doubt, be felt by the majority. The well-to-do will not much care about it. The fiat must be obeyed—and it will be obeyed. The merchant will add the loss to his prices, and while he gains the customers suffer doubly, namely, by the tax they have themselves to pay, and the enhanced rates fixed on goods. The measure is a very unpopular one.—Bombay Times.

JESSORE, June 2.—In the Jessore, Pubnah and Furreedpoor districts we have been getting heavy rain with north-westers almost every day since the 23rd ult., which has touched up the taller October plant, especially that from up-country seed on sandy soils, and the younger spring plant, the stems of which have not yet hardened; the seedy looking October, which was doubtful, has gained by these rains, and is beginning to look up. The manufacturing coolies, generally obtained through the Paikadanga sirdars from the South, are asking five rupees as an advance, and for their accounts to be settled at the same sum per mensem, this is rather salt against the two rupees advance, and their pay of former days, yet, notwithstanding what the German Jew may scurrilously say to the contrary, we would willingly yield with the times, and give what they ask, but we have no surety whatever, for their coming when required, or at all. Last year I advanced Rs. 2,900 for 675 men, and got only 410, including boys, although I believe I am thought well of by these coolies, who know every planter as a shoemaker knows his last, for I pay them from the day they leave their homes till the day they return to them, and feed them every Sunday (that that day may remain more strongly fixed than the others on their memories) with fish. By the non-appearance of the remaining men I could not work my full complement of vats, and, as a consequence, lost a very considerable portion of my crop from not being able to work it off before and after the gale in July last.

THE INDIGO DISTRICTS.—The following is from a correspondent (of the Englishman) on the Ganges, May 25:—Near Khoolnea the indigo is nil, the late Mr. Rainey's factories having shut up without the assistance of an Eden or a Herschell. On the Attaro Banka, Rashmonee Dossee's plant looked well, and on the western bank of the Muddamutty this said lady's and the Paikadanga concern's indigo was good, but that on the right or eastern bank of Nakanda was poor comparatively. Further up, and till we anchored in the Burrasya, the plant improved as we went along. In the evening we experienced a shower of rain, which was evidently the end of a storm which had raged to the northward. On the following day our eyes were feasted with the fine plant of the Meerunge, Muddanderry, Babookalee, and Ramnaghur concerns, which lie on either bank of the Burrasya. At Doirampoora a jolly looking and sleek native pilot came on board, and reported the rivers to have risen 30 inches, in which he was most likely correct, as the current was strong and the water muddy. We then proceeded up the Goral, where the plant belonging to the Baleacandy, Neschindepoo, Sericole, and Hazlabut concerns is also very fine, thick, and fresh, but not so tall as that we had left behind us. When passing Roxacandy we met a severe north-wester, with an abundance of rain, which must have made the planter's "heart to leap." The Lucknow with her flat steamed for two hours through it most gallantly, and anchored off the Coal Ghat at Commercially at dusk. Here we learnt that the Dobracole concern had commenced its manufactures, and that Syllada was to open vats on the following day, and also that many concerns in the Pubnah district, together with those of the Watsons on the Ganges, would be at work by the 3rd or 4th proximo, which is much earlier than usual. Amongst other "gup" we heard that letters were going from village to village stating that "the great temple is to be destroyed," meaning Juggernauth, I suppose, which has been started by the bigoted Musulmans, no doubt to excite the Hindoos, without whom they know they cannot succeed in a general and effective rise. Should this be true, the Lieutenant-governor will find more to do than to put a Sconce as an extinguisher upon the planters; yet I, who was once a planter, must say I think that if nearly or quite double the amount were paid for a bundle of good plant of fair measurement than what is now paid to the ryots, i.e. three instead of six bundles the rupee, only a preventive law would be temporarily required to keep the ryots unexcited, which they evidently now are not, and the planters, whether Europeans or natives, from walking into each other's premises—when all would settle down of itself. Nevertheless, a thorough reform in the police, as also in the laws of the country, is necessary to help the planters to keep down their expenses, for out of the five rupees a beegah generally allowed per estimates for outlay, eight to twelve annas go in law, which term includes the cost of a lattu or expedition-money to the judge's omrah—bribery, the vulgar call it.

AGRA, June 20.—A scorching wind, accompanied with the most stifling dust storms we have experienced this season, has been unrelentingly raging for several days, and is now at its height. The heat is intense, and the mortality amongst the troops consequently considerable. Within six days the troops of Royal Artillery stationed here have buried that number of men, and the Rifle Brigade four. It is probable that had a medical officer been on duty with the detachment at the fort the life of a valuable non-commissioned officer who perished from apoplexy on Monday might have been spared. He formed one of the relief who were marched to the fort, in arms and accoutrements, and soon after arrival, whilst taking over the duties from the sergeant going off, he complained of illness, and showed every symptom of approaching apoplexy. The apothecary in medical charge of the fort was sent for immediately, who, after administering two pills, ordered him to be taken back to head-quarters in a dhoolie! As might have been expected, the exposure to the hot wind and the long trip in the dhoolie proved fatal. This episode brings to mind a story current amongst soldiers. During an epidemic, the hospital orderlies, who used to indulge freely in spirits to guard against contagion, went round the wards before turning in for the night, to examine the patients, and, finding one apparently dead, were carrying him down to the "dead house," when the supposed corpse found strength to cry out, "I am not dead." "Oh! never mind, old fellow," was the consoling reply, "you'll be dead enough by the time you get there." A similar reflection might have occurred to the apothecary, when he ordered a man in the throes of apoplexy to be carried a mile and a half in a dhoolie.—Delhi Gazette.

CENTRAL INDIA.—The agent to the Governor-general in Central India has recommended that out of the sum of Rs. 3,32,000 collected from the independent Princes of Rajpootana for the preservation of the peace in Malwa, Rs. 1,000 a month be devoted to putting down the plunderers and marauders who have become troublesome since the rebellion. The Governor-general has approved the proposition for one year, after which it will be subject to revision.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE INCOME-TAX BILL.—TO THE HON. THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—We, the undersigned, the members of the select committee appointed to consider the Bill "for imposing Duties on Profits arising from Property, Professions, Trades, and Offices," have the honour to report that we have made extensive alterations in the Bill as it was read a second time. Our object has been to simplify its provisions as much as possible, and to adopt the machinery for the assessment and collection of the tax, to the revenue executive system now existing, and to the peculiar circumstances of this country. Power has been given to the Governor-general in Council to postpone the operation of the Bill in such parts of India as he may think proper. This is particularly necessary in the Punjab and Oude, where certain other duties, for which the Income-tax under this Bill will be the substitute, must, under existing arrangements of the Government, remain in force for a year from the date of their imposition. We have been assisted by communications from the Government of the Punjab and from the Madras Board of Revenue, and the demi-official communications received from the Lieutenant-governor of the North-western Provinces, and from Mr. Muir. The petitions presented against the Bill have also received our attention.—(Signed) James Wilson, H. B. Harington, H. Forbes, A. Sconce.

GOVERNMENT DOCK AT KIDDERPORE.—The Hurkaru understands that in consequence of the heavy expenses recently incurred in repairing several Government vessels in private docks, the Government of India has in contemplation the excavation of a large dock in the vicinity of the old one at Kidderpore, so as to accommodate a vessel of 2,000 tons. The Government intends to purchase shortly the blocks of ground belonging to private individuals contiguous to the old dockyard for the purpose.

A NICE QUESTION.—From the Punjab we hear that the Ranees of Syree wishes to give her estate to Captain Pengree, of the Invalid establishment; the authorities have raised the question whether she has the power of doing so.

THE BAIZA-BAAE, formerly of Gwalior, has a large sum of money invested in Government securities, the interest of which has not been paid since the rebellion. The Governor-general has now authorised its payment.

PRINCE FEROZE SHAH.—It is stated by the Madras Times and Spectator that Feroze Shah, one of the Delhi Shahzadahs, and the colleague of Tantia Toppe during his declining fortunes, has managed to elude all his pursuers and to reach a haven of temporary safety. He arrived at Candahar in March last, and after a short sojourn there, proceeded on to Persia, whence it is probable he will go to Mecca.

MR. MCGOWAN, the postmaster of Lahore, has been selected by the Director-general of the postal department to succeed Mr. Garrett, the postmaster of Calcutta, who is to proceed to Bombay.

VICEREGAL MUNIFICENCE.—The Governor-general has given a handsome barouche and harness to Raja Mun Sing, of Oude, as a special mark of favour.

GOOD NEWS FOR CIVILIANS.—The Governor-general has decided that officers in civil employment, who were compelled to leave their stations on the breaking out of the mutiny, are to receive their salaries in full, without deduction, from the time they were driven away.

DACCA.—Letters from Dacca say that manufacturing is going on, but the produce is very bad, averaging between 6 and 10 seers a vat. It ought to be double this. In some places the heat and drought is complained of. In others the plant looks well, and is growing since the showers they have lately had. The rivers still keep so low that at some factories there is difficulty in getting water to manufacture with.

THE INDIGO COMMISSION.—A meeting of the Indigo Planters' Association was held on the 14th June, at which it was resolved to request the Commission to publish contradictions of the false evidence given by ryots and others, in order to prevent false impressions getting abroad, and to address all the London newspapers, begging them to suspend their opinion on the evidence till such contradictions are published. It was also resolved to memorialise the Supreme Government against the conduct of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal ever since the passing of Act XI. of 1860.

"WHITE TRASH."—The North-West Gazette relates an instance of the indifference of the Government to the wants and comforts of the families of our European soldiers. Three European women, belonging to H.M.'s 48th Regiment, proceeded to join their husbands, who were out on detachment duty at Humeerpore. With the usual consideration of the Government, they were accommodated with an ekka, without any side purdahs, exposed to the effects of the sun, and receiving considerable joltings on execrable roads. The consequence was, that on their arrival at Humeerpore, one died, and the two others are so dangerously ill that little hopes are entertained of their recovery. Could not Government have provided these women with a more comfortable conveyance, and so arranged it that they should travel by night instead of day?

GWALIOR, 20th June.—The hand of justice, though somewhat tardy, has at length descended upon the heads of four men, who stained their hands with the blood of their officers on the 14th June, 1857. The troops of the garrison were paraded this morning to witness their execution. The batteries of the Royal and Bengal Artillery, under the command of Lieutenant Lowry, and Captain DeTessier respectively, together with her Majesty's 71st Highland Light Infantry, under the command of Colonel Rich, took up their position on the right of the line. The 23rd Punjab Infantry, under Captain Bloomfield, and 1st Gwalior Infantry, under Major McPherson, V.C., were on the left. The Mahratta Horse and Camel Corps (dismounted) occupied the sides of the square. The prisoners, under a strong guard of her Majesty's 71st Highland Light Infantry, were marched round, heavily chained. The careless indifference which they exhibited on this occasion would lead one naturally to suppose that they were going to a wedding instead of their long home. One ruffian, in particular, whose head gear was yellow pugree, addressed the crowd, calling himself a martyr to his religion. The crimes brought home against them were the cold blooded butcheries of Major Sherrieff, Captain A. Hawkins, Dr. Kirk, and a pay havildar of the late Gwalior Contingent.—Delhi Gazette.

SHIPWRECK AT THE SANDHEADS.—The British ship Jeremiah Garnett, Captain Storks, of 408 tons, bound to Mauritius, was lost in the vicinity of the Sandheads as she was proceeding out to sea. She cleared out on the 26th ultimo with a cargo consisting of 5,599 bags rice, 850 bags gram, 100 bags dholl, 1,293 bags oats, and cases hogs' lard. She was consigned to Messrs. Begg, Dunlop and Co., and chartered for Mauritius, if we mistake not, by Hajee Saffur Moosah of Amratollah. All hands saved.

CAWNPORE.—The subscriptions to the Cawnpore Memorial Church amount now to Rs. 40,049.

TEA PLANTATIONS.—The Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces has fixed the upset price on some of the Government tea plantations. The plantation of Pooree, in East Gurhwal, consisting of 185 acres, 114 of which are planted with tea, is valued at one lac of rupees. Bhurtpoor, in Kumaon, consisting of 31 acres of land planted, and three hundred acres of waste land, at Rs. 20,000. The plantations and factories at Kangra are valued at three lacs of rupees.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, June 18).—During the last few days a better feeling prevailed in our market, with a steady demand, and in many instances higher prices have been obtained. In Piece Goods the transactions have been moderate; the buyers showed a good inclination, but the prices established being still much under the actual cost did not encourage sellers to progress freely in their sales. The accounts from almost all the up-country markets have been rather unsatisfactory, and consequently the further advance of prices is somewhat checked. However, it is expected that the position of the market will be soon ameliorated. Furns.—In the beginning of the fortnight the transactions have been large, at rather lower rates. The transactions for a few days were very good, but lately the brisk demand has subsided a little, and therefore buyers are now rather more cautious in their purchases. Metals have improved a little in demand and in prices. We quote sheathing copper at 112 to 45 per md.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, June 18).—There has been no animation in any branch of export trade, and business continues to be done only in fulfilment of open orders from home. In Rau Silk there have been slight symptoms of revival, but prices still keep up, and are above home rates. In Silk Piece Goods there has been but a small demand from one or two buyers. In Nagar a small business in progress. Saltpetre in better demand, at advanced prices.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR F. VARDON.—We (Bangalore Herald) very much regret having to announce to our readers the death at Mercara, from dysentery, of an excellent and most deservedly popular officer, Major Frank Vardon, of the 25th Regt. N. I.—a man devoutly religious, an accomplished and highly gifted scholar, a zealous, able soldier, and an indefatigable sportsman. Never was an officer more universally esteemed. His sporting adventures and experiences in the hey-day of youth were given to the public in the (now defunct or moribund) "Sporting Review," under the well-known nom de guerre of Verderer—and his more recent contributions to a daily contemporary were a fund of amusement to his readers, and, we believe, attracted the attention of the authorities to the nuisances and abuses which formed so frequently the subjects of his lively sallies. Who can forget "Shirkapettah?" who can forget Frank Vardon? He was the friend and companion of the celebrated African explorer Dr. Livingstone, had travelled much, and endeared himself to all who had the pleasure of his society.

SIR GEORGE WHITLOCK has been offered and has accepted the command of the Northern Division, in succession to General Tulloch, who vacates in a few months.

TRICHINOPOLY.—The Madras Times says the old fortifications of Trichinopoly are to be converted into a circular road. The Rock of Trichinopoly has often been compared to Edinburgh Castle, just as Chunar Fort is thought to be like Stirling Castle in its position. The demolition of the works was ordered in 1845, and has been partly carried out. The walls consisted of solid masonry, double in some parts, of great thickness, and from 20 to 30 feet in height. They have a circuit of more than two miles. The fort was taken by the Mahrattas in 1741, and from them by the Nizam two years after. Clive assisted in its defence against the French in 1751, and forced M. Law to surrender. The French, after numerous efforts, never succeeded in taking it.

HYDRABAD, May 25.—The Resident, Colonel Davidson, has been instructed by Government to call upon the Nizam's Government to make good the losses, estimated at a hundred and twenty-seven thousand rupees, sustained by its subjects, by the plunder of Nelungee, a village of the assigned districts. The reason for demanding compensation from the Nizam, which, if it be restricted to that alone which is now asked for, is lenient in the last degree, is, that two officers of some note in the State harboured and abetted the plundering Rohillas. It is due in justice to the minister that I should say these officers were not subordinate to him, were not under his control, and were altogether beyond the reach of his influence. I understand that the Nizam's Government will be required to make good the plunder of Juggyalpet, a mart of some consideration near Masulipatam, when proper accounts shall have been received from that place of the amount of loss. These measures are not retributive, but they will do much good by showing that, if they cannot arrest misconduct in the servants of the Government, the measure of their punishment will necessarily become progressive. Roopa, the Bunjara, who commanded, and personally assisted at the murder of thirty-nine persons, has been decapitated. Two others concerned with him, who were alike sentenced to death, have purchased from the heirs of the murdered persons their exemption from punishment. So much for Mahomedan law. The Moulvies must have exercised considerable ingenuity to discover the parties, who, as heirs to the thirty-nine murdered persons, had the right to condone.—Englishman.

DEPARTURE OF SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN.—Sir Charles Trevelyan quitted these shores yesterday morning, June 24th, carrying with him the regrets and good wishes of every section of the community of this Presidency. The embarkation took place opposite to the Custom House, and was attended with as little "pomp and circumstance" as was consistent with the occasion and the position of the departing Governor. His Excellency, accompanied by Lady Trevelyan and his daughter, and escorted by the body guard, arrived on the beach at a quarter past six o'clock, and was received with presented arms by a guard of honour, composed of a full company of H.M.'s 43rd Regiment, which was drawn up in line facing the spot fixed for the embarkation. The garrison band was in attendance, and struck up the usual air as his Excellency alighted from his carriage, and was met by his friends, who had assembled in large numbers to bid him farewell. Among those present were his Honour the Governor and the Misses Morehead, the Commander-in-chief and Staff, Sir Adam and Lady Bittleston, the Honourable Mr. Maltby, and many others of the leading members of Madras society. Sir Charles conversed freely with those around him for a few minutes, and then having wished them all a hearty and cordial good-bye, he entered the port boat under a salute of seventeen guns from the garrison. The master attendant went with his Excellency and the ladies in the boat. A very high surf was running at the time, but under the skilful management of the boatmen, the little craft cleared the breakers without difficulty and was speedily alongside the steamer. The Simla manned her yards as the port boat neared the vessels. Many Mahomedan and Hindu gentlemen were present at the embarkation, and a large crowd of people thronged the beach to witness his Excellency's departure. Only one feeling prevailed among all classes on the spot—that of sincere regret at the great loss Madras has sustained in the severance of his Excellency's connection with this Presidency and its affairs. There was hardly a dry eye on the beach when his Excellency was leaving it, and on all sides was heard the remark proceeding from the people—"a good man is leaving us."—Indian Statesman.

RANGADA ROW, Deputy Collector, has been appointed by Government to the special duty of settling the price of the land required by the Irrigation Company in Kurnool, and by the North West Railway Company in North Arcot, and of making over the land to the officers of these companies. Rangada Row is first to proceed to Kurnool, and thence to North Arcot.

BOMBAY.

THE TRADE OF BOMBAY.

During the last few years Bombay has earned for itself the title of the commercial capital of India. The condensed report of the Commissioner of Customs for the last official year bears testimony to the fact of our marching on a career of commercial prosperity. According to the new theory of commerce, increase in imports is a sign of the general welfare of the community. During the year 1859-60 the imports, exclusive of those of Seinde, have increased in value by nearly a million and a-half sterling over those of the preceding year, having reached little short of twenty millions. This increase is more remarkable that it has taken place notwithstanding the enhanced rates of duty. In respect to countries trading with Bombay there has been an increase in the trade, chiefly from the United Kingdom. How much of this has arisen from the importation of railway materials we are not informed, but we are inclined to think that a good portion of it is due to the increased demand for inferior kinds of piece goods. The agricultural prosperity in the Mofussil, and the rise in the wages of day-labourers, mostly of those in railway employ, have contributed to this desirable effect. The primitive lungotee is slowly being displaced by the more decent dhotee. Turkey red cholies and indigo dyed sarees have found purchasers even among the women of the Mahar and the Mang; and yet it is known that nearly half of the cloth worn by the population is produced from country looms, hence the success of the spinning factories that are established in the island.

Of the total value of export trade we find no returns. The commissioner regrets to state that there has been a great falling off in that line, the decrease in the revenue amounting to a lac of rupees. The total duty paid on imports and exports, with miscellaneous items, amount to Rs. 1,06,97,740. In respect to excise on salt there has been an increase of nearly Rs. 9 1/2 lacs, and on opium, an increase of 9 lacs also. With duty on salt and opium the custom revenue for the past year of Bombay stands at nearly three millions sterling, thus:—

Frontier Duties ...	1,84,607
Land Customs ...	49,521
Port Dues ...	1,41,197
Straits Lights ...	4,098
Ganja Licence Fees ...	3,641
Anchorage Fees ...	740
Registry Fees ...	9,095
Warehouse Rent ...	14,424
Crane Collections ...	2,500
Tobacco Licence Fees ...	300
Hard Fees ...	9,581
Measuring Fees ...	6,106
Pilotage Fees ...	45,457
Transporting Fees ...	8,835
Pilot Attendance Fees ...	650
Miscellaneous Items ...	7,322
Salt Excise ...	34,70,286
Ground Rent, &c. ...	1,19,814
Opium Pass Fees ...	1,53,62,700
Interest on Hoondies ...	24,899
Total Rupees ...	2,96,74,939

Mr. Commissioner Spooner is very anxious to see this "stupendous amount of revenue" duly credited and accounted for. We also share, to some extent, his anxiety; for in these hard times

Calcutta officials are not very particular about the trade of a million or so.

We had a mind to compare the trade of Bengal with that of Bombay, seeing certain custom-house memoranda published in the Bengal journals. On perusing them we were almost confounded, and we trembled that Bombay was about to lose for ever its commercial superiority over Calcutta. If we accept the Bengal returns (for we cannot question their correctness under the regime of Mr. Wilson), Calcutta appears to have made a desperate attempt to overtake Bombay. During the last year the trade on the other side of India has increased by 66 per cent. over what it had been during the year 1858-59. The exports have doubled, and the imports increased by three millions and a-half. Lest we be charged with gross misrepresentation we quote the magical figures.

Total value of all goods imported ...	Rs. 9,04,00,000	22,60,64,000
Total value of all goods exported ...	Rs. 6,56,02,000	13,11,35,000
Total Rs. ...	15,60,02,000	25,71,99,000

Unfortunately, the tonnage is stated to have been considerably diminished; the inwards by 99,143, and the outwards by 88,843. Thus we are led to the irresistible conclusion that the goods imported and exported must have been more costly and of superior quality than those of the preceding year! We congratulate the people of Calcutta on their refinement and taste. In sober earnest we regard the Bengal Custom-house memoranda as a type of the wretched system of accounts prevalent in that presidency. Mr. Wilson might do well in asking loan of Mr. Spooner from the Bombay Government, to teach Calcutta officials how to work correctly in addition and subtraction.

Ten years hence what may be our customs revenue we dare not say. When our railways will have reached Ratlam or Indore in one direction and Nagpore in the other, when science will have a few of its triumphs in completely piercing our formidable ghats and bridging our treacherous rivers, the Western Presidency of India will begin a brilliant career without being disturbed by an income-tax and annoyed with the imaginary fear of a prospective deficit.—Rast Goftar.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY has declared a dividend for the half year ending 30th June of Rs. 55 per share, being at the rate of 11 per cent. per annum.

DR. WINCHESTER has obtained a medical certificate to proceed to England for fifteen months, with the intention of eventually resigning the service. The appointment of Medical Store-keeper at the Presidency will, on Dr. Winchester's departure, become vacant, and is understood to be reserved for Dr. Giraud, officiating surgeon to the Governor, when relieved of his present onerous duties by Dr. Peele, expected shortly from England. Dr. Haines, acting Professor of Chemistry, is, we believe, to succeed to Dr. Giraud's chair in the Grant College.

INDORE, June 27.—During the last ten days we have been favoured with several copious showers, which have reduced the temperature considerably, and clothed the surrounding country in a mantle of green. You have doubtless heard of a rising on the part of the Bheels in the Satpooree range of hills. Troops have been despatched from Mhow, and several companies of the Bheel corps from Dhar, to look after them, but I have not heard of their having had a brush with the enemy as yet. The leader of the present bund is said to be Bheema Naik, who has been outlawed during the last eighteen months. Another famous Bheel robber, named Kojah Naik, came in about the latter end of 1848, and entered into an agreement to be on his good behaviour, and to restrain his followers from picking and stealing, on condition that Government paid him annually a certain sum, and I believe he has remained true to his engagement ever since. Bheema Naik either would not accept the like terms, or he was not considered worthy of the same, and, as I have observed, has kept himself out of the way ever since. Kojah Naik did offer to bring him in dead or alive if suitably rewarded, but for some cause or other failed to do so. From what I can learn these people are generally driven to commit acts of violence through sheer distress, and it is only when starvation stares them in the face that they take to the road and levy a kind of black mail from traders and others. The Bheels are not a foe to be despised at any time, and in the depths of their native jungles have often proved awkward customers to deal with. They make first rate irregular infantry, and if Government were only to study its own interest, it would gradually do away with many of the Native Regular Corps, and replace them with irregulars, armed with rifles instead of the useless weapon at present in use. In most of these local corps a portion of the old leaven is introduced; doubtless a little being considered necessary to impart an esprit de corps to the wild and uncouth levies of which they are principally composed. Jack Pandey is not above standing shoulder to shoulder even with a Bheel, when it is a case of "pate ka wasta," though at the same time there is no question about his being more soldier-like in appearance and bearing than the undersized Bheel; but when it comes to fighting, I would back the Bheel to show more pluck than his high caste comrade, and when properly broken in and drilled, become as well behaved as any other class of men. I was much amused at a complaint by a Pandey Jemadar in one of these corps. "Only imagine, sir," he observed, "what my feelings must be, when my immediate superior is a flesh-devouring, grog-drinking, tobacco smoking and opium-eating Bheel; the very idea is dreadful, but I bear with it out of the love I have for the Sircar."—That dreadful scourge, the cholera, has been committing great havoc in the surrounding towns and villages; at Oojein the natives say as many as two hundred cases prove fatal daily, and as many as fifty or sixty cases are said to have occurred in the city, but I am happy to say the late rain has done much to abate its virulence.—Bombay Times.

DISTURBANCES AMONG THE BHEELS. — We (Bombay Gazette) regret to learn that Kajee Sing, the Bheel Chief who was in arms against the British Government in 1857-58, but who was permitted to avail himself of the amnesty, has again broken out. After quietly "looting" twelve camel loads of treasure, which was on its way to Indore, amounting to two lacs and sixty thousand rupees, a week ago, he went off to join the Bund under Bheema Naik, who has been looting one or two villages lately. The above sum, together with some eight or ten lacs he has in his possession, will undoubtedly enable him to entertain any number of followers, unless the lesson taught them by Colonel, then Major, Evans, of the 9th Regt. N.I., should make them think better of it. Kajee Sing was the insurgent chief who, with his followers, attacked the siege train, on its way up to Indore and up country, this side of Sindwa, and subsequently looted some ten to twelve lacs of treasure proceeding on the same high road. Two companies of H. M.'s 26th Regt. N.I., under that indefatigable officer, Captain Boudich, left Dhoolia for Seerpoor, at which place both Captains Atkins and Probyn are, with some 150 men of the Bheel Corps, by bullock trains on the 18th June. It will, of course, be impossible to do anything in the way of attacking the Bund, the rains having set in, so the authorities will simply have to content themselves with strengthening the frontier outposts. No operations can commence before February at the earliest, and then a force will have to be sent against these miserable Bheels. Government could not place the command of it in better hands than those of Colonel Evans, who with his regiment (9th N.I.) was all over the Satpoora Hills in 1858, and taught the enemy, in February of that year, that their strongest fastnesses are not impregnable to British troops. The 9th Regt. N.I. are at Mhow, and could easily be made available for the purpose of completing the force, which will have to chastise Kajee Sing after the rains, and we trust that in this matter we shall have the right man in the right place. The worthy collector of the district, Mr. Grant, is at Seerpoor, for which place he started immediately on receiving the intelligence of Kajee Sing having again placed himself at the head of a "Bund." The troops now in Candeish would not suffice to form the force which will be required for the Satpoora Hills during the ensuing hot weather.

KURRACHEE, June 21.—The ship Stamboul from London bound to Kurrachee, was wrecked last night, six miles westward of Maunra Point.

THE MONSOON.—The total fall of rain at Bombay, up to July the 5th, inclusive, is as follows:—At Pyculla, 34 in. 59 cts.; in the Fort, 29 in. 96 cts.; and at Colaba, 25 in. 57 cts.

THE HON. SIR J. ARNOULD, Puisne Justice of her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature, has been appointed Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay.

INAM COMMISSION.—The Summachar states that Sir George Clerk has instituted inquiries into the working of the Inam Commission, and asked the Commissioner for Alienations for a report detailing the expenditure of the establishment from 1842 to 1859.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE COMMERCIAL BANK of India, though still of opinion that it would be greatly for the interests of the shareholders to increase the paid-up capital of the bank, have determined to abandon the idea for the present, in consequence of the very numerous objections to the measure which have been urged upon them by a large majority of the proprietors.

SPINNING AND WEAVING FACTORIES.—We have already noticed the projects which have taken rise for the organisation of two cotton spinning and weaving factories in the town. The promoters of one company, the "Mercantile Spinning and Weaving Company," are our enterprising native merchants, Messrs. Byramjee Jejeebhoy and Cursetjee Nesserwanjee Cama; of the other, the "Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mill," is Mr. John Tanner, merchant. We now learn that besides these, arrangements are in progress to establish four more factories. One of these, the private property of two Parsee merchants, Messrs. Dinshaw Maneckjee Pitty and Merwanjee Framjee Panday, is already in course of building at Tardeo. Another is to be established by Mr. Bomonjee Hormusjee Wadia, in partnership with about half a dozen merchants, and we hear the site selected is at Coorla. The two other mills are severally projected by Mr. Munguldass Nathooobhoy and Mr. Pestonjee Byramjee Cola.

CAPTAIN MACDONALD, H.M.'s Indian Navy, has been appointed to succeed Captain Daniell as Superintendent of the Indus flotilla.

AN UNPLEASANT BEDFELLOW.—The Thanadar of Chackra reports that on the night of the 29th of May the wife of Dhura, aged twenty-eight, was sleeping in her hut at the village of Khodanee; during the night she awoke and complained of feeling cold, and partially blind. On a light being brought, a snake of the Peehun class was found and killed; soon after the woman became speechless, and at sunrise she died. The lieutenant of police reports with reference to this class of snake that the natives state that it fixes itself near the mouth of sleeping people, and that either by their inhaling its breath or unconsciously imbibing some poisonous liquid deposited on the lips, become its victim; total blindness and death at the next sunrise is the general result, but the native remedy is to hold the person up by the heels with the head down, for a second or two, then to induce vomiting by a surfeit of cow's milk, and a total exclusion of light. If the patient gets past the third morning she is considered safe, but cases of cure are rare, which is not altogether to be wondered at, when the means are considered. The lieutenant of police, by the direction of the Captain of Scinde police, has sent out to endeavour to procure a specimen of the snake, which will be forwarded to Kurrachee should a satisfactory specimen be obtained.—Sindian.

MAJOR BACON, the present Fort Adjutant, and acting Town Major, is to be the new Brigade Major at Bombay, under the late General Order abolishing the two former appointments.

DISBANDMENT OF THE 3RD BELOOCH REGIMENT.—We understand that orders for the disbandment of the 3rd Belooch Regiment has been received at Kurrachee, and that measures have been already taken to carry it into effect.

THE "AJDAHA."—Epidemic cholera, in its worst form, broke out on board H.M.I.N. receiving ship Ajdaha on Friday week, and on Saturday no less than thirty-six persons on board were attacked with it. An examination of the vessel was made, when it was found that no proper ventilation for the noxious gases arising from the hold existed. It was determined, however, that her moorings should be changed to near Butcher's Island.

H. M. S. "PUNJAB" anchored within the outer light after midnight on 24th June. Brigadier Coghlan, the Rev. Mr. Badger, and Dr. Welsh, of the Muscat-Zanzibar Commission, returned in her. The Punjab left Bombay on the 31st May, and during her absence has experienced very fine weather. She reached Hallania on the morning of the 7th June, and remained there two days landing the supplies which she took up for the telegraphic staff on the island. The latter, though not quite so badly off as had been represented, were by no means enviably circumstanced, with a long monsoon before them, during which they could hardly look for aid through the ordinary channels. They were reduced to one barrel of biscuit and a quarter of a barrel of salt pork. True, they might have lived on as do the few natives on the island, feeding on fresh and salt fish; but it is to be presumed that they hardly bargained for such fare with the Red Sea and Indian Telegraph Company. The arrival of the Punjab was quite a godsend to the poor fellows, and we have no doubt that they heartily enjoyed a glass of beer after having been so long deprived of that luxury. Mr. Nicholls, the superintendent, left the island in the Constance, on the 14th of April, and Mr. Crocker had assumed charge in his place. There were two other assistants, but one, Mr. Simmons, who was suffering from fever, has been brought to Bombay in the Punjab, also two Hindoo carpenters, who were so ill that they were obliged to be carried on board. It was not known at Hallania where the defect in the cable between that island and Aden existed. It was presumed to be about two hundred miles from the latter place, near the spot where the Kurrachee cable was joined to the piece which had been laid from Aden the year before. The local Superintendent is interdicted from making tests to ascertain such defects; but we understand that Mr. Long, the chief Superintendent of the line, reached Hallania in the Constance on the 14th of June, with another supply of provisions from Aden, and, as he has not succeeded in repairing the break, it is to be feared that the line will have to be underrun before it is brought again into working order. The news of the arrival of the Constance at Hallania reached Muscat the same day, and three days after it was announced that the line between Muscat and Kurrachee had gone wrong. The Constance left on her return to Aden on the 16th. After leaving Hallania, the Punjab touched at Jibli to land a packet of letters for our four unfortunate countrymen, who are the only inhabitants of the Guano island. The sea ran high at the time, with a heavy swell breaking on the shore; but a brave Seedeer plunged into the surf from the boat, and succeeded in landing a line, whereby the packet was safely delivered to the expectant three-fourths of the population, who had come down to the beach to welcome the unexpected visitors. The Punjab reached Muscat on the morning of the 12th, and found there her Majesty's Indian navy ships Elphinstone and Mahi. The former left for Bushire on the 14th, and the latter for Bassadore, the Pearl Banks, and Bushire, three days after. The Muscat commission was received with due honour by the Imaum, and the usual interchange of civilities took place between the Punjab and the authorities on shore. Syed Thoweynee was about to despatch one of his vessels of war, with his son and vizier on board, to Bunder Abbas, in order to settle some dispute which had arisen between the Imaum's governor at that place and another who is at Minau. The Imaum was also about to take a trip to Soor in his ship the Rahmany. Both were expected to leave two or three days after the departure of the Punjab from Muscat. The heat of Muscat is described as being fearful, the thermometer ranging from 107 degrees to 115 degrees in the shade. We understand that Brigadier Coghlan has suffered a good deal in health during this trip; but we have no doubt that he and the gentlemen associated with him have succeeded in obtaining information which will facilitate the solution of the difficulties that have arisen between the rulers of Zanzibar and Muscat. Mr. Rassam was duly installed as Acting British Agent with the Imaum,—an appointment which seemed highly gratifying to his Highness. It is sincerely to be hoped that, when the objects of the commission are attained, the Government of India will lose no time in making its award. The state of uncertainty in which the two States have been kept for the last fifteen months is working much mischief among the tribes of Oman, and numberless intrigues are reported to be in active operation, which, if successful, will ultimately produce disorder over the country, and destroy the peace of the maritime tribes in the Persian Gulf. The Punjab left Muscat on the morning of the 20th, and spoke the Tigris off the harbour coming from Kurrachee. We understand that the Tigris had been sent from the Gulf to convey the intelligence that the Sultan of Bahrein had made over that island to the Persians, and with his people had acknowledged the sovereignty of the Shah. It appears that this fact first became known to the British authorities on the occasion of Captain Jones's late visit to the island. The resident, it would seem, expected the usual visit from the chief; but that being omitted, he sent to inquire the reason, and was told that if he wished to hold any communication with Bahrein he must do so henceforth through the Persian authorities. The latest intelligence at Muscat was to the effect that the Persians were preparing to send a battery of artillery and two regiments of infantry to garrison the island. The news brought by the Punjab leads us to hope that there is no truth in the reported loss of the Elphinstone; that vessel left Muscat on the 17th, when the telegraph between Muscat and Kurrachee was suspended. The Punjab left Muscat on the 20th, and no such intelligence had been received there, so that unless communication between Muscat and Kurrachee has been restored since the latter date no authentic accounts later than those brought by the Punjab can have reached Bombay.—Bombay Gazette.

KURRACHEE TIMBER TRADE.—The ship Glenburn, which recently arrived here from Melbourne, has brought on a full cargo of Australian timber for this port. This is the first importation of the kind from the colonies. A specimen of the timber has been shown to us, and we must say that the quality of the wood is exceedingly well adapted to railway works and other purposes where durability is an object essentially to be attained. The Chinsura will, in a few months hence, bring up another cargo, and we shall, no doubt, eventually have a permanent timber trade established between Kurrachee and Australia. With the extensive supplies pouring in from Rangoon and the colonies, the price of timber here will, it is to be inferred, undergo material reductions. The effect this will have on the stupendous works now being carried out by the Sind and Punjab Railway Companies cannot, as matter of course, be otherwise than beneficial in the extreme, in a pecuniary point of view. India, of itself, however, is well able to supply all our wants in the timber line. We received a letter the other day from a mercantile gentleman at Sedasheghur on the coast of Canara; he informs us that periodical Government sales of jungle and teak timber take place there and at the adjacent stations, and the quantities thus disposed of are something enormous; the prices realised at the last sale averaged from Rs. 4 to 5½ per measurement candy for the former description, and Rs. 14 to 18 for the latter, of all sizes. Sawyers and carpenters are plentiful at Sedasheghur, and labour consequently is cheap. Tonnage, however, must be secured either here or at Bombay, as none is procurable at Sedasheghur. Our correspondent a short time since forwarded to this port 14,000 Melbourne oak sleepers, for the Sind Railway Company, and they fetched, we believe, Rs. 4 2-16ths each. The G. I. P. Railway Company indent very freely on the timber resources of Malabar for their supplies, qualities of the various descriptions of wood obtained there being found to be exceedingly well adapted to railway works. The importation, however, of Australian timber into Kurrachee opens a new era in the commerce of the port, and we hope the trade thus established will eventually unfold to our merchants a new sphere for operations.—Our Paper (Kurrachee).

POONA is to be made forthwith the seat of Government, and the open space of ground between the Commander-in-Chief's quarters and the Sappers' lines, and towards the Bund, has been fixed upon for the site of the new Government offices. A better place could not, we think, have been chosen for this purpose anywhere near Poona. His Excellency Sir George Clerk has been busily occupied in inspecting the whole of the vacant ground from the Sungum towards Gorporee, and it is said that a site has also been selected on which to build a suitable residence for the Governor, the one at Dapoorie having been condemned by a committee, and notices have been served on the owners of the ground in question, that as the same is immediately required for public purposes, they will not be permitted to sell, or otherwise dispose of it to any private individuals.

MR. FAIRBAIRN'S DOCK SCHEME.—Sir George Clerk has expressed himself very favourably of the scheme for reclaiming Back Bay, in order to construct wet docks and obtain ground for building sites; and that, so far as his powers go, he is anxious to give every encouragement to the company which has been formed to carry out Mr. Fairbairn's admirable project.

HINDOO MAHARAJAS.—The Hindoo prejudices against female education seem to be fast melting away, for an instance has occurred of the advocacy of the cause of enlightenment of the fair sex of the Hindoos by their spiritual guides, the Maharajahs, who hitherto had acted as the stern opponents of the reformation, and used their ill-gotten and undeserved authority to throw obstacles in the progress of the Hindoo girls' schools. The Banner states that Juddooljee Maharaj, who has recently arrived from Surat, distributed prizes on Saturday evening, June 30, to the pupils of the Munguldass Nathooobhai girls' school. The recognition of these schools by these self-called "Gods" of the Hindoos, will doubtless work a marvellous influence on the minds of the illiterate and bigoted, who would not venture to step beyond the circle prescribed by the Maharajas.

THE "SQUANTUM."—The amount subscribed for the captain and crew of the wrecked ship Squantum has been disposed of as follows:—To Captain Millar, Mrs. Millar, and son, Rs. 1,000; to chief mate, 200; to second mate, 100; to sailmaker, 50; and to each of the crew, 40. Captain Gillett, in addition to the above, presents the son of Captain Millar, who so bravely swam on shore, although three of the crew had already been lost in the attempt, with a gold watch and chain and Rs. 50.

IMPORTS (Bombay, July 7).—Cotton Manufactures.—Some little business has been transacted in Piece Goods on speculation, though there exists no real demand from up-country dealers. Notwithstanding the heavy stocks at market, holders are firm, and prices are consequently steady. Grey Shirtings have been sold to a fair extent, especially of the heavier makes, which are in better inquiry, and which have in some instances obtained a slight advance in price. Grey Long Cloths and Grey Domestic are dull and without inquiry. T. Cloths are in steady inquiry at former rates. Twills or Drills are in low inquiry. Grey Madapolams are heavy of stock, and have declined in value. Grey Printers are in moderate demand, with a slight fall in price. Cambries have slightly improved in demand and value. Muls are difficult of sale. Bleached Goods maintain their former feature; they are in light request, and prices are unchanged. For Glasgow Goods there is little doing.
Lappets and Dhoties have met with few sales. Yarns.—A tolerably good demand prevails for both Mule and Water Twist, but no important sales have taken place, as holders have remained firm in anticipation of better prices. Purchases could only be made at an advance of ¼ to ½ anna. Coloured and Turkey Red Yarns are in little request, and prices remain unaltered. Metals.—Copper of all kinds remains dull, and prices of Braziers, Sheathing, and Raised Bottoms have further declined; stocks are in excess of requirements. Iron is firm and quiet; British Bar, square and round Nail Rod, Sheet, and Hoop, maintain inquiry at former rates, but holders are too firm to be disposed to operate. Swedish Bars have obtained a slight advance in price. Steel is dull, and steady at former rates. Spelter is in large stock, and has suffered a decline in price. There have been no transactions in Lead. Tin Plates and Quicksilver are without change.

EXPORTS (Bombay, July 7).—Cotton.—The market has continued dull, owing to unfavourable advices from Europe and China, and the sales that have taken place are very trifling.
 There is but a very moderate stock at market, and no doubt, if future accounts from home and China prove favourable, holders will become firm and ask higher prices. Wool.—Stocks are very much reduced, and higher prices are now asked for the few parcels remaining on hand. Oilseeds.—Since the date of our last report the market has become quiet. Linseed has met with sales at a reduction of about two annas per cwt.
Rapeseed commands its former price, owing to scarcity of stocks; the new yellow kind is scarcer and higher. In Teel Seed there is nothing doing, and prices are merely nominal.
Niger Seed may be had in small quantities at former prices.
Poppy Seed and Ground Nuts are out of stock. Hemp is in brisk demand at advanced rates, owing to paucity of supplies.
Coffee.—Mocha is not to be had; Malabar is lightly held and commands higher prices. Pepper.—Inquiry exists at an advance of Rs. 1 to 2. Madder Root may be had at a reduction of four annas. Opium.—Owing to unfavourable accounts from China, the demand has fallen off, and Malwa is now quoted at Rs. 1,415 per chest. The exports to China during the fortnight amount to 2,025 chests.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, June 7.—The London mail of the 26th April has not yet arrived, but is hourly expected. Most of the transports which had left for the north have had to put back to this port on account of adverse winds, and it is uncertain when they may again take their departure, as the southeast monsoon has scarcely yet set in. It is not likely that any general movement will take place until the arrival of the British and French Envoys Extraordinary, who are expected to arrive by the mail now due. Sir Hope Grant and Admiral Hope still remain at Hong Kong, but are expected to leave in a very few days.

The rebels, who have been said to have been put down on so many occasions, only to make their appearance in some other quarter, however, have lately met with considerable success. At Shanghai the panic amongst the native traders was very great, and trade has been seriously affected by the proceedings of the marauders. The native authorities at Hangchow and Soochow have burned the suburbs of those cities, so as to render them more easy of defence. Great misery prevailed amongst the people. The Imperial Government appears unable to protect its subjects; and those who have anything to lose were chartering foreign vessels to convey their families and valuables southwards. The British and French ministers had issued the following notification, which had produced a good effect in Shanghai:—

"The undersigned issues this special proclamation to tranquillise the minds of the people.

"Shanghai is a port open to foreign trade, and the native dealers residing therein have large transactions with the foreigners who resort to the place to carry on their business. Were it to become the scene of attack and of civil war, commerce would receive a severe blow, and the interests of those, whether foreign or native, who wish to pursue their peaceful avocations in quiet would suffer great loss.

"The undersigned will therefore call upon the commanders of her Majesty's naval and military authorities to take proper measures to prevent the inhabitants of Shanghai from being exposed to massacre and pillage, and to lend their assistance to put down any insurrectionary movements among the ill-disposed, and to protect the city against any attack.
 "Shanghai, 26th May, 1860."

Troops had been landed from the men of war for the protection of the foreign settlement.
 For the protection of the city we believe the British are to occupy the Ningpo Joss-house, outside the north-west angle of the city, and the French are stationed at Taukadoo, near the Roman Catholic Cathedral.

There is nothing of importance to report regarding Canton. The news of rebel successes or reverses are unusually meagre. Laou, the Governor-general, has sent some troops against the rebels. The new Governor of Canton, Ke-ling, who is Peh-kwei's successor, has declared his intention of not coming near the city, according to Chinese report. It is said he holds a special commission for suppressing rebellion, and that the Governor-general will transact the greater part of his civil duties for him, as he has hitherto done. The prefect and grain commissioner conveyed to him the other day his seals of office.

The tea market opened at Fuhchau for the new season's tea on the 31st May. High rates have been paid, and the leaf is said to be much inferior to last season's. A new Tartar general was expected, and the native authorities were making great preparations for his arrival.

At Chusan the troops were very healthy. Gen.
 Sir Robert Napier arrived there on the 12th of May, in her Majesty's ship Encounter, and left again for Shanghai on the 20th. The Encounter
 on the 22nd ult.

The past fortnight has not been without its shipping casualties. The steamer Remi, under charter to the French Government, was totally lost on the 25th April on the Korea, in lat. 33 56
 N, long. 126 16 E. All the crew were saved except one Chinaman, who attempted to swim ashore. During the few days they were resident on the island they were treated kindly by the natives. Her Majesty's steam transport Assistance has also been lost on the other side of this island, at Deep Bay. She was freighted with stores, and had a large number of the coolie corps on board.
 We believe the officers proceed to the north to be tried by court-martial. The Reine des Clippers, a French chartered transport, has been burnt near Macao. She had 500 troops on board. She is beached on the Typa. The fire is said to have originated through the carelessness of a sailor who went with an open light to draw a cask of rum in the lower hold. Several of the long expected arrivals from England have come into harbour during the past fortnight.—Overland

COLOMBO, June 26.—During the fortnight we have had weather resembling that which usually prevails in February more than that to which we have been accustomed in June. Whatever the result may be, in regard to the coming crop, of this unseasonably fine weather, there can be no doubt that it has facilitated the shipment of the present one. The addition to our exports in the fortnight amounts to 36,980 cwt., in the proportion of 34,303 plantation and 2,677 native. The great bulk of the coffee went as usual, to London, for which port five vessels sailed, taking 31,652 cwt. of plantation coffee and 2,336 native. The Ewald, which sailed for Melbourne, took away 2,651 cwt. of plantation, and 341 native. The exports of plantation are now 394,375 against 340,418 to the corresponding period of last season, an excess of 54,000 cwt. On the other hand, the exports of native are only 142,773 against 72,436, a falling off of 30,663; so that the total shipments to date—537,148 against 513,854, show an increase of 23,294. The exports of cinnamon, cocoanut oil, plumbago, coir, and ebony, are all large, and but for the drought which has affected the coffee crop, we should have no hesitation in saying, that Sir H. Ward leaves Ceylon in a state of the most hopeful prosperity. Within two days of the period at which this mail is carried from our shores, the able Governor who has ruled the destinies of Ceylon for the past five eventful years will leave the scene of his wise and useful activity for a wider and perhaps a more important sphere. After the departure of Sir H.
 Ward, and until the arrival of his successor,
 Major-General Lockyer will act as Lieutenant-governor.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

SINGAPORE, June 15.—Their Excellencies the Earl of Elgin and Baron Gros arrived here on the afternoon of the 13th, in the mail steamer Pekin, and landed under salutes from the fort.
 They proceeded to China yesterday. H.M.I.N. steamer Victoria left this on the 5th, bound to Acheen, having on board Captain Burn, secretary and aide-de-camp to the hon. the Governor. We have not heard the precise object of Captain Burn's mission. Captain Borradaile will act as secretary, &c., during Captain Burn's absence. We regret having to announce the death, rather suddenly, on the morning of the 5th, of Mr. Curties, coroner of Singapore. He has been succeeded in this office by John Scott, Esq., M.D., who recently held the appointment of coroner of Penang for a few months. Telegraphic communication between Singapore and Batavia is still interrupted. The break exists on this side of Muntok, as the line is open from the latter place to Java.—Singapore Free Press.

JAVA, June 7.—The accounts from Banjermassing, which are to the 12th May, do not show much progress in putting down the insurrection. Several encounters had taken place between detachments of troops sent out in different directions and parties of the enemy, which generally ended in the latter being put to flight, but the detachments in most instances ultimately fell back upon their entrenched posts, being too numerically weak to occupy the ground gained. The Military Commandant at Banjermassing is said to have expressed the hope of being able to restore order in the whole of Banjermassing within the space of six weeks from the date of his despatches, but he is considered rather sanguine in his expectations, considering the large extent of territory over which the insurgents are scattered, and the very limited military force at his disposal. Three steamers which had been despatched to search for the pirates reported to have appeared off the coast of Madura and neighbouring islands, were unsuccessful in their mission. The cultivation of the Kina plant is being prosecuted with great success in Java. At the end of 1859, there were about 100,000 plants raised from seed in full growth, 300,700 seeds were in the nursery, 419,898 had been laid down to sprout, 70,970 had already germinated, and 27,718 plants had produced seed.

By a decree of the Governor-general of Netherlands India in Council, dated 14th May last, it is declared that the territories of Sinjai, Kajung, and old Bulekoma, as well as the islands Bulanroë, Liang-Liang, Kambow, Kuding-Aring, Lanreanrong, Kanalo and Kanalodua, ceded to Netherlands by Boni, are provisionally constituted a separate division of the Government of Celebes and its dependencies, under the name of the Sinjai division, and under the charge of a commissioner.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

April 24.—The Ameer in a durbar held this day, directed Sirdars Peer Mahomed Khan, Mahomed Osman Khan, Shere Ally Khan, and Gholam Mahomed Khan to despatch forces to Candahar, retaining Sirdar Shere Ally Khan in Cabul, as it was rumoured that a disturbance was anticipated.—April 25.—A paper was received by the Ameer from Mahomed Afzul Khan of Toorkistan, which stated that the King of Bokhara had not arrived there as yet, and that the King's son was on the river Humoo with his forces. It is rumoured in Toorkistan that two merchants amongst the force at Murd Shah Jehan were called by the King and had received a good reception. The force at Khana Koonch Koondooz and Tusk Gingal, came from Cabul to BULK, and Tukta Bull with their families, but the latter were recalled. At this step the Ameer was pleased, observing that it was a wise measure, as it would be an inconvenience to them in case of an emeute.—Lahore Chronicle.

No. 362.—The subjoined regulations, in force under the Bengal presidency, are made applicable to the artillery of the Bombay army:—

1. An officer, though posted to the horse artillery, receives foot artillery pay, under the following circumstances, viz.:—

I. From the date of commencement of a furlough to that of rejoining his troop or brigade on return to India.

II. While doing duty with the foot artillery as regimental staff in a battalion of foot, or in a division of artillery.

III. On nomination to staff employ, or to a detached duty, whereof the prescribed remuneration compensates for the loss of cavalry pay and horse allowance, the restriction continuing from the date of his quitting his troop or brigade (or from the date of the G.O. announcing his removal, if absent from his troop or brigade at the time of nomination,) to the date of return to his troop or brigade on relief from the staff employ or detached duty.

2. Horse artillery pay and allowances will continue payable for the entire period of absence on a temporary duty, of which the prescribed remuneration would not compensate for the loss of horse artillery pay and allowances; provided that, on completion of the duty, the officer rejoin his troop without delay. Horse artillery pay and allowances will also be passed for three months from the date of an officer quitting his troop or brigade, on other temporary detached duty, or on other staff employment, than that of regimental staff in a battalion of foot artillery or a division of artillery.

3. An officer of horse artillery, appointed to act as adjutant and quartermaster to even a mixed division of artillery, which, perhaps, includes his own troop, will be posted to the foot artillery; for he will receive foot artillery pay and allowances from, at latest, the date of coming into receipt of the staff allowance of adjutant.

Garrison Duties.

Bombay Castle, June 23.—No. 393.—The following modifications of existing arrangements for the military duties of the garrison and presidency will have effect from July 1st next:—

The office of town major is abolished, his duties as the administrative staff officer of the Governor and C. in C. of the garrison will be fulfilled by the brig. comdg. the garrison.

The brigadier will be under the direct orders of the C. in C. of the army. If he have to address the gov. of the fort, he will do so either personally or by letter through the mil. sec. to the gov.

The office of sec. to the general prize committee is abolished, and the remaining duties of the town major will be taken by the garrison staff and by the general staff under the orders of H.E. the C. in C. of the army.

All details of duty, discipline, and the accommodation of troops will rest with the C. in C. of the army, but permanent changes in the garrison arrangements will be referred by the C. in C. to the governor.

The appointment of a brigade major is sanctioned. The office of fort adjutant is abolished.

The asst. qmrr. gen. now attached to the qmrr. gen.'s office in Bombay will belong to the garrison staff, and will conduct the embarkations, debarkations, and other local duties of the qmrr. gen.'s dept. under the orders of the brigadier.

The dep. inspec. gen. of hospitals at the Pres. will be the sen. med. officer under the orders of the brigadier.

The brigadier will, therefore, have under his orders the following staff:—A brigadier major and asst. qmr. gen., a barrack mr., a dep. inspec. gen. of hospitals, a garrison surgeon and his assistant. The warrant and non-commissioned staff will be the same as heretofore.

The European General Hospital will henceforth be a civil institution. It will admit military patients as heretofore, until other arrangements can be made. The garrison engineer will continue to carry on his duties as formerly, excepting that his channel of communication will be the brigdr. comdg. instead of the town major.

The ordnance and commissariat departments will give immediate attention to the requisitions of the brigdr. comdg., subject to their departmental rules and the regulations of Govt.

The town major's list will hereafter be designated the unattached list, and all the duties and correspondence connected therewith will be conducted in the department of the adj. gen.

The garrison band will be under the orders of the mil. sec. to the governor.

Victualling of Europeans.—Indian Navy.

No. 121.—The gov. in council having had under consideration the scale of victualling for Europeans on board the vessels of the Indian navy, has been pleased to establish the following in lieu of that at present in force:—

For one Man per Day.

Fresh beef, or mutton, in lieu of salt meat lb. 1*
Fresh bread, in lieu of biscuit " 1†

Biscuit " 1
Salt beef, or pork " 1
Rice oz. 4
Dholl " 2
Ghee " 1
Spirits Imperial pint ½
Wine (in lieu of spirits) " ¼
Salt oz. 1
Vegetables lb. ½
Firewood Quantity actually required.

Per Week.

Flour lb. 2
Raisins Pint ½
Vinegar oz. 2½ Tea oz. 2½
Sugar lb. 1 oz. 2
Mustard oz. 1
Coffee " 12
Lemon, or lime juice, as hereafter ordered.

2. The following scale shall have effect for one year, and from the 1st August next, on board vessels receiving this order before that date; otherwise, from the date of receipt, which should, in that case, be communicated to the auditor general.

3. On a complaint being made by any of the officers or ship's company that the salt meat supplied has, from age or from inferior quality, lost in boiling more than one-half of its original weight, the captain will order the surveying officers of the ship to inquire into the circumstances, and see whether the meat has been properly cut up and cooked. If it shall be proved to their satisfaction that the daily allowance to the officers and ship's company, or the portion supplied to any particular mess, has fairly lost by boiling more than one-half of the original weight of the meat when put into the coppers, the captain, if he considers an extra allowance necessary, may direct the purser to issue an additional quantity equal to half the original allowance complained of, placing his initials in the proper column of the statement as an authority for the total extra issue on each day.

4. As these extra issues are authorised only for the purpose of making up the dinner allowance, and as they are to be made only when the captain may consider them actually requisite for the proper subsistence of the officers or men, no portion, either of such extra issue, or of the original ration of salt meat in respect of which they may be made, is to be paid for as savings.

5. In case of the surveying officers having difficulty in deciding the claims for such extra issue, a fair selection of pieces of the meat are to be weighed before being put into the coppers, and also after being cooked.

[Note.—Salt meat is always to be steeped for two or more hours before being put into the coppers. It has been proved by experiment that one hour and a-half is sufficient time to cook the meat.]

6. When a ship shall be about to proceed to a foreign station, the purser is to make a demand, approved by the captain, for a supply of lime juice and sugar, according to the time for which she shall have been ordered to be victualled, or to the probable consumption during that time, according to the following rules, or to the capability of the ship for stowing the same.

* To be issued whenever procurable, provided the salt meat on board is not likely to spoil.

† Not to be issued when the biscuit is likely to spoil by keeping.

7. Neither lime juice nor sugar for lime juice is to be issued to the crew while supplied with fresh meat and vegetables, nor within a fortnight after the issue of either, unless, from the state of health of the crew the surgeon shall consider it necessary, nor unless the captain shall give an order for the issue, which order will accompany the purser's accounts. Under these restrictions, the crew may receive lime juice and sugar at the rate of half-an-ounce of each per man per day; but as the supply may be prejudicial to some persons of the crew, the surgeon should deliver to the purser a list of those to whom the lime juice and sugar should not be issued.

The lime juice and sugar are not to be issued separately. They are to be mixed and made into sherbet before issued.

Remounts.

Poona, July 2.—H. Excellency the Hon. the Gov. in council has been pleased to resolve that the responsibility for the selection of remounts of the Bombay Army shall rest with the remount agent, who will be under the immediate orders of the C. in C. and in whom for the future will rest the nomination of an officer to that appointment.

In the purchase of horses, the remount agent will be assisted by a veterinary surgeon, who will be placed at his disposal for the purpose.

On the 15th August annually, officers commanding mounted corps will report direct to the remount agent the number of horses that will be required during the ensuing season, to complete their respective regiments.

Duplicates of these reports will be sent to the adjutant-general of the army.

On the receipt of these reports, the remount agent will prepare and forward for the orders of the C. in C. an annual estimate of horses required, describing the particular service for which they are needed—European or native cavalry, horse or foot artillery, and the sum at which they would probably be purchased.

This estimate will be submitted to Government, and on being sanctioned or modified, the remount agent will then commence his purchases, sending to Government monthly, through the adjutant-general of the army, returns of the number of those of each class purchased and of the sum advanced to him for their purchase.

These returns, after inspection by govt., will be trans. to the accountant gen.

After the remount agent has apportioned the remounts to the different branches of the serv., he is at liberty to ask for a committee of respective officers, horse art., lt. field batt., drags., and lt. cav. to confirm his judgment, from which no regimental appeal will ever be admitted.

If the agent does not call for such committees he will of course be liable to appeal.

Should any difference arise between the remount agent and the committee, a reference, with a full report of each case, must be made for the decision of the C. in C.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, August 3.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers of her Majesty's Indian forces, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, in consideration of their gallantry and distinguished conduct during the operations of the expeditionary force in Persia in 1856-57, as recorded against their several names, viz.:

20th Bombay Native Infantry.—Captain John Augustus Wood.—On the 9th of December, 1856, Captain Wood led the grenadier company, which formed the head of the assaulting column sent against Bushire. He was the first man on the parapet of the fort, where he was instantly attacked by a large number of the garrison, who suddenly sprang on him from a trench cut in the parapet itself. These men fired a volley at Captain Wood and the head of the storming party, when only a yard or two distant from that officer; but although Captain Wood was struck by no less than seven musket balls, he at once threw himself upon the enemy, passed his sword through the body of their leader, and being closely followed by the men of his company, speedily overcame all opposition, and established himself in the place. Captain Wood's decision, energy, and determined valour undoubtedly contributed in a high degree to the success of the attack. His wounds compelled him to leave the force for a time; but, with the true spirit of a good soldier, he rejoined his regiment, and returned to his duty at Bushire, before the wounds were properly healed. Date of act of bravery, 9th Dec., 1856.

3rd Bombay Light Cavalry.—Lieut. and Adjutant Arthur Thomas Moore, and Lieut. John Grant Malcolmson.—On the occasion of an attack on the enemy on the 8th of Feb., 1857, led by Lieut.-col. Forbes, c.n., Lieut. Moore, the adj. of the regt., was perhaps the first of all by a horse's length. His horse leaped into the square, and instantly fell dead, crushing down his rider, and breaking his sword as he fell amid the broken ranks of the enemy. Lieut. Moore speedily extricated himself, and attempted with his broken sword to force his way through the press; but he would assuredly have lost his life had not the gallant young Lieut. Malcolmson, observing his peril, fought his way to his dismounted comrade through a crowd of enemies to his rescue, and, giving him his stirrup, safely carried him through everything out of the throng. The thoughtfulness for others, cool determination, devoted courage, and ready activity shown in extreme danger by this young officer, Lieut. Malcolmson, appear to have been most admirable, and to be worthy of the highest honour. Date of acts of bravery, 8th February, 1857.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION COMPANY.—The prospectus has been issued of the East India Irrigation and Canal Company, with a capital of £2,000,000, powers being taken to increase the same, if necessary. The first issue is to be £1,000,000, in 50,000 shares of £20 each, with a deposit of £1 per share. The undertaking is organised by the same parties who promoted the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, and the experience thus obtained will obviate many difficulties which might otherwise be experienced. The works proposed to be accomplished are in the neighbourhood of the rich and extensive alluvial deltas of Orissa, which it is asserted abound in agricultural and mineral wealth. There is no Government guarantee at present, but the terms on which it is proposed by the Secretary of State for India to sanction the proceedings of the Company appear to be considered satisfactory—

"1. That the company's works shall be constructed in conformity with plans approved by the local government."

"2. That all land considered by the local government to be necessary for the works shall be provided, in the first instance, free of charge, but that its full value shall eventually be paid by the company, by instalments, after their dividend reaches £5 per cent."

"3. That the prices chargeable for water supplied for irrigation, or for other purposes, and the tolls, rates, and fares chargeable for navigation of the company's canals, and for the conveyance of passengers, animals, and goods thereon, shall be fixed by an Act of the Indian Legislature before the works are commenced, and that all water supplied for irrigation shall be sold to the Government alone."

"4. That the whole profits of the works shall belong to the company."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE LATE CAPTAIN HAINES, I.N.

A DARK chapter in the history of the Bombay Government has at length come to a conclusion. A gloomier page, indeed, will scarcely be found anywhere except, perchance, in the records of Neapolitan misrule. A mere debtor, if indeed he were that, has been for nearly six years confined in jail, in a deadly climate, at the suit of the Government he had served with pre-eminent zeal and ability. What more could have been done to him had he actually been found guilty of the fraud and embezzlement which were so strenuously charged against him? Compare the measure of vengeance heaped upon the unfortunate officer whose remarkable talents had for upwards of thirty years been entirely devoted to the service of his country, with the mitigated punishment meted out to the fashionable but fraudulent banker whose whole life had been a systematic hypocrisy. The one, twice acquitted of all criminality by a jury of his fellow-countrymen amid the acclamations of an excited and sympathising audience, is nevertheless—on a charge of debt because the Government had been too careless, or too penurious to appoint a proper treasurer and book-keeper—thrown into prison, and, after six years' detention, only released to die; while the other, convicted, amid universal groans and execrations, of robbing the widow and the orphan, is set free after a brief imprisonment, despised for having been detected rather than for the crimes he had committed. But the former was persecuted by a Government conscious that it was itself most to blame, while the latter was brought to trial in the name of the laws he had violated, and not to gratify the resentment of those whom he had ruined and spoiled.

It was in the year 1835 that Captain Haines was first employed in that long series of marine surveys which attracted the favourable notice of his superiors. Through his unflinching industry and perseverance the entire sea-coast of Southern Arabia was clearly laid down in the charts, and the value of Aden as a coaling and naval station demonstrated beyond dispute. At the time when the overland route was being established, the Arab tribes had been guilty of great cruelty to the crews of vessels wrecked upon that inhospitable shore, and their chief was only brought to his senses by the vigorous measures adopted by Captain Haines. The result was the complete surrender to the East India Company of the fort of Aden, and so fully aware were the Court of Directors of the nature of the services rendered by that officer, that they presented him with a sword of honour, and appointed him political agent. This was in 1839. For the next fourteen years Captain Haines identified himself with the strange settlement intrusted to his control. He was virtually a Dictator. His power no one disputed, for no one denied that it was justly and wisely exercised. Under his fostering care the trade of the place trebled and quadrupled, while the fierce barbarians around were not less conciliated by his liberality than overawed by his firmness. No man was then more honoured by the Court—not one of their many able and conscientious servants was held in higher regard. But Captain Haines, though an excellent administrator, was an indifferent book-keeper. Probably he knew nothing whatever about double entry, and was no better acquainted with finance than financiers usually are with navigation. As the commerce of the place, however, increased, so did the necessity of having a properly trained and experienced official to superintend the treasury. Repeatedly did the political agent urge his worshipful masters to place the financial department upon a larger and securer footing. It was all in vain. They were busied about many things and had no time to spare a thought upon the burning rock of Aden, or its overworked governor. At last, in the early part of 1854, they suddenly bethought them that it was time to look into his accounts, and waxed furious on discovering that they had fallen into arrears, and that a considerable deficiency had arisen. This Captain Haines at once undertook to make good by the sacrifice of his private fortune, and by large deductions from his pay. Their anger at their own shortcomings was not thus to be allayed. Nothing short of extreme measures could now satisfy them. If they had hitherto failed in their duty as supervisors, they would not do so as the detectors and pursuers of delinquents. Their own error should be expiated, but Captain Haines must be their scapegoat. So, that gallant and distinguished officer was carried off to Bombay with every mark of indignity, as though his guilt had been already proved; and being taken before the senior police magistrate, was finally committed to the sessions on a charge of embezzlement and malversation. Twice was he placed in the felon's dock on two separate indictments, and twice was he triumphantly acquitted by two distinct juries. But the Government was not thus to be baffled. The deficiency amounted to £28,000, for the recovery of which a civil suit was instituted, and as Captain Haines was quite unable to pay so large a sum, he was mercilessly committed to prison. For nearly six years did that meritorious officer languish in a debtors' jail, his spirit broken, and his health hopelessly undermined, but his persecutors never relented, or turned a pitying ear to the many applications that were made in his favour. Once indeed he was removed for a few months, under strict surveillance, to a private house, to avert the scandal of his death in jail. But no sooner was he pronounced out of immediate danger than he was again incarcerated at Mazagan. Of the dead we would speak with charity, but Lord Elphinstone without straining justice, might well have shown a little indulgence to a heart-broken old man fast descending into the grave. It would have been a graceful act of the dying governor to have concluded his administration by releasing the dying prisoner. Perhaps he knew not how ill he was, and one's own sufferings are apt to make us callous towards the sufferings of others. Be this as it may, his lordship lost a noble opportunity of doing a righteous and merciful deed; and when Sir George Clerk, obeying the dictates of his own generous nature, threw open the prison gates, it was already too late—he barely anticipated Death, the only true friend of the oppressed. Captain Haines has passed away to “where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest;” but the memory of the persecution he endured will not lightly be forgotten or forgiven.

MASSACRE OF THE INNOCENTS.

WHEN in the autumn of last year* we ventured to raise our voice against the ill-considered philanthropy of the military authorities displayed in shipping off to “the Indian shambles” the wives and children of “the brave soldiers whose disciplined valour had saved the British empire in the East,” we little imagined that our forebodings would be so soon and so terribly justified. We then pointed out the fallacy of the expectation that European children could be “transplanted with impunity to that deadly clime,” and we implored the Indian Government to “take care that the land be not polluted with the blood of the innocent and the fierce anguish of bereaved husbands and fathers.” On one point, indeed, we might have spared our anxiety. Our apprehension lest the graveyards of India should be crowded with the lifeless forms of European children was so far exaggerated that we had not taken sufficiently into account the decimation of the numbers during the outward voyage. The mortality on board ship was truly horrible, and all the more distressing because it might have been greatly diminished if any attention had been paid to either science or common sense. This is clearly proved from Dr. Grieson's report on the three floating pest-houses which arrived at Kurrachee:—

“Of the children on board these three ships 93 died, and of these 93 deaths, there were 43 of 1 year's age, 34 of 2 years' age, and 16 of 3 years of age and upwards. Under 3 years of age there died 77, over 3 years of age, 16. The explanation of this fact I prefer to give in the words of another. ‘Man is everywhere exposed to agencies which act injuriously upon his body, disturb the actions of its economy, and ultimately extinguish life. All these noxious agencies may be termed causes of mortality. On the other hand, in the constitution of the body are inherent conservative powers which resist the influence of the causes of mortality. The actual mortality at all times will of course be according to the relative strength of these destructive agencies, and the relative weakness of these conservative powers. Such states become tests, often exceedingly delicate, of the pressure and power of the destructive agencies to which the body is exposed, and such are the states of infancy and sickness. During the prevalence of these states, in which the conservative powers of the body are weak, life is destroyed by causes, which do not prove mortal in other conditions of the system.’

“Accordingly, 77 children died under 3 years of age, 16 over 3 years, and three women only. The vitiated air of the ships is the one cause common alike in fine and foul weather, in heat or cold, to all the ships, and uniform in all, in exhausting power, depressing life, and through the irritability thus induced determining, according to individual peculiarities, at times fever, at times affections of the chest, at times diseases of the bowels, marked by peculiar fatality; and this, in my belief, is what has made this enterprise a memorable failure, and these ships pest-houses.”

* Allen's Indian Mail, Oct. 23, 1859.

The chief cause of the mortality on board these ships seems, indeed, to have been the want of respirable air. On an average each individual was allowed only 80 cubic feet, though an adult cannot live twenty-four hours in 300 cubic feet of air without the access of fresh supplies of oxygen. Something, no doubt, was done by artificial means of ventilation, but to a very insufficient extent. According to the official computation, two children under 12 years of age are reckoned as one statute adult, which, as Dr. Grierson remarks, would be all very well if children were bales of goods, and superficial space were alone to be taken into account. But children are of a more delicate organisation than adults, and require a larger proportionate supply of fresh air, without which they sicken and die. Grown men, indeed, can be conveyed to India on the same allowance of cubic space which proved fatal to these poor infants. Between November, 1857, and March, 1858, there were taken from England to Kurrachee and Bombay 8,975 officers and privates, 196 women, and 177 children, and out of the whole of that number there occurred only eight deaths from sickness. The reason for the difference of result in the two cases is simple enough:—

"Troops are closely stowed when below, but never more than two-thirds of the number embarked are below at once, and by day all are on deck. All are healthy and strong who go on board, able to spring on deck when they feel uneasy from foul air, and find excitement and pleasure in scenes and things that are terrible to helpless women. To enforce the rule of being on deck in respect to women and children, must often be grievous and alarming to them, and by night all must be below. Sickness also compels the sufferers to be below. These differences are most important, and are strongly illustrated by the fact, that in the troop ships spoken of women and children, accompanied by husbands and fathers, came out safely; whereas, had they been put in a ship by themselves, suffering and deaths amongst the children would have been the consequence, just as they ensued in the same course adopted with respect to the ships under consideration."

Had there been more men on board the sick would have been better tended, and the women, also, would have been more tractable. The latter were possibly not a little troublesome, and must often have sorely tried the patience of both surgeon and skipper. In one ship their irregularities appear to have been punished with excessive severity. Their rations were stopped, even at dinner, and some of them placed in irons; and in one case "a woman was released after four hours' confinement, because, being pregnant, it was not thought desirable to exact the full term." It is very clear that this was not the way to preserve the health of either the women or the children.

"The class of passengers," says Dr. Grierson, "was altogether peculiar. Women perhaps never at sea before, many with children, and without the help and counsel of their husbands, were suddenly cast on their own resources on board ship. There regularity, order, and punctuality, are essential to comfort and well-being, and the struggle to maintain them, amongst mothers unaided and burdened with many cares and duties, and the bitterness of failure, with many a harsh reproach from rude men, and unfeeling companions, must have engendered much exhaustion of body, and many a moment of deeply-felt anguish. And these were the women on whom in circumstances like these devolved the attention demanded by the healthy children, and the care of the sick. Constables and sub-matrons there were, it is true; but of these I make little account. Few women make good nurses, and of these, chosen promiscuously perhaps, not one is good. To blame women thus helpless and burdened, because they did not wait on the surgeon for a written order for some medical comfort to be prepared by the cook, because they did not wait till it was prepared, or return for it at the precise period when it was ready, to blame them for their omission, and because they chose rather to give their children what food they got for themselves, must have been felt by many to be mockery, or at least an attempt to enforce on them what was unnatural in the long abandonment of a sick child, and from the time demanded, impossible. The sick children, therefore, I consider, were not sufficiently attended to."

On board the Dudbrook the majority of fatal cases arose from measles, directly or indirectly. There were, in all, 45 deaths: 13 from fever, 8 from fever following on measles, 11 from measles, 7 from dysentery and 5 from croup—both engendered by measles—and 1 from phthisis. But how came measles to be on board? In the very outset, there was gross negligence in that respect. "A child was observed with measles, sent to hospital, and, after eight days, taken on board ship." What wonder, then, if a few days later there appears in the surgeon's journal the significant entry, "Measles throughout the ship"? "To have prevented the importation of measles into the ship"—we again quote Dr. Grierson's report—"the passengers should have been kept isolated in the depot for a fortnight before embarkation, and every case detected should have been expelled from the depot." This was not done, and the consequences were truly deplorable. And it must not be supposed that the three ships to which we have referred were exceptionally bad in any respect. The same story may be told of all—a fitting pendant to the case of the homeward-bound Great Tasmania. But what a slur is this upon the science, humanity, and administrative ability of the British people! Can we not even send out 146 children to India without slaughtering 44 of them on the way, as if to propitiate the angry demons of the ocean? Or is it to be regarded as a law that our successes are accidental, and that only our blunders and mismanagement are the result of deliberate calculation?

CORRESPONDENCE.

WILL THE PEOPLE OF INDIA BEAR AN INCOME-TAX, OR WILL THEY AVOID IT BY PASSIVE RESISTANCE?—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—All the ancient Hindoo taxes, as we have seen, bore the semblance of direct income-taxes, levied only on persons engaged in the improvement of their fortunes. They did not fall on those who inherited wealth and who did not employ it in accumulation; but in these times, when money is put out to interest in public or private well-known securities, it is just that the owners should be made to contribute to the support of the State and to the general security of life and property. There will be considerable difficulty in ascertaining and in enforcing the payments from those placing their money in private banks, but the holders of public securities cannot escape.

The imposition of new taxes is always matter of discontent. The people of India have, however, for ages been accustomed to submit to new taxes, which, provided they do not affect large bodies, are borne with tolerable patience; but when a new tax embraces whole communities, strenuous efforts under the form of peaceful agitation or resistance are not unfrequently made, with success, to resist payment. The Mahomedans at one time imposed a poll-tax on all subjugated Hindoos, which was relinquished by the Mogul Emperors, and renewed only by Aurungzib; who, inflated by the vastness of his power, the magnitude of his dominions, and the support of an enormous army, believed he was able to carry into effect any political measure. He assumed the character of a zealous Mahomedan, and ventured to re-enact the poll-tax on his Hindoo subjects. A strong hostile feeling against the Mahomedan rule sprang up, and in less than a quarter of a century after the death of Aurungzib his dynasty received a death-blow from the Mahratta Hindoos from which it never recovered.

In stating what has been the legitimate mode of raising the Indian revenue, I do not intend to imply that all the Governments of our predecessors acted as Hindoos in conformity with the statute laws of Menu, or as Mahomedans in following the statutes of Abdul Hanif, and other writers, for it is notorious that for the most part the princes left the realisation of their revenue to the ministers who pandered most to their vices and supplied them most readily with their wants, while they farmed every source of revenue to contractors, who were permitted to exact all they could from the contributors, whose complaints seldom reached the court, and scarcely ever the ears of the sovereign. But with a code of laws open to us, and with the samples of some few exemplary princes and ministers before us, it seems unpardonable that the British Government, after a rule of upwards of a century, should be ignorant of the constitutional resources of the country, and venture on schemes of taxation which, in the shape now proposed, I believe cannot succeed; as in the attempt to carry them out a more serious opposition than a mutiny may follow, when the use of troops may not remove it. A war of ten years' duration in Malabar followed the introduction of a new system of taxation, and terminated in the Government relinquishing its project in 1801. An attempt to usurp the municipal right of local taxation in Benares in 1809-10 produced a peaceful resistance, when upwards of a hundred thousand inhabitants of the city left it and established themselves in a camp in the neighbourhood, abandoning their houses and leaving them empty to pay the tax which the authorities wished to impose. A negotiation with the Government continued for eight weeks. At length a compromise was effected through the mediation of their ex-Rajah, when a general amnesty was granted, and the house-tax was relinquished. In 1830 the whole of the inhabitants of Mysore, amounting to 3,000,000, having lost all confidence in their Sovereign by an act of cruelty and breach of faith, unanimously refused to pay taxes or allow custom duties to be levied, though they committed no direct outrages. They left their houses and lands, and withdrew into the woods. They had no arms but sticks, nor did they attempt to make any resistance to the Government troops, from whom they fled, and sent deputies to the British Government to take possession of the country from a prince in whom they never could again confide. The appeal was attended to. English commissioners were at first appointed, but eventually a sole commissioner was nominated, who, with half-a-dozen European assistants, has governed the country through the agency of well-paid native deputies of provinces for nearly thirty years in prosperity. The Rajah or Prince of the country has (according to an article of treaty made on his accession in 1799), quietly surrendered the administration into the hands of the British Government, receiving a handsome allowance, and resides in his capital, but divested of power. The treaty of 1837 with the present ex-King of Oude was formed on the same basis, but the thirst of territorial possession overcame the political bond. The King of Oude was needlessly dethroned and sent into exile, with a stipend, but without the consent of the people. A new system of revenue administration was introduced by means of European officers; title-deeds of large baronial estates held through successive reigns were called for and disputed, and a total subversion of the existing order of things was attempted to be enforced. This was succeeded by the resistance of the people in mass, who one and all sympathised with the mutinous army of Bengal, with which the revolt was intimately connected. After a sanguinary warfare, which nearly cost us our Indian Empire, it was found expedient to offer a general amnesty, excepting to such only as had stained their hands with the blood of innocent men not in arms; and with the exception of a very few, the old baronial chiefs, with the destruction of their castles and the privation of their warlike weapons, have been reinstated in the rights for which they contended. It is unlikely that any military resistance will be offered to the payment of the taxes which are about to be imposed in India; but if the people consider them oppressive we must expect to have to deal with that sort of passive resistance with which they are familiar, and which proved so successful in Ireland in the abolition of tithes proctors.

Fortunately for England there still remain in India civilians who know how to effect their ends without driving the people to desperation. We have accounts of two different modes of increasing the revenue in the Punjab and in Oude. In the former, increased rates on town duties have been acceded to, and all traders have consented to take out licences; while the agriculturists, already heavily taxed, are subjected to no additional burthens. Thus a great departure from Mr. Wilson's scheme has been carried out in one remote locality, which it is calculated will afford an increase of from twenty-five to thirty lacs of rupees (£250,000 to £300,000 sterling) to the revenue.

In Oude, again, an Income-tax equivalent to 3 per cent. (a medium between the 2 and the 5 per cent. of the Hindoo legislator) has been imposed on the estimated incomes of the non-agricultural community of each town or village. The town duties are altogether abolished: hence there is no reliable data to fix the amount on those carrying on trade. The mode of ascertaining incomes will be inadequate; and when we learn that the average of the 500,000 contributors, in a country which must still abound in wealth, gives only about Rs. 2 (or 4s.) a-head, it may justly be concluded that the richer classes have not been assessed to the full amount of their incomes. Exemptions have been granted to all those who were thought unable to pay so small an amount as 4s. per annum, as well as to day-labourers, village policemen, town and village clerks, inferior village servants, sepoys in Government employ, and domestics generally in the province. The assessment was made in a lump on whole masses following pursuits in common, but on what principle the amount was fixed does not appear. The distribution was left either to committees or agents, but whether selected by themselves or appointed by the Government is unknown. The Commissioner of Oude represents "that the heads of guilds in Lucknow evinced no disposition to render assistance. The preliminary inquiries had to be made by the officers of Government, and the lump assessment had to be made on parishes instead of on trades. These difficulties were, however, overcome; and as soon as the lump assessment was announced parishes set about distributing the amount among themselves, and it was anticipated that further interference will be unnecessary." This mode of assessment, however, does not appear to have given satisfaction, so that a modification of Mr. Wilson's plan has been announced, and with this modification, extensive as it is, I doubt very much if the income-tax on the plan suggested will answer.

I do not quote the eleven new rules for realising the Income-tax in India, as they have appeared elsewhere, but I quote from an authority on the spot, who is a supporter of the scheme. He observes:—"Then the people are informed, further, that the poorer classes will be exempt from Income-tax altogether; that all landholders, except the very wealthy class, will be exempted altogether; that all soldiers, European and native, will be exempted; that all income devoted publicly to the religion of the people will be free from the tax. Thus it is hoped that the military, the landholders, and the religious classes will cease to feel any interest in the matter; and, with these important classes holding aloof, it is difficult to see how the trading classes and the rich, who are being really brought under taxation for the first time, can be strong enough to offer any serious opposition." The problem has yet to be solved whether the modifications adopted and the mode of realising the tax carried out will afford the large amount which the Indian Chancellor of the Exchequer anticipates to relieve his wants, and whether it will be submitted to as patiently as he expects.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 26.

EUROPEAN FORCES (INDIA) BILL.

On the order for going into committee upon the European Forces (India) Bill,

Mr. HENNESSY moved an instruction to the committee that they have power to provide that the half of all vacancies to be filled up in the ranks of the European commissioned officers of her Majesty's line or local troops serving in India be allotted to the sons or orphans of officers, line or local, or the sons or orphans of her Majesty's Civil Service of India, who have served in India, and who shall have passed the prescribed examination, and that the remaining vacancies be filled up by open competition, the successful competitors to pass through one of the Royal Military Colleges.

Mr. S. HERBERT pointed out a variety of objections to the proposal, and its unfair operation, by making so large a proportion of the appointments the exclusive property of the children of civil and military Indian servants.

Colonel SYKES and Mr. MILNES supported the motion, as did

Sir De LACY EVANS, who observed that the proportion of the appointments to be disposed of as suggested was a matter of detail, and need not interfere with the adoption of the instruction.

The motion was likewise supported by Sir E. COLEBROOKE.

Upon a division, it was negatived by 73 to 15.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE moved an instruction to the Committee that they have power to make provision for the future regulation, discipline, and patronage of the European forces serving in India. In the speech with which he introduced the motion, Sir James read very copious extracts from the minute of Mr. Willoughby, and the arguments urged by Sir James Outram and Sir Bartle Frere in favour of maintaining a local force in India, accompanying the citations with a commentary of his own. He dwelt upon the vast amount of patronage the Bill would give to the Government, which, he contended, would be an engine in their hands that might be wielded for any purpose.

Sir DE LACY EVANS, in seconding the motion, after censuring the conduct of the Government in relation to the Bill, proceeded to discuss the grounds assigned for the amalgamation of the Indian army, which, he insisted, were insufficient to justify the measure. On the other hand, he appealed to testimony in support of the policy of continuing a local army.

Sir M. FARQUHAR, after looking carefully through the papers, was compelled to say that the reasons given for the measure of amalgamation were not satisfactory. He denied that the discontent (he would not call it mutiny) of the European local troops was a sufficient reason. The papers, he said, showed the absurdity of the statement that the mutiny was the cause of the Bill.

Mr. ROEBUCK moved the adjournment of the debate.

Lord PALMERSTON observed that the patience of the Government was not exhausted; it must be understood that they attached great importance to this Bill, and were quite prepared to sit till Christmas.

Mr. HORSMAN asked who wanted this Bill, and why the Government, having abandoned other Bills,—though they retained their places,—should desire to force on this. On this most important question of the Indian army the House, he said, had been treated in such a manner that Lord Palmerston's experience of fifty years could not furnish a precedent. No one, he repeated, asked for this Bill, which, without any plan or information, the Government were determined to force upon Parliament, though it sat till Christmas.

Mr. MILNES thought the Government had done a very dangerous thing in proposing such a measure at this period of the session. The House ought to have before it the object of the measure, and what was meant to be done if it was carried.

Mr. J. B. SMITH recommended the withdrawal of the Bill.

After some remarks by Colonel SYKES and Mr. NEWDEGATE, the debate was adjourned till this evening.

The East India Stock Transfer, &c., Bill was read a second time, after a slight opposition, and was committed pro forma.

The Senior Member of Council (India) Bill, the Superannuation Act (1859) Amendment Bill, and the Admiralty Jurisdiction (India) Bill were read a second time.

At eleven o'clock the adjourned debate on going into committee upon the European Forces (India) Bill, and on the instruction moved by Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, was resumed.

Mr. ROEBUCK observed that there were two questions—namely, the effect which the proposed change would have upon the army of India, and upon the Government of England, and he thought in both cases mischief would arise from passing this Bill. He pointed out the essential difference between a local army and an army which would be mere birds of passage, and that all the patronage of the Indian army would be placed in the hands of the Government of England. He entreated the House to employ every means in its power to prevent the dire effects of passing this Bill.

Lord J. RUSSELL said this question was one not only of very great importance, but of the greatest difficulty, and the Cabinet had taken a long time to consider it. When a great empire was to be governed by opinion supported by force, in that military force there should be unity of command, efficiency of discipline, and it should be of a homogeneous character. Now, all military authorities said that every local force was deficient in discipline, and never could obtain the discipline of the Queen's forces. There would, therefore, be a gain in point of discipline by one army, and there would be unity of command. A difficulty would arise from the existence of a local army, but it had been reduced by accident, and it would have been necessary to recreate it. Upon the whole, he had come to the conclusion (contrary to his first impression) that the Queen's army ought to be the only European force in India. The instruction proposed to the Committee would introduce arrangements incompatible with the maintenance of a Queen's army in India. If the House preferred a local force, let it, he said, reject the proposal of the Government, and declare to the army and the civil authorities in India what it meant.

After a few words from Mr. MILNES, in opposition to the Bill, and from Colonel DICKSON in its favour, the motion of Sir J. Elphinstone was negatived.

Mr. M. MILNES moved an instruction to the Committee, that all appointments to military commands in India (the Commands-in-Chief alone excepted), and all staff appointments, whether military or medical, be vested in the Governor-General in Council and other constituted authorities in India. His argument, in supporting the motion, was directed against the Bill.

On the motion of Mr. H. SEYMOUR, the debate was adjourned till Monday.

EUROPEAN FORCES (INDIA) BILL.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR seconded the motion made by Mr. Milnes on Friday, "That it be an instruction to the Committee that they have power to make provision that all appointments to military commands in India (the commands in chief alone excepted), and all staff appointments, whether military, naval, or medical, be vested in the Governor-general in Council and other constituted authorities in India."

Colonel SYKES supported this motion, citing various authorities, and suggested reasons why the appointments in question should be in the hands of the Indian Government, founded, among other grounds, upon the amount of patronage that would be otherwise appropriated by the military authorities at home, and upon the conflict that would arise between the two authorities.

Sir C. WOOD, in reply to the argument that the abolition of a European local force in India would deprive the Governor-general of authority, and transfer the military patronage to the Secretary of State, observed that there was nothing in the Bill to support this objection, and that no change whatever in this respect was intended by the measure.

Mr. RICH recommended the withdrawal of the motion.

After a few remarks by Sir T. COLEBROOKE, the motion was negatived.

Sir J. FERGUSSON moved a resolution, "That it is inexpedient to proceed further with legislation respecting the European troops in India until the whole plan of the Government for the regulation of the military force of that country shall have been submitted to the consideration of Parliament." He insisted that, unless the House knew the means by which it was proposed to carry out this gigantic scheme of centralisation, they ought not to assent to the further progress of the Bill. He reiterated arguments and cited authorities repeatedly urged against the abolition of a local European army, contending that it would impose a very large additional charge upon the revenues of India, and that the retention of a considerable regular force there might impair the resources for national defence at home. The mutiny, the sole reason assigned for the measure, he insisted, had been exaggerated, and was employed as a convenient plea for carrying out certain views.

Upon a division, the resolution was negatived by 88 to 50.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE moved that the House do adjourn, taking the opportunity to correct a misapprehension of a remark that had fallen from him in a former debate, and to condemn the dangerous course upon which, he said, the Government were entering.

The motion was seconded by Sir T. COLEBROOKE.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY protested against the measure, which, he said, settled nothing, while it unsettled a great deal, the House being kept in the dark as to the details of this important question. Whatever the denomination of the European army in India, he remarked, it would be the Queen's army, and the best authorities thought that a portion of that army should be localised in India. The constitutional aspect of the question ought, in his opinion, to lead the House to the same conclusion, and they must not shut their eyes against the question of what would be the cost of dispensing with a localised force, which would be most fearful. Localised regiments, moreover, could best bear the action of the sun.

Lord PALMERSTON urged Sir J. Elphinstone to withdraw his motion, about which, he remarked, Sir H. Willoughby had not spoken one word. If the majority was not to prevail, and if the minority resorted to all the devices which the forms of the House allowed in order to defeat a measure by delay, it would be impossible for Parliament to work out its constitutional functions.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE rose immediately, and desired to withdraw his motion for adjournment; but

Mr. MALINS proceeded to discuss the question whether the Secretary of State for India should not have consulted his Council upon this measure, which was one for the government of India, and all such questions, he argued, Parliament meant to be decided, not by the Cabinet, or the Indian Minister alone, but by the Secretary of State for India with his Council. Yet the Council had not been consulted on this most momentous measure, so that henceforth it would be useless and ridiculous to keep up a Council.

Lord C. HAMILTON was opposed to the further progress of the Bill until the whole scheme of the Government was before the House.

Colonel SYKES again addressed the House at considerable length in opposition to the measure, and in favour of a localised European army.

Mr. VANSITTART advocated the amalgamation of the European army in India, which would sweep away, he said, a vicious system, under which commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the local army were employed in profitable posts apart from their regiments, and would substitute a contented and highly-disciplined force.

Colonel DUNNE wished to know what was to be done with the mass of officers of the local army who were to be transferred to the general army, and what arrangements were made with respect to the proportions to be paid by the Indian revenue and the Imperial Exchequer for retired pay and pensions of officers and men invalided home from India.

Sir C. WOOD gave explanations upon some points mooted in the debate, reserving others for the committee.

Colonel HERBERT noticed various misapprehensions into which the opponents of the measure had fallen. There was nothing in the Bill, he said, that would alter the appropriation of the military patronage in India, and there would be no interference with the prerogative of the Governor-general. He corrected some mistakes of Colonel SYKES, in particular as to the power of the Commander-in-Chief to order home any regiment he pleased from India. It was precisely because he wished to strengthen the hands of the Governor-general that he hoped this Bill would pass.

Major PARKER vindicated the character of the officers of the local army from a disparaging remark which he attributed to Sir C. Wood.

After some observations by Mr. TORRENS,

The SPEAKER put the question whether he should leave the Chair, and no opposition being made, the House went into committee upon the Bill.

Mr. HENLEY moved to insert the following proviso at the end of Clause 1:—"Provided that the same or equal provision made for the sons of persons who have served in India, and the advantages as to pay, pensions, and allowances, privileges, promotion, and otherwise, secured to the military forces of the East India Company by the Act of the 21st and 22nd years of the Queen, cap. 106, shall be maintained in any plan for the reorganisation of the Indian army."

Sir C. WOOD made no objection, and this (the only) clause, thus amended, was agreed to.

The Senior Member of Council (India) Bill, the Superannuation Act (1829) Amendment Bill, and the Admiralty Jurisdiction (India) Bill were read a third time and passed.

In a committee upon East India Stock Transfer, &c. (Payment of Expenses), a resolution was agreed to.

EUPHRATES RAILWAY AND TELEGRAPH.

The present state of affairs in Syria recalls the facts connected with the overthrow of the Indian railway and telegraph projects via the Euphrates. About four years back the Indian Junction Telegraph Company obtained the sanction of the Turkish Government for a telegraph line from Constantinople to Aleppo, and thence to Bagdad and Bussorah, whence, by the Persian Gulf, it would be connected with India by a submarine cable to Kurrachee. The entire project admitted of very rapid and comparatively inexpensive completion, and was looked upon as a valuable preliminary step to the opening up of this route as our easiest and most speedy highway to the East. The capital was subscribed under the most unequivocal assurances of support from the English Cabinet, and the shareholders confidently commenced the requisite outlay. It was thought that in about a year perfect telegraphic communication with India might thus be obtained, and one great advantage connected with the scheme consisted in the circumstance that every step of it that might be completed from month to month would, meanwhile, be of service. Just at that moment, however, the Emperor of the French paid a visit to Osborne. The Turkish Government suddenly refused to fulfil their pledge to grant a concession, and the company, at the same time, found that the English Government, which had previously stimulated them to action and expenditure, and which had even in a Treasury minute recorded its sense that it would be highly improper to allow the Porte to break faith in the matter, were determined to withdraw all support. The entire occurrence seemed inexplicable, but the solution was afterwards declared to lie in the fact that the Emperor Napoleon had insisted that this scheme should be sacrificed, or that otherwise the Suez Canal affair should be made a cause of disagreement between the two nations. The company, therefore, which had previously been in high estimation in the Stock Exchange, suddenly found its operations brought to a close with the total loss of all the expenditure thus far incurred. The shareholders, however, submitted, mainly from a feeling that, although nothing could justify the manner in which they had been left to their pecuniary loss without explanation or compensation, the policy which had dictated the change might have been wise and unavoidable. They will probably continue to entertain the same impression, but a recollection of the general circumstances of the case will nevertheless suggest inferences that the present outbreak is not merely from a wild or accidental impulse, but may have received indirectly no small preparation from those who are about to show such extraordinary force in putting it down. If during the past few years a telegraph line had been in operation, it would not only have increased the influence of the English among the various tribes and promoted a knowledge of their condition and requirements, but would have furnished means of communication which, like the wire from Delhi to Calcutta at the commencement of the Sepoy mutiny, might have saved the several provinces from much of their impending danger.—Times.

BOOKS.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No.

DXXXVIII. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

The current number of this justly popular magazine contains two articles of special interest for Anglo-Indian readers. The one is evidently from the pen of an eyewitness and sharer of the exploits of General Michel's column in pursuit of Tantia Topee. Though somewhat deficient in graphic power, it is a really valuable contribution to the mass of materials which will enable some future historian to compile a complete and authentic narrative of the Sepoy revolt. Now for the first time the British public is placed in a position to estimate aright the wonderful endurance and activity of the various columns and detachments engaged in hunting down that genuine type of a Mahratta marauder. The extraordinary distances traversed by some of the pursuing bands for days together are on a par with the most famous marches on record, and prove, what French military writers are fond of forgetting, that British soldiers are as superior to all others in persistence and agility as in solidity of formation and coolness under fire.

The second paper is devoted to a serious consideration of the present "Transition-State of our Indian Empire." It is a masterly review of "the situation," and clearly indicates the dangers that threaten the permanence, or at least the prosperity, of our eastern rule. After a lucid recapitulation of the chief objections to the abolition of the local European army, the writer proceeds to comment on the proposed—but now happily deferred—scheme for throwing open to public competition in India those "offices which have hitherto been held exclusively by men who have graduated in the covenanted civil service."

"A man desiring to hold a commissionership or a judgeship in India will, after the passing of this Bill, no longer be compelled to waste his youth in the solitudes of India; he may try his luck first of all in England; may enter a profession, and failing at home, betake himself to India; or having spent his patrimony in genteel society at home, he may exchange the clubs of St. James's for the Duffar Khanas of Calcutta, and go out to recruit his fallen fortunes and his exhausted social energies in some comfortable berth at the presidency. There will be no longer any necessity to climb the ladder of fortune step by step. A man may enter the service of the Indian Government at fifty, and pocket at once his 5,000 rupees a month. . . . There will henceforth be nothing to prevent a man from following in the wake of a Governor General to India, and after acquiring a slight smattering of the languages, dropping easily into an appointment which, under the old system, it would have taken twenty years of laborious service to obtain."

This is certainly not a pleasant prospect, except for those who are likely to benefit by the removal of restrictions to favouritism and jobbery. It is not even enough that those who obtain these appointments should be men of fair ability, for, as the Reviewer justly remarks, "fitness is of different kinds."

"There may be a technical fitness for a particular office, against which nothing can be said; there may be character and acquirements more than respectable, in the face of which it would be impossible to lodge a protest; and yet there may be a something, and an essential something, wanting after all. It is easy to say what it is. It is a knowledge of native character and a regard for native feelings not to be learnt from all the books that were ever written. A man may be learned in the laws and the languages of the country, and yet be wholly incompetent to transact public business with advantage to people of that country. A good lawyer, fresh from the English courts, or even from practice at an Indian presidency, may be all abroad in the rough-and-ready work of Mofussil justice; the most expert diplomatist from Vienna or Berlin would be stranded at the durbars of Scindiah or the Nizam. To do well in such situations men must be saturated with Orientalism. To understand things aright, whether in the line of justice or of diplomacy, you must look at them through a glass of Orientalism; and that is only obtainable by men who are content to purchase it by years of training on the scene of action, and of intercourse with the actors themselves."

This is undeniably true, and the evil is likely to become more serious whenever it shall please Ministers to dispense with the services of the Council of India. Already it is sufficiently clear that the Council is but the shadow of a name, and that "the game now lies between the Minister in England and the Viceroy in India." Another Parliamentary session will scarcely close without a Bill being brought in and carried through an empty and apathetic House, for the removal of the last barrier between India and the intrigues of party.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 6 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the
MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.
APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STA-
TICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS
with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus,
with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr.
YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess
a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact: but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions, written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to man and horse."—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

TREADING closely on the heels of its tardy predecessor, the Calcutta Mail of the 5th of July has arrived true to its time. The news it brings is so far satisfactory that it is unseasoned by any sort of disaster. The Anglo-Indian journals, however, are full of indignant declamation on the subject of the Arms Bill, which appears to have an anomalous tendency to place arms in the hands of the natives, and to take them out of those of the Europeans. Mr. Wilson's warm support of this ill-judged measure has considerably shaken his previous popularity, and both his staunch adherents, the Englishman and the Hurkaru, are astonished to find that he is only human after all, and liable to err, like any other mortal. A numerous and influential meeting was held in the Town-hall of Calcutta on the 27th June, to protest against a Bill so insulting to Europeans, at which language was used decidedly emphatic, if not always strictly polite. Mr. Harington, one of the most zealous supporters of the measure, is said to have proved his sincerity by advertising his gun and revolver for sale. In the present state of the finances he would have exhibited a more intelligent and practical patriotism by magnanimously paying his rupee or a licence to retain them.

As an illustration of the hap-hazard sort of Government that is now in vogue in India, we may mention that Sir Barnes Peacock has declared the taxes lately introduced into Oude, the Punjab, and other non-regulation provinces, to be altogether illegal—the Governor-general in Council alone having power to enact laws and regulations and to impose new taxes. A Bill of Indemnity will therefore be necessary to cover the empirical administration of the miniature autocrats who have been governing the country as it seemed good in their own eyes.

The Indigo Commission has closed its proceedings in Calcutta, but was prevented from removing at once to Kishnaghur, as proposed, in consequence of the sudden illness of the president, Mr. Seton Carr.

The Income-tax Bill has passed through the committee of the whole Council. Its action is not to be retrospective, and the one per cent. for municipal purposes is to be expended exclusively on reproductive public works, under the control and supervision of the Supreme Government.

Sir Henry Ward arrived at the seat of his new duties on the 5th July, and took the oaths of Office on the same day. His Excellency has appointed Mr. Swinburne Ward to be his private secretary, and Major Tupper to be his military secretary. Both these gentlemen went with him from Ceylon. Captains Charles Cavendish Fitzroy and Glover have been retained in their positions as aides-de-camp.

The only tidings from China of general interest relate to the safe arrival at Hong Kong of their Excellencies the French and English plenipotentiaries. The combined expedition had proceeded to Talienwan, about 20 miles from Taku.

BENGAL.

THE ARMS ACT AND EQUAL LEGISLATION.

The basis of the prosperity and peace which immediately followed our annexation of the Punjab was the thorough disarming of the people. The success was so evident that a dim idea long continued to flit through the official mind that all India would be benefited were the same measure carried out in the regulation provinces. But the mutinies alone, the horrors of which an Arms Act would have mitigated, forced the idea into shape, and Mr. Dorin was the legislator who late in 1857 brought it to the birth. The Punjab Act, of course, excluded British European subjects. A few men, taking their lives in their hands, dwelt in the midst of the most warlike enemies we had met, from whose jaws the blood of battle had not yet been licked. It would have been a mad policy to invite assassination in deference to the untrue dogma of "equal legislation." But at a time when Europeans were still more exposed to murder, when they were hunted for their lives, a knot of old men sitting in Calcutta decreed that Englishmen and women whose extermination had been resolved on, must pay for a license before they could use arms in self-defence. To add to the grotesqueness of this, the North West, the scene of massacre, was the only part of India where Europeans were not exempt.

Mr. Dorin's Bill was passed for two years, amid the muffled protests of a press that was gagged. Last August it was again renewed, not permanently, because Government declined at that time to incur the odium of perpetuating a measure which so affected Europeans. Once more Mr. Harington has brought it forward, and with that self-satisfaction which characterises him, claims the support of Council in consideration of the many improvements he has introduced. Such an Act could not have been committed to worthier hands than his, whose deity is the Regulations, whose highest ideal is a Sudder Judge, and who has a virtuous hatred of class legislation, unless when he can exempt his own class from taxation and discourage the spread of the much-dreaded interloper. We allow the improvements on the old Act if Europeans are to be led as sheep to the shambles. The wearing abroad, not the mere possession of arms, is forbidden. No general search for weapons, and no written notice of their possession is now required. In cases of their known concealment for any unlawful purpose, a search can be conducted only by the magistrate in person, or by a joint or deputy magistrate, or by a European assistant. Oppression is thus avoided. To conciliate Europeans under the gross indignity they are called upon to suffer, the provisions of the Act are in fact weakened so as to be insufficient in a crisis.

Now what is the object of the Act? Thoroughly to disarm the natives of British India. Short of injustice or oppression the measures proposed for this end cannot be too stringent. In their just execution lies the future safety of the empire, that is, all chance of the civilization of millions of souls. The object is not to disarm Europeans because they are dangerous to the public peace. Even the most crack-brained of Indian legislators do not assert that, further than that "loafers" abound in the presidency towns, men who are given to kicking and using sticks, but who can never afford or never keep firearms. The object is solely to disarm the natives. But to soothe them, to remove from their minds all distrust of our actions, to prove the glory of a dogma which is true only of equals, that class-legislation is an evil, Europeans must be included. And to induce Europeans to submit to the yoke, the very severe provisions which are necessary for such natives as are treasonable, are modified till they become quite ineffectual. A mongrel Bill is the result, and in support of it even Mr. Wilson, to catch native applause, we presume, talks twaddle which he cannot believe about "large and liberal views." The speakers at the large meeting of European gentlemen held in the Calcutta Town Hall, 27th June, may be pardoned occasional extravagance, when protesting against a proposal abstractly more unjust than any Black Act, in itself more insulting to our nation and ruinous of our prestige.

The position we take is this. Creed and race and intellect and rank and wealth are given by God to one and denied to another. The legislation that would ignore them is false and must end in ruin. They are ignored in America, and corrupt democrats alone govern its millions. They were ignored in New Zealand where, in spite of their protestations to the contrary, the semi-Christian savages were asked to elect members of Parliament and were told to complain in cases of wrong, not to their father, the Governor, but in a "constitutional" way. Far more civilized than the Maori, the natives of India will not require so many generations to fit them for a share in a constitutional government. We anticipate with pleasure their appearance with outside Europeans in the Legislative Council before many months elapse. We think where they are employed by Government they are underpaid, and that Government in its subservience to their superstitions is delaying the day of their enlightenment by a century. We rejoice in the new policy, which gives to the landholder, so long as he is just, the rights of a feudal lord, on his own estates. We applaud the princely recognition of loyal services in a terrible crisis by the representative of the Queen. We deplore the mockery of justice doled out to the masses by the Regulation Courts. We condemn the insouciance which creates crime by inability in the police to detect it, or by the refusal of the highest courts in the Mofussil to punish it. We long for the time when the abolition of caste will allow European and native to exercise on each other those reciprocal influences which are the salt of civilisation. But where any question is raised in which the safety and honour of the empire are involved, as in the present case, we would for their own sake teach the natives of India that "equal legislation" is as impossible as it would prove disastrous. If a fixed limit constitutes the chief difficulty of exemption, let it be that of creed. Let all Christians, whether Europeans, Americans, East Indians, or natives, be allowed to wear arms. Christianity is in India synonymous with loyalty. —Friend of India.

INCREASE OF SALARIES TO NATIVE OFFICIALS.

For years the inadequate pay of the lower police officials was the stock subject of complaint with every European in the mofussil who had a grievance. The dewan, or mohurrir of a thannah, who was frequently the equal in talent of the darogah, received about the pay of a sircar, collecting the petty dues of a Calcutta tradesman. The jemadar, or third officer, often better qualified to handle a club than a pen, received, by a refinement of value, eight annas more than the mohurrir, who was supposed competent to "cook" reports, to return succinct answers to perwanas, and to show conclusively that a body found suspended to a tree was that of a man who had committed suicide, and not that of an intriguer who had been pounded to death by the indignant relatives of a frail widow. The burkundazes received less than the salary of a syce or a water-carrier. It was useless, men said, to talk of first grade darogahs, or to elevate the best of this class into deputy magistrates, while the salaries of the remainder of the police were ludicrously inadequate to their position, temptations, and influence. All this has been altered by the late increase in the pay of the executive establishments. The burkundazes are divided into three grades, receiving Rs. 4, 5, and 6 respectively. The jemadar is raised to independence on Rs. 15 or 20 a month. The dewanji is made happy on Rs. 30 and even 40 and is designated as naib, or deputy, to the darogah; an appellation which, we suspect, the villagers will be slow to adopt. But the cry now comes, not from the ill-paid and disheartened official, but from the resident in the mofussil who sees in the enhanced pay and position, merely an increased temptation to extort more money. Five rupees would have satisfied a man who had not wherewithal to pay the hire of a palki; ten times that sum is not sufficient to meet the cravings of an official whom the State has just thought fit to promote to great honour. But were every letter from the mofussil to contain a complaint of this sort, and every complaint a vital truth, this would form no reason why the Government should link the power of a despot to the pay of a head bearer. It was to get rid of the glaring inequality between duty and remuneration, to take from the native official one main excuse for corruption, to invite conscientious and educated individuals to enter the executive department, that the State consented to the disbursement of more than three lakhs of rupees a-year. Nobody imagines that the mohurrir of a police station would rise, on the morning after his promotion, like Virgil's snake, with the slough of corruption entirely stripped off him, and shining in all the purity of an immaculate official. But we may depend on it that gross dereliction of duty will be less frequent, that the rank and emolument of office will be more highly prized, and that the reports in cases of startling crimes or violent illegalities will be more in accordance with the naked truth. The choicest fruits, the freshest milk, the most comfortable house in the village, will still be at the disposal of the darogah or his deputy, who is sent to report on the violated boundary, the closed path, the broken or damaged heads, and the suspicious death. The official in such cases will, probably, meet with no worse treatment than the Times' correspondent in Northern Italy, or than the compiler of Murray's Handbooks all over the Continent. But active magistrates will have some hopes of getting at what the natives call fourteen annas of the reality, instead of a miserable pittance of six or eight annas; and the fearful stories of violence practised in order to extort confessions will no longer swell our annual reports. It is even argued by some audacious Commissioners that such things as just and impartial darogahs do actually now exist in Lower Bengal; and we have ourselves seen cases where the most potent temptations failed to make the police officer deviate a hair's breadth from his duty. We have not long ago known a Brahmin, accused of procuring the murder of a low caste man who had sullied the honour of the high caste family, apprehended, arraigned, and convicted, through the instrumentality of a darogah proof against money, proof against entreaties, proof against all those considerations of respect for religion, rank, and person, which, in the East, are sometimes as irresistible as the tinkle of rupees. Give us, then, ten or fifteen years during which solid pay shall be backed up by strict supervision and reasonable support, and we may hope to hear some mention of clean-handed burkundazes and virtuous jemadars.

But it is not enough for the Government to deprive the police of the plea that their salaries are incommensurate with their responsibilities. If higher wages are demanded by domestic servants, if the rise in all articles of consumption, in the price of labour, in the hire of the means of transport, is to be permanent; if more liberal remuneration is to be given to the producer of one of the great sources of our revenue, a corresponding liberality must be shown to ill-paid servants in other departments of the public service. We have heard something of an amended code of civil procedure which has already made it possible for a plaintiff to get a decree in three, instead of in six months. But it is monstrous to allow this code to be studied and, perhaps, expounded by the head officers of a civil court who are paid the wages of a khidmutgar. The bulk of civil suits is decided in the courts of the moonsiffs, and with a simplified code and the present improving class of native judges, we may look to an increase in the number of such suits. But we shall look in vain for confidence in the minds of the humbler class of suitors while they have to resort to a tribunal where the sarishtadar receives seven rupees, and the native clerk, who records the evidence, 3-8 a-month. It is true that to natives resident in the vicinity of their office, the above forms a comfortable addition to the family income. A man with 25 beegahs of rent-free land, and a few rupees of salary is better off, obviously, than the man who has the same land and no pay. He is what the schoolboy with pocket-money is to the schoolboy without. But if Government wishes to raise the character of the Courts, to work thoroughly its amended codes, to command higher talent, superior energy, more resolute indifference to perquisites and fees, and to escape the inextinguishable laughter which such revelations as the above must excite, it will follow up the increase to the pay of the police by a similar increase to the pay of the ministerial officers of the Lower Civil Courts. This will be the first step towards the stifling of the outcry as to those "sinks of iniquity" which it is our duty to "sweep away."—Friend of India.

COLONEL LUMSDEN.

In the remarks which we made some short time since on the occasion of General Neville Chamberlain's brilliant campaign against the Wuzerees, we recommended the public to hesitate before they pronounced any opinion adverse to that distinguished officer, Colonel Lumsden, on the subject of the surprise of his camp alluded to in the telegram. We took occasion at the same time to express our opinion as to the great qualities which Colonel Lumsden had displayed whenever opportunity offered. The more detailed accounts we have now received regarding that "surprise" not only dissipate any impression that might have prevailed amongst those whose habit it is to judge only by the result, as to want of precaution on the part of Colonel Lumsden, but place his character as a general and a soldier in a higher light than before. Hitherto, we have been able only to judge from the report of the telegram, but with written accounts from the scene of action before us, it is impossible to withhold our admiration of a gallantry and a presence of mind never surpassed, on an occasion, the like of which has been rarely witnessed in war. It appears that the whole force under General Chamberlain had been encamped at "Pullooseen" in the Wuzeree hills; hearing, however, that the enemy had been seen in some neighbouring villages, the General marched with the greater part of the little army to punish them, leaving Colonel Lumsden with the smaller portion to protect the camp and the stores. It was almost impossible to procure any information as to the movements of the enemy; certainly none that could be depended upon. The tribe against whom our movements were being made, had resolved to fight it out, and never having tried conclusions with us before, they felt pretty confident of success. Hence, none amongst them felt inclined to turn traitor, or to give the smallest particle of information that might tend to make us acquainted with their movements. It is true there was a political agent in the camp expressly charged to get information, but it need not be wondered at that under such circumstances he felt his occupation gone. Hence it was, that Lumsden, left to his own resources and charged to keep "Pullooseen," had principally to rely upon his own brave heart, a presence of mind unsurpassed, and the troops whom he knew he could wield to any purpose. What man could do, he did. He closed in his camp, made it more compact, placed outlying and inlying pickets, and saw that there was nothing wanting to enable him to move anywhere at the shortest notice.

But whilst he was taking every precaution against all imaginable evils, though apprehending none, the enemy was not idle. Runjode Singh, formerly a jemadar in the police battalion at Dera Ismael Khan, and who, during the events of 1858, had, after an unsuccessful attempt at mutiny, fled into the Mahsood Wuzeree Hills, was the leading spirit of their host. Acquainted with all our ways, he endeavoured to persuade them that if they would only attack our camp, when the Reveille sounded, and the men were engaged in unpitching and packing tents and camp equipage, their victory was certain. To those who hesitated, he pointed out that the main body of the British force had gone to distant villages, leaving a small party only to guard the supplies. He appealed to the bigotry of some, the avarice of others, the patriotism of all, and finally he persuaded three thousand men to follow him on an enterprise which, he felt, must succeed against any ordinary enemy.

Whilst these three thousand followers, fully armed and equipped, were silently crawling to their place of rendezvous just below a ridge in the rear of our camp, our men were on their guard. During the night the wakeful pickets, on the sound or fancied sound of an approaching enemy, occasionally fired a few shots. The first of these awoke Lumsden, who dressed and went outside his tent; nothing, however, was visible; no enemy appeared on the horizon; all seemed calm and peaceful. He accordingly retired, but lay ready for action in his clothes. No sooner had the bugles sounded in the morning than a volley was heard from our pickets, followed by a rush of some five hundred men, who, overpowering the first obstacles, seemed to carry all before them. But before this could happen, Lumsden was out of his tent; his glance fell first upon two chieftains standing on the top of the ridge close to him, their forms only distinct from their standing out against the clear sky. In less time than it takes to record the fact, they had both fallen to the deadly aim of Lumsden's rifle, and the men almost immediately afterwards, animated by their leaders' voice, had begun to fall in small knots. The advancing enemy first checked, then attacked, was in less than ten minutes driven out with the loss in killed alone of 132 men, amongst whom Runjode Singh was conspicuous.

Such, stated more briefly than it deserves, was the surprise of Colonel Lumsden's detachment. It has reached us from an entirely disinterested quarter, and we have the assurance of the writer that Colonel Lumsden's behaviour at the very imminent crisis was such as to command the greatest admiration. It has immeasurably enhanced his reputation, always great, in the Punjab. The presence of mind, and ready tact which he showed on the emergency have given birth to an enthusiasm amongst those under his orders which will not soon die away. For ourselves we are content to allow the action to speak for itself, merely expressing our opinion that it was a deed in every respect worthy of one, who was described by Lord Dalhousie to be "as fine a soldier as ever drew a sword."—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.—It is characteristic of the new spirit spreading among even Bengalees that the Compass, a native journal in English, publishes the translation of the National Hymn of Hungary which we (Friend of India) recently reprinted. The editor thinks it necessary to disclaim any treasonable motive. As a sentiment Bengalee loyalty is innocent enough. It is even beneficial. The greater the independence and the more the enlightenment, the less caste, the less Koolinism, the less aping of English vice, the less oppression of the ryots ought there to be.

PUNJAB POLICE.—The new military police, on the system now in force in Oude, has been introduced into the Punjab. The old civil police will be absorbed or dismissed. The new system is in full work in the Lahore and Umritsar divisions. The other commissioners have been warned that it is about to be introduced into their districts. The reduction in the Punjab irregular force will be very large. Both Punjab and Oude police are now subject to the deputy commissioners.

TOM SAYERS AND THE POPE.—A sum of £100, raised by subscription in Calcutta, has been sent to "the Gallant Tom Sayers" through the Editor of Bell's Life. The subscribers do not wish to express any opinion on prize-fighting, but simply their admiration of his "splendid courage and determination." The Roman Catholics of Calcutta are also raising a subscription for the Pope.

SAFFLOWER.—The Hurkaru mentions that the crop of safflower in the Dacca district will be far below the original estimate this season, or only 15,000 maunds. Of this one-half is trash, and the quality of the whole is inferior.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING.—The Governor-general has at last directed a careful inquiry to be made into the working of the official printing departments scattered at present all over Calcutta. Colonel Balfour, C.B., Mr. H. D. Sandeman, Captain Dickens, and Mr. Kellner have been appointed a committee to conduct it, with the view of contrasting the cost of many separate offices with a great central department like that at Madras and Allahabad, and of determining whether there should be only one such office in Calcutta. At present every department has its head printer on Rs. 400 a month, and all compete with each other for workmen. The work is done imperfectly and slowly, and as in the telegraph department the privilege of printing any documents, however long or trifling, is abused.

BANCOORAH, June 24.—The monotonous state of the affairs of this district at present affords no news for communication, no novelty, no curiosity. Even the weather is not here changeable, and if it is, then very partially; slight showers are now and then seen to fall, but they scarcely benefit the people. It is about the end of June, and such scarcity of water has brought on a dreadful increase in the price of all articles. It is reported that measures for clearing away certain tanks of this town for general utility, are to be soon taken by our present magistrate and collector, Mr. Drummond. While acrimonious vituperation and strongest malediction are always poured forth for the police there is no remission in the suffering from the hands of the police agents and extortions inflicted by the mooktears. How strange it is to think, that after such repeated exposures of the conduct of these employes, they are not the least mended. The people now think it is useless to have recourse to justice, and unless they are forced they never do it. I have long been in the mofussil, and thus I am convinced of the various grievances complained of above. The recall of Sir Charles Trevelyan has made the natives quite sure of paying the Income-tax. They were hitherto in a precarious mood as to the success of Mr. Wilson's financial scheme, but they are now quite settled, and there are no more murmurs of discontent.

COTTON.—Last year the export of cotton from all India amounted to 600,000 bales to Europe, and 200,000 to China. The total quantity of cotton grown in India for both native and foreign use is estimated at 2,400,000,000 pounds grown on 24,000,000 of acres. The export amounts to one-tenth of this. The quantity sent out of the country regularly fluctuates with the increase or decrease of price in England.

WASTE LANDS IN BENGAL.—Of waste lands available for European settlers in Bengal there are three millions of acres in Akyab, in Ramree one million, in Sandoway eight thousand, in Kamroop 1,79,000, in Nowgong one million, in Seebasgur one million, in Bancoora 680, in Hooghly 139, Midnapore 3,247, Dinagepore 25,000, Moorshedabad 1,189, besides large tracts in Rungpore and Bogra.

THE NICHOLSON TESTIMONIAL.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says it has been finally determined to erect the Nicholson Testimonial at Margulla in the shape of an obelisk. As a supply of water is much needed by travellers through the pass, an artesian well is to be bored.

THE THAKOORS OF MEYWAR have collected a large force on the frontier of Jeypore. The Jeypore Government has sent out troops to meet them, and prevent them marching through Jeypore.

SIMLA, June 25.—Barnes' Court, late residence of Lord Canning, has been re-let to Sir Hugh Rose who, it is expected, will arrive early next month, unless, indeed, the question of whether the Indian army is to be amalgamated or not should for a time detain His Excellency at the seat of Government. Lady Canning and party were at camp "Kundhare" on the 18th, and expected to be at Mussoorie on the 20th and 21st. A house called "The Castle," has been secured for her ladyship, where she will remain until the start is made for Calcutta. Lord William Hay will return shortly to Simla. Dr. Christison, the officer appointed to vaccinate the natives of these hills, and so alleviate somewhat the curse of small-pox, has been removed; this the Government Gazette will have informed you, but the why and because of this removal, of course is not stated. Two Brahmins, bigoted as most of their class are, objected to Dr. Christison vaccinating the people in the district to which they belonged. That officer, who is a most talented young man, simply requested these men to sit in his tent, and not oppose his operations. The deputy commissioner and assistant commissioner highly approved of his proceeding, yet this act was construed by Mr. Melville into one of torture, and so represented to the Punjab Government, and hence Dr. Christison has been deprived of his appointment. How is it that not one of your numerous correspondents has informed you of the total destruction of that portion of the Ganges canal which passes through Roorkee? I have not even seen it remarked upon by a single public journal. From this total silence it would appear as though means had been taken to keep the circumstance from being bruited abroad. No doubt the destruction of so extensive an undertaking and one which has cost the Government so large an outlay with no equivalent return, casts much discredit on the engineers who planned, superintended, and executed the work. To repair the damage an outlay of nearly a million will have to be made, and this at a time when Mr. Wilson is braving the risk of a general rebellion by laying all classes under contribution in the form of heavy taxes to replenish the exhausted coffers of the State.—Englishman.

THE RAJAH OF PACHETE, having lost all patience, has informed the authorities that he intends prosecuting them in the Supreme Court for false imprisonment.

A MADMAN OR A FOOL.—A body of rebels have taken shelter in Muxoomdingina, near Indore. The Rajah of that place has given them assistance and supplies. The Government of India has called upon him to explain his conduct.

THE KING OF OUDE is still surrounded by several persons who were implicated in the rebellion. The danger of allowing these men to remain, has been notified to the king, and the police authorities of Calcutta have been warned to keep a watchful eye over the movements of these men, who are well known to Government.

JYNTEEA.—From a letter lately received from Jynteea we learn that a large number of armed men gathered in that place to oppose Capt. Rowlatt, who had proceeded with a force to punish the Kookees and Jynteeahs, who had made a foray into the country. A collision took place, in which twelve of the enemy were killed and many wounded, without a single casualty amongst Capt. Rowlatt's men.

ENFACED PROMISSORY NOTES.—Through the exertions of the Chamber of Commerce, Government has published a statement of the amount of promissory notes enfaced for payment of interest in London up to the 1st of May last:—

A REBEL CHIEF.—We hear from Rajpootana that one of the chiefs of Boondie who found refuge in Jeypore has given much trouble by his excesses; he has collected forces, and set the authority of the Rajah of Jeypore at defiance. The chief is the Thakoor of Zetra, in Haraotee. The Rajah of Jeypore has warned the village zemindars of the danger of giving this man shelter, and has threatened all with severe punishment if they help him with supplies or refuse to give information regarding him.

CANPORE, June 25.—The utmost secrecy prevails at this station about the rebels being in force about eighty miles from this, on the other side Calpee, and one regiment has marched from hence, and another held in readiness. I hear there are about four thousand banded together, and they have plundered several villages. All is quiet at this station, but weather dreadful, with hot winds night and day, and no rain.

SHAHPOORA.—The small State of Shahpoora, in Ajmeer, is said to be very badly managed at present by the young chief, and the attention of Government has been called to its affairs by the Agent. The Lieutenant-governor of Agra has instructed the Agent to endeavour, by advice and kindness, to lead the young man to understand the interests of his country and his own, and to warn him of the serious consequences of neglecting his counsel. The Government of India can never permit a small State, surrounded by our own territories, to be an annoyance and disgrace, by its misgovernment, to the English.

NATIVE INSOLENCE.—The Delhi correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle states that the Rev. Mr. Broadway was preaching at the Calcutta Gate of the city, when a sepy of the police corps, at the instigation of some Mussulman bystanders, rudely interrupted him. Mr. Broadway desired the man not to interfere, when he was assaulted by him, the sepy tearing off the reverend gentleman's coat, while pushing him towards the havidar at the gate. The sepy was fined ten rupees for the assault in the Assistant Commissioner's Court.

GORUCKPORE, June 21.—Just when we thought we had escaped the severity of the season its worst effects have burst upon us with alarming violence. Cholera is doing sad work among us. The city has suffered much, and now our troops are attacked. Five poor fellows have been carried off during the last twenty-four hours. The attack and progress are most severe. The heat is beyond anything we have before known. Night and day equally refuse the sufferer rest. We are panting for rain. There is one good sign; the river has risen three feet within the last four days. The Bengalees are celebrating their kali poojah, and, with characteristic self-denial, instead of pleasing themselves with a poojah at their own expense, they have allowed our Hindoos to subscribe to it, and it is said they have a thousand rupees in hand. They have kindly promised that the poojah shall check the cholera.

KRISHNAGHUR, June 25.—Weather has been fine, but heavy rain fell last night, and it threatens more. Early sown plant looks beautiful, but if we get much rain the late sowings will be choked in jungle; my October is a very fair crop.

LAHORE, June 12.—Rifle practice is the order of three days in the week. I wish I could hear of clubs being formed at other stations in the Punjab, but there is no movement. Perhaps the weather has something to do with it. It is certainly hot enough and steamy enough, here at least, to be pleaded as some excuse for the want of the requisite energy. The westerly winds have abandoned us, and the prevalence of easterly currents betokens an early and violent setting-in of the rains. Some people have objected to the quantity of wheat grown in the Punjab. There may certainly be too much of even a good thing, but were it not for that very quantity this year, the people of the North-west would be reduced to famine prices. Thousands of maunds cross the Sutlej for Delhi and further down, and the consequence is that although the crop of the season 1859-60 was very little below an average even in the great wheat-producing districts of Goordaspore and Sealkote, that staple is now selling in our markets at ten and twelve seers less per rupee than this time last year, when the crop was much below the average. I have told you that I consider the people to be quietly settling down under the infliction of the new taxes. They will be paid with a murmur, perhaps, but so low that it will hardly be perceptible. So long as an Asiatic can bear an infliction of the kind he will. It is only when it exceeds the bounds of endurance that he turns. The dealers, buncas, mahajuns, &c., are those who will feel it least. They will, in part, reduce their more expensive establishments, and, in part, throw the burden on the community generally, by a slightly enhanced rate of their wares. The working agriculturist, who is exempted altogether, will be able to furnish his grain at the rate that has ordinarily prevailed, and as his is the most numerous class in the country, you may rely on all being accomplished without any outward visible sign of discontent. I would recommend the Council passing the Act as quickly as possible; delays are dangerous. The measure is such a novelty in India that it cannot by any possibility arrive at perfection by any further delay. There must be flaws that will require tinkering, and it matters little whether the number be one or two, or more or less. The class who will be most hardly dealt with in their own opinion, are those who have hitherto done nothing for the State, and for whom the State has usually done a great deal too much. I mean those nobles and Jagheerdars who have lately been raised to the rank and dignity of deputy and assistant-commissioners, with leave and licence to oppress the people within given limits.—Englishman.

PENNY WISE, POUND FOOLISH.—The economy which makes its authors ridiculous, by requiring that the paper sweepings of the public offices be collected, reduced to pulp, and sold, has extended to the army. Half a page of general orders is devoted to directions for holding committees of survey on old hospital clothing. The articles are to be presented in a washed state, to be counted over, to be entered in elaborate tabular statements, to be reduced by a machine to rags in the presence of the committee, to be then weighed and "carefully" locked up until required for paper. Finally, "a copy of the report is to be forwarded to the Commissary-general, and another to the Principal Inspector-general of Hospitals in Bengal." Routine never had a more delightful duty; economy never gained such a triumph. Meanwhile the army of chuprasees exists undiminished, the time of the State is wasted by fifty-two native holidays a year, and the native army is kept up at a dangerous strength.

BURMAH.—At Rangoon some members of the mercantile community had commenced an agitation against the stamps which have lately been introduced in the civil cases instituted in the courts. From Mandalay, the new capital of the King of Burmah, the following intelligence had been received:—In the upper provinces, the yield from the rice crops, has turned out very satisfactory. Little or no rice will be needed from the lower country, while the Burmese have a small surplus of wheat and grain, which will probably be imported for sale into Pegu. The cotton trade with China is still in a very dull state, in consequence of hostilities raging between rival parties in the province of Yunnan. In the city all was peace. The King and Court were in excellent health and spirits, and his Majesty continues as friendly as ever to all foreigners who happen to have any business to transact with him. The roads not being macadamised, were becoming worse and worse. Only a few of the principal streets have been covered with bricks. About three miles from the city, and in an easterly direction, a summer palace has been constructed, for the occasional residence of the king. The completion of the new steamer, which is being put together at Rangoon, as the royal yacht for his Majesty, is looked for with considerable interest. The Prince was busy as usual, in the prosecution of his mechanical works.

INDIGO AND OPIUM.—It is an ill wind which blows nobody good. The disturbances in the Indigo districts, and the questions raised by the ryots of Bengal have compelled the Government to examine more carefully into its own affairs. The Government of Bengal has a cultivation conducted on the same principles as indigo planting. In Behar the Government Agent advances to pykars and middlemen, who again advance to the cultivators for the cultivation of the poppy, and the manufacture of opium. The ryots of Behar and Tirhoot have been clamorous for some time for a higher price, to which no attention was paid. Early in the last year they petitioned for an advance of eight annas per seer of opium, but their application was rejected. A few years ago the sum allowed them was reduced from Rs. 3-12 per seer to Rs. 3-4 per seer, the ryots asked for this difference back without success. However, in the beginning of 1860, when the indigo ryots asserted that everything had increased in price except indigo, and that they could not get a fair price from the planter, the comparison this suggested with their own conduct compelled the Government to reconsider the claims of the opium cultivators, and, in March last, a small increase was sanctioned, four annas per seer were doled out to them. The indigo commission, however, having included an inquiry into the Government system of opium cultivation as well as that of indigo, and the increasing agitation, on the whole question of the relations between the capitalist and the cultivator, compelled the Bengal Government to a more liberal course. They have sanctioned four rupees per seer for opium, with an assurance that it is not to be decreased below that rate for at least three years; at the end of two years the subject will be reconsidered, and the rate now granted may be continued for other three years; if in the interim the price should appear from any cause to be inadequate, the Commissioner is desired to bring the same to the notice of Government. Who could have imagined an emule amongst the ryots of Kishnaghar would bring the cultivators of Behar such a windfall, or that Mr. Wilson's estimates of income would be disturbed by it. But so it is, and the additional cost of opium makes a difference of more than a quarter of a million sterling in the estimated income of the country.—Englishman.

THE TEA PLANTERS OF CACHAR have taken steps to improve the position of the coolies they import from Bengal, and to render the labour more attractive. Henceforth each family is to have a hut not less than 144 feet square. Each plantation will be provided with a native doctor and medical stores. Certain fixed rates of pay will be given for certain kinds of work so as to enable the industrious coolie to make eight rupees a month in addition to the rice with which he is supplied. An immigration depot is to be built in the station of Silchar for the reception of the men on arrival. Cachar and Assam are now added to the colonies which draw their labour supply from Bengal or Madras. The Legislative Council should put the inland emigration under the Protector of Emigrants. This would give a confidence to the natives which would make Assam far more attractive than any colony which can be reached only by a long sea voyage. At present, the planters have too often to be content with the refuse of the Mauritius coolies.

GOLD IN THE PUNJAB.—A Government report gives an account of the gold-washing carried on in the hill-streams of Rawul Pindee, Huzara and Attock. After the great floods of 1841 and 1858 gold was very plentiful in the alluvial deposits of the Indus along the low sandy border of the Chuck valley. It seems to be washed down from the north of the Huzara mountain. A native thus describes the washings. "The instruments used are a 'droom' or long sieve, a bowl, and a kirmee (digger) made of iron. For each 'droom' eight men are required. The master gets a double share. Gold is bought by the proprietor from the diggers at Rs. 12 per tola. The lease this year is Rs. 40 per month, whereas last year it was Rs. 150 per month."

A FALSE PROPHECY.—Writing from Dacca on the 12th June, a correspondent of the Hurkaru states that "little slips of paper written in Bengali were industriously circulated all over the town in which a terrific storm and inundation were confidently predicted for that day. Cattle, birds, and men too, if they did not look sharp, were, like the unfortunate 'people of Derby' to be carried away by the flood. The paper wound up with the awful threat that if any one into whose hand a copy fell, did not immediately make seven other copies and distribute them among seven villages, he would be considered as equally guilty with the man who kills a cow or slays a Brahmin. Many of the ignorant and credulous among the natives went to the expense of buying fresh bamboos and other materials to fortify their frail huts against the expected flood. I need not say that the flood never came!"

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.—On a requisition from the home authorities for revising the rules for granting holidays in the mofussil civil courts, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal requested the late Principal of the Sanskrit College to furnish him with a list of the most important Hindoo holidays. The Government of Bengal then submitted a list of holidays to be observed in the mofussil to the Government of India. The Lieutenant-governor proposed that eight days' holidays should be granted during the dusserah vacation instead of a month as was the case before, and that a further leave of about a week be allowed on account of the most important Hindoo festivals. His Honor also observed that an additional vacation of a month should be granted during the winter season, which appears to be essentially necessary to all officers of the civil courts, who are generally natives of distant districts, in order to see their families and homes. The Governor-general in Council however has decided that a vacation of one month and a half will be allowed in a year, one month on account of the dusserah vacation and fifteen days should be granted either in lump or by instalments as the native officers of the civil courts may wish, and at the discretion of their co-nanted heads.

A GHOORKA COLONY.—We (Delhi Gazette) are informed that Colonel Reid, commanding the Sirmoor Rifle Battalion, has persuaded the Government to form a Ghoorka colony in the Dehra Doon, and on such terms and in such a way as to give the greatest possible umbrage and offence to the English settlers who already have estates there, and (which perhaps the Government may think more worth noticing) to the native occupants of the soil.

SAVOYARDS IN INDIA.—Writing from Allahabad on the 9th of June, a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says:—"We have lately witnessed a spectacle perfectly novel in this part of the country—I mean young Italians going about with beautiful plaster of Paris statuary, which they offer for sale at moderate prices. The figures are really beautiful, but, being hollow, are light and extremely fragile. I fear the sellers have not met with sufficient patronage. It seems to be the general opinion that we do not live in times and in a country that would justify us in spending money on house decoration."

VACCINATION IN THE PUNJAB PRESIDENCY.—The Punjab Government has published a statement showing the results of vaccine operations under that Government and its dependencies, during the "vaccine season," extending from October, 1859, to February, 1860. This includes Delhi and Hissar, as well as the kingdom of Runjeet Singh. During these months 77,078 children were vaccinated, and of these 60,555 or nearly 80 per cent. were successful, 11,249 totally failed, and 5,874 were doubtful. December and January seem to be the months in which there were most successful cases, but there is such variation in different districts, that we are inclined to put down a great deal of the success or otherwise to the character of the operators and superintendents, for supposing that equally good lymph was supplied to each circle, and equal care was taken in protecting and preserving it, we do not see why there should be such differences as are here shown to prevail in different districts. In Hissar, for instance, only 58.3 of the cases are successful, while in Mooltan they averaged 89.8. Umritsur is the district in which the greatest number of cases took place. The number in that division was 15,345, of which 86.1 per cent. were successful. Hissar again is where there were fewest, and there only 58.3 per cent., as we said before, were successful.—Hurkaru.

BOMBAY.MISCELLANEOUS.

FEVER IN BOMBAY.—The following statistics of fever in Bombay exhibit a favourable result, as regards the cures effected. During the four years 1811 to 1814 out of 24,653 soldiers there were 16,357 admissions into hospital with fever, of whom 363 succumbed. From 1850 to 1853 out of 37,516 men, there were 23,707 fever patients, of whom 186 died. For every 15,000 Europeans now residing in the Presidency, 147 are now annually saved by the use of quinine. It is believed that 184 men out of 40,000 in Bengal; 103.5 out of 15,000 in Bombay; and 94.8 out of 20,000 in Madras are annually preserved. In the aggregate 382.3 trained, disciplined, and seasoned soldiers are snatched from death out of 75,000 troops. The Government is gradually learning that the efficiency of European troops can only be maintained by the strictest attention to their health and comfort.

KANDEISH.—The great fair at Mhyjee in Kandeish continued this year for 2½ months. Some 300 of our troops were in attendance to keep order besides the police. The fair passed off quietly, and was comparatively free from crime. The articles brought for sale were estimated at Rs. 48,27,323. They were all disposed of, except Rs. 57,555 worth. The trade done exceeded that of previous years by more than eight lakhs in piece goods, jewellery, gold, silver, copper and brass vessels, grain, groceries and cattle. The increase is ascribed to the fact that next year no Hindoo marriages can be performed, a circumstance which happens every twelfth year.

HYDRABAD, SIND.—A violent storm accompanied by hail and a partial fall of rain, together with dense clouds of dust, occurred between 5 and 6 p.m. of Saturday, the 9th June, uprooting and blowing down trees, tearing asunder their branches and bearing down everything before it. Numbers of the trees which have been reared at so much expense alongside the Bellasis-road, as well as those forming the avenue to the old entrenched camp have been destroyed in this manner; in some cases the stems have been broken right across and the heads carried away. Nearly the whole of the trees in the Mango Topes in the old entrenched camp, now the property of their Highnesses Meer Mahomed Khan and Yar Mahomed, have been blown down, several stately old Babool trees have also experienced the same fate, one in particular, of unusual size, which stood nearly midway in the Bellasis Road, spreading its shade far around, and was held in veneration by the natives, is much to be regretted; a large cattle shed recently erected in the new Government garden was also blown down, but fortunately no injury to life resulted therefrom; some boats laden with grain and railway materials are said to have foundered in the Indus, no loss of life however has been reported, one of the flats of the Indus flotilla escaped from its moorings, and was driven across to this bank. The weather had been intensely hot and oppressive for some days previous to the storm, blowing with furnace heat in fitful gusts from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and it has not improved in the slightest degree since.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, June 23.—The London mails of 26th April and 10th May arrived per Pekin on the 21st inst. A large portion of the mail of 26th April has not come to hand on account of the loss of the steamer Malabar, in Galle harbour. His Excellency Lord Elgin and Baron Gros, with their respective suites, have arrived by this opportunity. We believe the envoys will proceed to the north immediately, the state of matters at Shanghai rendering their presence there absolutely necessary.

Admiral Hope left this for Shanghai on the 9th instant, where he arrived on the 10th; Sir Hope Grant also left on the 11th for the north. All the troops have also left, principally during the early part of the fortnight. From Chusan we learn that the troops there had proceeded to the rendezvous at Talienswan, about 200 miles from Taku.

It is extremely doubtful if the complicated state of affairs at Shanghai, coupled with our moderate demands, may not induce the Court of Peking to try and prevent hostilities. The Emperor would thus have a large force at his disposal to send against the rebels.

The rebels have been carrying everything before them. Soochow has fallen into their hands, after an immense loss of life and valuable property. The Governor and several other officials had been killed. It is doubtful whether the rebels or the imperialist soldiery, who it is said have not had pay for some time, and had taken to pillaging those they ought to protect, are the worst. The disaffection of the Imperial troops had no doubt a considerable influence in effecting the overthrow of Soochow.

The Governor-general, Ho Kwei-tsing, had taken refuge in Shanghai. He is said to have put himself in communication with the allied ministers at that port, and had entreated them to send a force to retake Soochow for the Imperial Government, promising at the same time that our demands should be complied with—a request which was very properly not entertained. He also paid a visit to the American minister, it is supposed with the same object.

Soochow is one of the largest, most populous, and richest cities in the empire, and its loss must be a serious blow to the Imperial interest. According to Williams's "Middle Kingdom" it contains nearly 3,000,000 inhabitants. It is surrounded by a wall nearly ten miles in circumference, outside of which are four suburbs, one of them said to measure ten miles. It is through this city that most of our imports passed, whilst our supplies of silk come from its surrounding districts.

At Shanghai the utmost consternation prevailed. Trade was at a complete stand-still. All the natives that could leave were leaving, and many rich Chinese had chartered foreign vessels to convey them to other parts of the coast, or to store goods, treasure, and valuables.

From Fuhchau there is nothing particular to report. According to Chinese rumours the Governor feared being reduced three or four steps, and had implored his Imperial Majesty to relieve him from his duties on account of sickness.

From Amoy and Swatow we have no intelligence of any importance. Mr. Caine, her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Swatow, will shortly proceed there to establish the consulate.

From Manila our only intelligence is that sickness had been very prevalent. The weather had been very unhealthy. A large fire had occurred at Pasig, destroying a large amount of property.

In the colony the only event of the fortnight has been the departure of what part of the expeditionary force remained here. Hong Kong is in future to be garrisoned by a provisional battalion, which will incorporate any drafts of men from home, and detach drafts to the north as may be necessary. Its strength at present is 865 men. The authorities are now laying out Kowloon, and building huts for the troops, and Mr. Goddard, of the consular service, has been stationed there to keep a surveillance over the Chinese settlers.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, July 13.—During the past fortnight the unseasonably dry weather has continued at Colombo, and the preparation and shipment of coffee have been uninterrupted. Three vessels have sailed for London, taking 10,574 cwts. of plantation coffee, and 2,541 native; in all 22,115. Our total exports are now considerably in excess of those to the same period in previous years, being 559,000 cwts. against 522,000 in 1858-59. The increase is entirely on plantation, and it is enormous; 414,000 cwts. of this sort against 348,000:—excess, 66,000

cwts. On the other hand, there is a decrease in the exports of native, as compared with last year, of 29,000. Next season we fear the exports of native will be shorter than for the past 10 years; while we cannot now hope that the out-turn of plantation will come up to the average. Showers have fallen in most districts; but what with the drought, and the white bug as a consequence of the drought, there has been a very serious loss of coffee. The exports of all our other staples, cinnamon, oil, plumbago, and coir, compare favourably with past years.

Sir Henry Ward took his departure for Madras on the 30th June, the good wishes of the bulk of the intelligent community attending him to his new government.

The marked exception has been the Editor of the Ceylon Times, but the source of his hostility has been exposed in an astounding revelation, showing that he made two modest proposals to Sir H. Ward: first, that he should be allowed to conduct the Times while drawing a Government salary of £400 per annum; and second, that he would sell the Times ("if necessary") on condition that £1,000 a year were secured to him. Sir H. Ward, of course, rejected both propositions, and so, in the estimation of Mr. John Capper, Sir H. Ward was a tyrannical and unjust governor.

General Lockyer, who is acting as Lieutenant-governor, is compelled, by ill health, to make arrangements for leaving Ceylon by the second steamer of this month. Should our new ruler not arrive in the interval, there seems to be a doubt as to who will succeed General Lockyer. Colonel Wilkinson will succeed to the command of the troops, of course, but it seems not so certain that he will assume the Government. Some think that Mr. Gibson, the Colonial Secretary, will administer during the interregnum.

The editor of the Ceylon Times has, in distinct and unequivocal terms, preferred a charge of manslaughter against a member of the civil service, Mr. Birch, of Batticaloa—a charge respecting which Mr. Birch and the executive must take action. Party spirit runs so high at Batticaloa, that a petition from the place declares that, since Mr. Birch has been in the district, neither the weather nor the grain crop has been what it ought to be. So we must reserve our judgment until we have evidence before us.

The wreck of the Malabar is breaking up; less than 700 boxes of specie having been as yet got out by the divers—so it is said.

JAVA.

The Queen of Boni is said to be anxious to effect a reconciliation with Government, and the people of Supa wish to place her son Andi Bau on the throne with the sanction of the Dutch. There are rumours that a third expedition to Boni may eventually be found necessary to accomplish what the second one left undone.

From Banjermassing there are lengthy narratives of marches and counter-marches, but little seems really achieved in the way of reducing the country to order. The chiefs of the insurrection are still at large, and until they are captured there seems little hope of pacification. The Kingdom of Banjermassing has been formally annexed to the Netherland India territories.

Cholera had broken out in the Makasser district in Celebes, and there was much sickness in Boni. Rice in the latter country was extremely scarce.—Singapore Free Press, June 30.

CENTRAL ASIA.

April 27.—A merchant, Gomashita, of Meer Syud Jan, along with Sirdar Khan Loanec, came to the Dost, and informed him that he came from the city of Oorgunge; that the Russians were in possession of the place in a fort named Khewah; that it was given to the king by them, and that the force lies in a line twelve miles distance from Oorgunge, where they have settled themselves, and from whence to Herat and Mushed, they are constructing a road; the distance between these two places and Oorgunge is only fifteen days' journey. The merchant further stated that the vakeel of the King of Bokhara was deputed to the Khan of Kokan, who with the vakeel of this place was ordered to go to Agah Musjid. The Ameer having learnt the story of the merchant requested Sirdar Shere Ally Khan to write to Mahomed Afzul Khan, to communicate an account of the doings at Turkistan, as soon as practicable.—April 28.—The Ameer, whilst sitting in his dewan khana, took a list of his sowars, ordering some to change their horses, and others to prepare their baggage as he was to proceed to Candahar, and in the mean time requested Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, to tell the moostuffa to prepare the accounts of the sepoys who were to accompany him to Candahar. On this account Nazir Mulliek Mahomed, Moostagir of Ghuzni, was written to, to make preparations for the supply of all necessities for the troops, as far as Candahar, so that no inconvenience may occur on the march.—Lahore Chronicle.

FINANCES OF INDIA.—A revised estimate of the revenue and expenditure of India for 1860-61, including the home charges, has been issued. It states the revenue at £37,762,660, the expenditure at £45,234,963, leaving a deficit of £7,472,303. But the estimate does not include the new taxation. The expenditure is estimated at less than in the preceding year by £1,543,396, the saving being in the military charges, which are estimated at £15,276,320, instead of £17,711,665, the charge for the preceding year. The interest on railway capital guaranteed will amount this year to £1,676,000, but it is estimated that the net traffic receipts will diminish this amount by £400,000. The earnings of the portions of line open for traffic exceed the guaranteed interest on the cost of those portions, but a very small part of the lines is as yet open.

THE ORIENTAL BANK now deduct the Indian Income-tax on the coupons of the non-registered rupee paper only, on which the English tax has necessarily not been charged. With regard to the registered paper of which the dividends are paid by bill on Calcutta, the practice is to take off the English tax in London, and the bills are then payable without further deduction. It thus appears that the double Income-tax is not now charged upon either the registered or unregistered debt. Those who have previously paid both will, doubtless, make application to the Government for resitution.

TEMPERATURE OF THE RED SEA.—Dr. Buist has communicated to the Geographical Society of Bombay some careful observations on the temperature of the Red Sea, without doubt the warmest body of water of its size on the earth. We are told that exactly in its centre lies a watery region of terrible heat. The seat of high temperature is situated in a tract rich in volcanic indications, and between 14 deg. and 21 deg. N. Latitude. Even in the winter months the water is seldom less than 80 deg., reaches 84 deg. in March and April, and in May sometimes attains to 90 deg. September, however, is the season of greatest warmth, the temperature of both air and water rising in that month above blood-heat. At this time a person leaning over the bulwarks of a vessel whose deck has been lately cooled by a shower of rain, experiences a feeling like that of holding the head above a kettle of boiling water. In November, 1836, the temperature of the atmosphere being 82 deg., that of the water between 17 deg. and 23 deg. North Latitude, on one occasion reached 106 deg.

Appeals against Barrack Charges.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, May 31.—With a view to establish a more uniform system, as well as to save correspondence in cases of appeals against charges made on account of barrack damages, the C. in C. has been pleased to direct with reference to para. 33 of H.M.'s "Regulations for the Army," and in concurrence with the Secretary of State for War, that the following regulations shall in future be adopted:—

Upon the general or other officer in command receiving an appeal in writing, he will, unless he be at once of opinion that the charge should be borne by the corps appealing, order a Court of Inquiry to assemble on the spot, the president of which should, if possible, be a field officer, and one of the members an officer of engineers, or (where readily available) a barrack-master of a barrack district other than that in which the damage was assessed. Where practicable, neither the president nor members should be detailed from the corps making the appeal.

Such court will take evidence in support of the appeal, as well as on the part of the barrack department concerned. They will also, in the case of damage to buildings, examine such member or members of the engineer department as may be named by the superintending engineer as most competent to afford information as to the reasonableness of the amounts charged.

They will record their opinion upon the charges made, and in the event of their recommending any remission thereof, will state fully their reasons for such recommendation.

Should the officer convening the court be of opinion, after a perusal of their proceedings, that the charges made should be borne by the corps appealing, he will issue instructions accordingly; but should he consider that any remission should be made, he will forward the proceedings of the court, with his remarks thereon, together with the original appeal, to the quinn. gen., for the consideration of the C. in C.

Musketry Instruction.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, May 30.—The attention of general officers commanding divisions is called to page 96, para. 34, of the book of "Instruction of Musketry," dated Adj. gen.'s Office, Horse Guards, Feb. 1, 1859, with the requirements of which they are requested to comply.

The attention of officers commanding regiments and batteries is called to the book of "Instruction of Musketry," above quoted, at page 7, para. 1. Commanding officers are enjoined to "make themselves acquainted with this most important part of a soldier's duty by careful study of the following regulations," &c. The monthly Diary of Parades must show what musketry instruction (subsequently to the conclusion of the annual course) has taken place in each regiment, in accordance with the directions contained in the concluding para. of page 4, page 69, para. 26, and page 33, para. 35. The diaries dated Jan. 1 and July 1 should show when the half-yearly lectures to officers took place.

Under ordinary circumstances, the fact of a regiment being detached is no reason for the musketry instruction not being carried out. Page 90, para. 13 is clear on this head.

A special report to be made at all inspections by general officers of soldiers who (though not detained in hospital, and who are doing duty in the ranks,) have been exempted from rifle instruction on the recommendation of the surgeon during the last annual course.—Vide page 92, para. 19.

Commanding officers are at once to report direct to the chief inspector of musketry, through district inspectors, for the information of the C. in C., any suspension of the annual course, and not to the adj. gen., as directed in page 96, para. 35.

All letters and circulars signed by the chief inspector of musketry, "By order," are to be attended to as emanating from the C. in C.

By order,

G. CONGREVE, Col.,
Qrmr. gen. H.M.'s Forces, in charge of Adj. gen.'s Office, H.M.'s Forces in India.

The Victoria Cross.WAR OFFICE, August 7.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned soldier of her Majesty's army, whose claim to the same has been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of an act of bravery performed by him in India, as recorded against his name, viz.:—

Private Samuel Morley, 2nd Battalion, Military Train.—On the evacuation of Azimgurh by Koer Sing's Army, on the 15th of April, 1858, a squadron of the military train, and half a troop of horse artillery, were sent in pursuit. Upon overtaking them, and coming into action with their rear-guard, a squadron of the 3rd Sikh cavalry (also detached in pursuit), and one troop of the military train, were ordered to charge, when Lieutenant Hamilton, who commanded the Sikhs, was unhorsed, and immediately surrounded by the enemy, who commenced cutting and hacking him whilst on the ground. Private Samuel Morley, seeing the predicament that Lieut. Hamilton was in, although his (Morley's) horse had been shot from under him, immediately and most gallantly rushed up, on foot, to his assistance, and in conjunction with Farrier Murphy, who has already received the Victoria Cross for the same thing, cut down one of the sepoy, and fought over Lieut. Hamilton's body, until further assistance came up, and thereby was the means of saving Lieut. Hamilton from being killed on the spot.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE CRESCENT AND THE CROSS.

ONCE more are Frankish warriors hastening to the East to avenge the insults and cruelties heaped upon their co-religionists by the fanatical followers of Mahomed. This time, indeed, there is no question of the Holy Sepulchre, nor are the hosts of the Saracens at all likely to put to the proof the martial prowess and chivalry of the new crusaders. What the mail-clad knights of yore only accomplished after the most fearful slaughter and suffering could now be done in a month by a single division of any European army. In the fulness of time the custody of the Holy City will probably be decided by a few strokes of the pen; but, in the meanwhile, all that is contemplated is to establish perfect security of person and property for the Christian subjects of the Porte. The public press, more potent of voice than even Peter the Hermit, has roused the sympathies of Europe from Rome to St. Petersburg, and already swift ships are conveying to the shores of Syria the advanced guard of the army of retribution. The chief actors in the recent massacres will, no doubt, be severely punished, and for some time to come the Giaour will be treated with forbearance, if not with respect, by the intolerant but trembling Turk. It is more important, however, to investigate the causes of the late disturbances than to dwell upon the means employed for their suppression. Had it not been for the issue of the greased cartridges, the Sepoy mutiny, there is reason to believe, would not have taken place before the present year. On this point we have the evidence of an intelligent native officer, who, on hearing of the outbreak at Meerut, observed to his superior European officer that it was well for the English that the movement had commenced prematurely; for if it had begun three years later, as was originally intended, they would all have been driven out of the country. It can hardly be a mere coincidence that a simultaneous agitation should pervade the Mahomedan community in Algeria, Morocco, India, and Syria. And yet this would have been the case had not the Bengal sepoys fired the match before the train was fully laid. What agency, then, could have fanned their fanaticism to so fierce a flame? What grievance had they to redress? What insults to resent? There is but one solution of the mystery. There is but one Power that could benefit by the general commotion. That Power, it is almost superfluous to add, is Russia. We do not imagine, or suspect, that the present Emperor has any very definite designs upon India, or that his Majesty ever contemplates the possibility of expelling the British from Hindostan. The eyes of the Russian Government are fixed, for the present at least, upon Constantinople and Persia, and not in his most sanguine mood can we conceive the Czar extending his plans of aggrandizement beyond those points. Nor would it be possible for him to realise those traditional schemes of the House of Romanoff, unless the other European Powers were too fully occupied with their own affairs to interfere seriously with the progress of Russian policy in the East. It may be questionable whether it was ever intended that Morocco should engage in hostilities against Spain. Far more likely is it that, if the machinery had worked properly, the Moors would have made common cause with the Kabyles, and with them have fallen upon the French outposts, and thrown the whole province into confusion. The movement in India would have furnished sufficient occupation to the arms of England, and little deference would have been paid to the remonstrances of Austria or Persia while those States were disunited by mutual jealousy. If the French alone, then, had undertaken to vindicate the cause of Christianity in Syria, who could blame Russia for extending her ægis over her oppressed co-religionists in Roumelia, or who could have prevented her from prosecuting her career of conquest beyond the Caucasus? The possession of Constantinople would open the Mediterranean to her fleets and commerce, while the supervision, if not the subjugation, of Persia, would place in her hands the entire trade of Central Asia. Russia alone would benefit by reviving the slumbering fanaticism of the Moslemite, and may, therefore, without any lack of charity, be reasonably suspected of having fomented, and perhaps originated, the spirit of aggression that once carried them in triumph through Asia and along the northern shores of Africa into Spain, and again from Asia into Greece, but which in these days can have no other result than to hasten the downfall of Islam and the expulsion of the infidel from Europe.

OLD LAMPS FOR NEW.

It is not difficult to foresee that the next Session of Parliament will witness the effacement of the last remaining vestige of the system that added an empire to the British Crown. That "mutinous and ill-disciplined" force which led the way into the citadel of Mooltan and stood immovable on the field of Chillianwallah when Queen's troops had gone to the rear, which saved Allahabad and Benares, and was the first to avenge the massacre at Cawnpore, which was foremost in every fight under the walls of Delhi, and never backward in Central India—that force will have ceased to exist so soon as the Lords have had an opportunity of sanctioning the rash legislation of the Lower House. After a gallant and desperate struggle the devoted little band who strove to stem the tide of innovation has been borne down and overwhelmed in the flood, and without going to a division the Commons have resolved that there shall no longer be a local European army in India. The opposition encountered by Ministers was not, however, altogether fruitless, for it wrung from Sir Charles Wood the assurance that officers at present in the service should in no way suffer as to pay, pensions, or any other privileges to which they would be entitled under the late system. The native army, it was further announced, is to remain under the exclusive control of the Governor-general, who will select its officers from a general Staff Corps. Everything, then, will depend upon the constitution of that corps—making due allowance for the influence certain to be brought to bear upon the Viceroy by Ministers in this country. Still, if the Staff Corps be really efficient, the evil consequences of favouritism will be reduced to a minimum. It must be admitted, too, that if H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge should succeed in carrying out his scheme for throwing open to public competition all appointments to first Commissions, there will be a fair prospect of this desirable contingency being attained. It is to be regretted, however, that an amendment to Sir Charles Wood's resolution was not moved to the effect that the European forces in India should never on any account be reduced below a certain number—say 60,000 men, or three-fourths of their permanent strength. Indeed, it is not yet too late to provide some such barrier against the possibility of India being deluded of its European garrison. Were this danger confined to the occurrence of some sudden and terrible emergency, there would be the less necessity for insisting upon it; but what is most to be apprehended is, lest the Ministry for the time being—whether Liberal or Conservative—might be induced under political pressure to cut down the army estimates to such an extent that the regular force maintained in the British Isles would prove quite inadequate for the duties required of it. But if ministers were debarred from drawing upon the military resources of India, except to a limited extent, and under very extraordinary and exceptional circumstances—and only then with the sanction of Parliament—there would be less to be feared on that head. The army lamp, however, is not the only one that is to be changed. In all probability, should no ministerial revolutions take place, a Bill will be brought in next session to throw open to public competition in India many offices hitherto appropriated to the Civil Service. The perils and inconveniences attendant on this measure have been so clearly exposed in the current number of Blackwood, that we prefer referring our readers to that excellent periodical, to offering any remarks of our own upon the subject.

The amalgamation of the two Courts of Judicature will likewise be proposed, and if carefully conceived, may prove of inestimable advantage to both races in India. Less complacently, however, do we regard the impending extinction of the India Council, and the substitution of Under-Secretaries. The Council, it is true, is impotent to prevent a headstrong Secretary of State from adopting any course, however hazardous, that may be pleasing in his own eyes; but, nevertheless, it can hardly fail to exercise a certain salutary restraint in any save extreme cases, and for this reason its abolition will be matter for sincere regret. With regard to the titular East India Company, it may be doubted if the mere shadow of a mighty substance, the simple echo of a great name, can be of much advantage to any interest. It is not easy to see how India, or even the proprietors of India Stock, can in any way be benefited by its further continuance. It is rather to be feared lest its utter impotence should invest the memory of the past with a certain degree of ridicule, and bring into contempt the once potent "Koompani Bahadoor."

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly low rate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."

"W. J. NEWMAN, Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

Diarrhoea, Bowel Complaint.—The wet weather, defective drainage, and noxious vapours, are now producing an unusual amount of sickness, which should have early attention. In all complaints affecting stomach, liver, or bowels Holloway's Ointment has a most salutary effect when diligently rubbed upon the abdomen. It penetrates to the seat of evil, and soon removes the indigestion and flatulency which warn us of approaching disease. It is safer in urgent cases to take the Pills while using the Ointment, as both used together act more energetically. A few days of this treatment will stop every case of bowel complaint in its early stage or acute form, and spare the sufferer a long and tedious convalescence.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Times of the 23rd July announces through a special telegram from Calcutta that the Income-tax Bill has at length been passed, and thus the readers of the Calcutta papers will be spared any further reports of the tedious and seemingly interminable discussions of the Legislative Council on the much-vexed question. The Bill is not to be retrospective, as we stated in our last Summary, though Mr. Reuter has omitted the important little monosyllable in the telegrams from Marseilles furnished to our London contemporaries. The first quarterly payment falls due on the 1st of November, and any attempt to defeat the object of the Bill, by closing shops or in any other manner, will be punished by twelve months' imprisonment.

In consequence of disquieting rumours calculated to operate injuriously on the money market, Mr. Wilson has explained, in the Legislative Council, that there was no intention of burdening India with any portion of the expenses of the China war. The report originated in the permission granted to the Commissary-general of the China force to draw upon the Calcutta treasury, for eight months, a monthly sum not exceeding £50,000, the Indian Government receiving credit from the Secretary of State for India for the amount of such drafts.

It will be seen elsewhere that the grant of land to the Maharajah of Nepaul embraces a part of the strip of territory ceded by that State in 1815, and which was subsequently transferred to Saadut Ali, Nawab of Oude, in payment of a debt of one million sterling.

The Bombay Chamber of Commerce have voted, by a large majority, certain resolutions condemnatory of Mr. Wilson's proposed Paper Currency for India. The opinion of the mercantile community of that presidency is rather in favour of a private bank framed upon the model of the Bank of England, with a capital of at least five millions.

A Bill introduced by Mr. Wilson with a view to consolidate and amend the law relating to stamp duties, which was to be reconsidered after one month, has also been unfavourably received in commercial circles. By this measure a duty of four annas will be imposed on the transfer of every 100 rupees worth of shares, but all transfers of subscriptions to any of the Government loans or other Government securities are specially exempted. It is therefore directed against private enterprise, and even so in unfair proportions. For instance, while the transfer of a share in the Mercantile or Oriental Bank will cost only twelve annas, that of a share in the Bengal Bank is mulcted to the extent of 10 rupees, and in the case of the Apollo Press Company of 31½ rupees.

As in this country so on the west coast of India, the fall of rain has been unequalled for the last fifty years. It has not been sufficient, however, to extinguish the fiery spirit of Mr. Chisholm Anstey, who has taken out a writ of mandamus to compel the production by the chief magistrate, Mr. Crawford, of the warrant issued by him in June for the apprehension of one Gunga Roopa, falsely accused of having stolen the Guicowar's jewels.

The report that the seat of Government was about to be transferred from Bombay to Poona has been positively contradicted.

The Governor-general in Council has appointed a committee to inquire into "the large and rapid increase in civil expenditure of various branches which has occurred within the last four years." There cannot be two opinions as to the necessity of such an investigation, and we trust that it will be searching and impartial. The Committee consist of Mr. Richard Temple, President; Messrs. Hugh David Sandeman and Robert Healy Hollingberry, members; and Mr. W. S. Halsey, secretary.

The Indian Government, many of our readers will be happy to learn, have given notice of their intention to distribute the Compensation Fund on the first of the present month. Nothing, however, is said about refunding the prize money, so long withheld from its rightful owners.

The Council of India will, we understand, hold their next meeting at their new office in the Westminster Palace Hotel. The preparations for the removal of the establishment are so far advanced that it is confidently expected that the 1st of September will mark not only the commencement of the shooting season, but also the inauguration of the "fashionable" era of the Indian Government.

STATE OF COMMERCE.

The extraordinary state of the markets of the world is attracting great attention. Capital, we see it remarked in the English papers, cannot find profitable and safe employment, and is, in consequence, increasing in the deposits of the Bank. The same action which is observed in Calcutta appears to be universal; trade does not revive, and there is a feeling of apprehension in Europe which paralyses all speculation. In this country there is a remarkable difference, which has not been satisfactorily accounted for. The prices of our staples of export, comparatively speaking, are not low in Europe, yet the rates ruling here are nearly all above the market rates in England. If a prospect of advance appears, or if a rise is quoted from England, there is immediately a proportionate rise in Calcutta, so that the relative price appears always to be somewhat higher than in England. We observe all market reports sent from this are full of hopes of more produce to ship, and more moderate rates when the rivers open. But this opening of the rivers never seems to increase the stocks of produce in Calcutta; at least we understand that has been the case for the last two or three years. If this were the case now, and produce were increasing at the marts in the interior, we should hear of lower prices at those marts; but instead of that our letters inform us that produce of all descriptions is held at prices which, as compared with those of Calcutta, are relatively higher. This statement of things, if as correct as we believe it to be, would tend to prove that the consumption of the country was increasing, and that the increased wealth and capital of all classes were enabling them to hold their produce much longer against the purchasers than they ever have been able to do heretofore. The little we really know of the interior arrangements of the people of this country makes these views little better than guesses, but the facts we point to are undoubted. The remarkable stagnation in Europe is, of course, re-acting on the market, and the export trade is reduced to a very low ebb indeed; still prices do not give way; the rivers are not yet sufficiently open, it is said, but though there are the usual stocks, and there are the usual arrivals, still the depression of trade in Europe does not appear to affect the holders in the slightest. If all this be really owing to the increasing consumption of the country, which prevents the accumulation of stocks accompanied by increased wealth, the prospect for the new system of taxation is excellent. The inquiry which this system will compel Government to make must clear up many problems, and will display a wealth of resources in the country which no one could have dreamed of. The reticence of the natives, which no European can understand, and their long practised plans for hiding their wealth and means will be to some extent laid bare. We have before endeavoured to show that the enhanced price of rice was most probably owing to an increased population, as well as to the increase of wages and the demand for labour. It may also be in part owing to the ability of the merchants of this country to hold their stocks. The statistics, then, which must be the result of the measures now passing Council, will prove of great value, and, above all, aid the Government in coming to true conclusions on the subject of the ability of the mercantile community to bear a taxation which has never reached them before, and enable it to improve and correct the law where it is now faulty from the ignorance Government now labours under on the whole subject.—Englishman.

THE NEW ARISTOCRACY.

Little more than three months have elapsed since the Viceroy in open durbar at the capital of the Punjab, announced the extension to that province of the liberal policy initiated in Oude. For awhile it was necessary to curb the power of the Sikh, and to reduce to obedience and complete subordination the chiefs who had been accustomed to wield unlimited sway. Shorn of patrimony, stripped of power, the Sikh sirdars led a life of inglorious and pernicious obscurity. But it may truly be said that India's necessity has been the Punjab's opportunity. The manly feeling and noble nationality which rendered the Sikhs no contemptible foe, made them when vanquished generous and faithful feudatories of the British Empire. The service rendered to the State by the Punjab has not been overrated. Now it has been acknowledged by the Government. A sirdar remarking on the speech of the Viceroy at the Lahore durbar, said truly—"The size of the loaf allowed for our food we knew could not be increased; but we sighed almost in vain for permission to eat that loaf as a homely meal, not as prison diet." To understand properly their feelings for the past ten years, we have to imagine a landlord at home who has been accustomed to lord it with princely grandeur over a numerous and obsequious tenantry suddenly deprived of a large portion of his income and of the whole of his authority. The change in their fortunes thus foreshadowed by the Viceroy's speech has given new life to the chieftains of the Punjab.

In carrying out the wishes of the Supreme Government, Sir R. Montgomery, who as chief commissioner of Oude, was the first to propound this policy, consulted the opinions of his commissioners as to the fitness of sirdars to receive these new powers. The replies from nearly all were very encouraging. Only one commissioner, with characteristic timidity and hatred of all aristocracy, deplored the measure, and reported that no one in his division could be trusted with judicial powers. But other commissioners responded, warming to the call of the Government. Mr. Brandreth, of Delhi, had few chiefs left from the general wreck whose loyalty could deserve such reward. One man, however, the Nawab of Kurnaul, was found faithful. The commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States found himself surrounded by faithful chiefs, and his difficulty lay in the selection of good men to whom this experiment might be safely entrusted. In truth, till the last Sikh campaign, the Cis-Sutlej petty chieftains had all exercised very extended powers on their own estates, which powers had been taken away on the annexation of the Punjab, as one of them said, "as a reward for their loyalty." But in the present altered state of things, where power is to be given, not as a right to all, but as a favour to a chosen few, there were many men whose qualifications and character would not stand the test. Those who were selected were the young Sirdar of Boorea, a near relative and ward of the Maharaja of Putteala, the Nawab of Koonjipoora, the Bhaces of Umrowlee and of Luddoah, and eight other jageerdars. They are to be invested with the special powers of assistant commissioner in criminal and revenue cases, and with power to decide civil suits not exceeding the value of Rs. 300. An appeal in all cases will lie to the deputy-commissioner. They will also receive the reports of the village police regarding all crimes committed on their estates, and will initiate steps for their detection.

In the Trans-Sutlej States lies the ancient principality of Kangra, the stronghold of the Rajpoot clans. In no part of India is the filial reverence for their feudal chief by a people carried to a more enthusiastic extent than in the Kangra valley. Besides the chief of the Katock or highest Rajpoot clan, there are the Raja of Goleir, the Raja of Noorpoor, the Raja of Sibha, and the Raja of Nadoun, the last-named being the illegitimate offspring of a former Katock Raja. Unfortunately, perhaps, aristocracy of birth does not in those hills betoken always aristocracy of administrative talent; and the Raja of Katock, the Raja of Goleir, the Raja of Noorpoor, have shown themselves wholly unfit to be trusted with the reins of government. On the other hand, the lowly-born Raja of Nadoun has acquired a well-earned reputation as a first-rate administrator. The Sibha Raja looks after his affairs with a business eye. These two chiefs have therefore been selected to exercise the full magisterial and revenue powers of a deputy-commissioner, with power to decide civil suits for sums not exceeding Rs. 300. Placed in a much higher scale than a new jageerdar, these rajas have greater influence over the surrounding country. It is expected that in proportion as greater confidence is reposed in them, they will acknowledge and act up to their greater responsibility.

The heart of the Punjab and the centre of the Sikh religion is known as the Manjha. Here we should expect to find many chiefs ready to contest the palm of supremacy in intellect and vigour suited for administration. Three have been selected by the Lieutenant-governor. The first is Raja Tej Singh, well known as a member of the old Lahore durbar, and one who has a claim to consideration. Second is Raja Shumsher Singh Sindaewala, of the lineage of Runjeet Singh, a chief of note, and of no mean intellect, though unfortunately he labours under the same disadvantage as the Raja of Nadoun. Like him, however, he has shown himself to be possessed of influence and ability, which will be well enlisted on the side of our Government. The third is Raja Sahib Dyal. In the Lahore division three chiefs have been selected. Gooroo Goolab Singh, of Gur Sahai, in the Ferozpoor district, is a man of sanctity and extensive influence, which he exerted on behalf of the British in 1857. Kan Singh Nukye, in the extreme south of the Lahore district, is an aged Sikh, who in former days enjoyed power and still commands respect. In the Goojranwala district, Sirdar Gundha Singh, of Bootala, is an active, well-affected, and intelligent chief, who has thrown himself into the cause of the British Government ever since the honourable defeat of the Khalsa. Crossing the Chenab, the recommendations for the gift of power become fewer. One chief in the Rawul Pindie district, Futteh Khan, of Kot, has long assumed a degree of power which often embarrassed the district authorities, or rather he never could be persuaded that he ought to resign into the hands of others the reins of government which he had held so long. But he always exerted his influence for good, and in 1857 showed himself a decided and faithful servant of the British Government. The grant of powers to him is eminently politic. The next is Sirdar Nehal Singh Cachee, a man well known in the Punjab, and described by Sir John Lawrence as one of the truest and most faithful servants of the Crown. In the Peshawur division, Khwajah Mahomed Khan, Syud Ayooddeen, and Raja Aligohur Khan, have been chosen for the districts of Kohat, Peshawur, and Hazara. Other chiefs there are across the Indus, but for them the present arrangements are not quite suitable. The Trans-Indus policy is peculiar to the frontier. In Mooltan and the south of the Punjab there were none whom the commissioner could recommend. The selection finished, it became necessary to consolidate as far as practicable the estates of all those chiefs, so as to bring their jurisdiction within a convenient circle. This is now being done. Meanwhile a brief but explicit code of procedure is being drawn up. The regeneration of the Punjab aristocracy has commenced.

The success of the talookdar magistrates in Oude justifies the extension of the policy. They have generally provided themselves with assistants or assessors conversant with the laws which it is their duty to apply and enforce. The appeals against their decisions to the European officials have been unexpectedly few. As chieftains who possess estates before which the lands of our English nobility seem mere paddocks, they have enemies both numerous and acute. Yet even Man Singh has so carefully exercised his new powers that within the last four months only three appeals have been made against his decisions, and these for very trivial exactions. The policy which created the wealthy zemindars of Bengal, and which in an extended form has hitherto proved to be so successful in Oude, has now been introduced into the Punjab. It will solve the great difficulty of our administration, the creation of a native aristocracy, at once the reward of loyalty and the outlet of ambition.—Friend of India.

ENGLISH CITIES IN THE EAST.

The cities which the English have built in the East have few of the advantages which public spirit and sanitary science have conferred on those of Europe. They are equally destitute of the barbaric beauty and splendid enterprise which may yet be seen in the ruins of Gour, in the ghats and bazaars of Benares, in the lavish carvings of Muttra, and not unfrequently in the capitals of native States. Existing under the most despotic Government England has ever sanctioned for a dependency, they bear the evils while they enjoy none of the blessings of despotism. Municipal laws are passed in which their residents have no concern, local taxes are raised with which they have nothing to do but to pay them; but no irresistible order goes forth, as if a god spoke from the clouds, for the formation of a street here, the widening of a lane there, the cleansing of this tank, or the demolition of that dangerous ruin.

Men who neglect the simplest physiological laws and become victims to the first epidemic are not forced to open their dens to the breezes of heaven, nor to disperse the malaria which they hourly inhale by removing its cause. Native dynasties at least built such cities as old Delhi, whose ruins are grander than those of Thebes. They made their name illustrious by creations like the Taj. If they did not remove filth from the crowded streets of their cities, they housed themselves and their retainers in buildings which a modern age is too utilitarian, too unimaginative, to imitate. Akbar, who raised the fairy palaces of Futehpore Sikri, now the most wondrous ruins in the world, would have stabled his horses in the House which the Court of Directors reproved Lord Wellesley for building. Where the Viceroy of the Queen of half the globe now sleeps, Akbar's nobles would not have deigned to lay their heads. The capitals of the East which British wealth has created by accident, possess neither the social advantages nor the sanitary provisions of a brick town in an English county, while they are destitute of the glorious architecture and living splendour which both Hindoo and Mussulmans have given to their cities. Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay have not one third-rate public building or private house among them. The first ceases to be admired by even griffins after a few days' residence, and is the horror of all who are not forced to live in it. By the Mofussilite with his easy habits, his cheap living, his few but fast friends, his breezy bungalow, and out-door life, it is looked upon as banishment. Madras is a large fishing village, with detached country houses lying inland, whose rooms are small and menages as economical as in a London bye street. Like Glasgow, the solitary advantage of busy cotton-choked Bombay is, that it is easy to get out of it to the pure air of the sea, or the cool delights of the hills. No great Exchange, no sumptuous reading-room, no general club, no vast concert hall, no place of public resort besides a panting band during a dusty evening drive, is to be found in India.

The English when they come to India leave their peculiar institutions behind them. Even the black hat is discarded—out of the cities. No political discussion, no literary reunion, no mental pabulum of any kind affords a stimulant to conversation or a piquancy to life. The good man talks platitudes in the bosom of his family. The young and unmarried find excitement in vicious pursuits. Official necessities prevent the slightest social intercourse between the covenanted and uncovenanted servants of Government in the North West. In Bengal, the work is or is made so much less, the class feeling is so much stronger, and the covenanted class is in itself so much more concentrated, that civilians seldom come out of their shell. We know of old fossils in Calcutta, men who rule India, or suppose they do so, forgetting that there is a special providence, who never open a new book, who take no interest in European politics, who reply to the boisterous announcement that Garibaldi has taken Palermo—"Ah, who is he?" and relapse into that which forms the only interest of their life, who is to get the Board. Such are dying out. They will not remain long in a monopoly into which their own uncovenanted subordinates may any day be admitted as their equals, and have the right of taking a chair in their presence. According to them, what with competition wallahs and the uncovenanted, the service is going to the dogs. It is this class separation of civilian from non-civilian and non-official, of merchant from tradesman, of white from black, of European from native, that is more provocative of the total absence of public spirit, united energy, and local patriotism than the cause generally assigned—that Europeans do not settle in India, that they are birds of passage. No public institution, unless it is purely utilitarian, like the Agricultural Society, flourishes or has flourished in India. By a high entrance fee the Asiatic Society keeps low-bred men at a distance. In its origin and its popular objects the new Dalhousie Institute goes to the other extreme. The Bethune Society is too native; some other society is too European. And so amid such excuses as these the best schemes prove to be built on the sand.

The most striking instances of the want of public spirit are given every year in the successive reports of the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta. Even allowing for the exaggerations in which they indulge on this subject, as an excuse for themselves in doing so little with an annual income of nearly eight lakhs of rupees, their accusations against both natives and Europeans are based on justice. After much goading from the press they attempted to collect statistics of the city in 1858. They failed because the Europeans would not assist them. In their report, just issued for 1859, we see they have again made the attempt, but cannot guarantee the figure they give. Although rents in Calcutta have risen 50 per cent. in five years, and return in many cases 15 per cent. to house proprietors, and although the population is annually increasing, only eight one-storied, and eight two-storied houses were built last year, raising the total number of brick built houses in the city to 13,379. No census has ever been made of the metropolis of the East. Had it been in the Punjab, its residents and floating visitors would have been known to a man. It is roughly estimated at half a million, but with the suburbs, we believe there is not a day on which there are not a million of people in Calcutta. Confining ourselves to Christians we see that 958 of the residents and 257 soldiers and sailors died during 1859. Of the former, 183 were carried off by cholera, 163 by dysentery, and 136 by fever, the three diseases of tropical countries. Of these, 439 were buried in one cemetery, close to Sealdah, where the great terminus of the three railways of Bengal is being built. The necessity of sending dead bodies by railway six miles out of town we have before urged. The mortality was chiefly under the age of 10, and between the ages of 20 and 40. Thirty-seven died between the ages of 70 and 100, a remarkable example of the longevity of life in India. Of the 958 cases of death 118 were pure Europeans, and of these 52 were males, 30 females and 36 children. Against these 118 we have 182 births, of whom 99 were boys and 83 girls. The most deadly month for infants was May, and the greatest number of births took place from September to January. During the year there were 116 marriages among Europeans.

We trust the Legislative Council will order at once a census of Christians in India. It will be some years before the operation of the taxes will give us reliable data as to the numbers and wealth of all classes. Taxation, and a partial representation in the Legislative Councils, will stir up that public spirit and create that interest in public events which at present lie dormant.—Friend of India.

THE ARMS ACT.—It will be perceived from the subjoined Government Gazette Extraordinary, that the Arms Act has received the assent of the Governor-general.—Legislative Council of India, July 2, 1860.—The following Act, passed by the Legislative Council of India, received the assent of the Right Hon. the Governor-general on the 30th June, 1860, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—Act No. XXIX. of 1860.—An Act to continue in force Act XXVIII. of 1857. Whereas it is expedient that Act XXVIII. of 1857 (relating to the importation, manufacture, and sale of Arms and Ammunition and for regulating the right to keep or use the same) should continue in force for a further period of one month; it is enacted as follows:—1. Act XXVIII. of 1857 shall continue in force for a further period of one calendar month from the 30th June, 1860.—Act XXVIII. of 1857 continued for one month.—M. WYLLIE, Clerk of the Council.

EUROPEAN SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—We hear from Cawnpore that a melancholy occurrence took place there at midnight on Saturday, the 23rd of June. A private in the 1st Bengal Light Cavalry, who bore rather an indifferent character, but was well liked by his comrades, went out in front of his barracks, and placing a loaded carbine to his breast, shot himself dead. No sufficient cause can be adduced for the deed, and he was perfectly sober at the time. We believe that far too little endeavours are made by the Government, to render the life of soldiers in India less miserable than it often unfortunately now is. The monotony of men confined to barracks all day, often induces hypochondria, and to this malady the suicide above mentioned seems to have fallen a victim. All day confined to barracks, without prospects, without amusements of any kind, forced to associate with men he possibly dislikes, the soldier in India has indeed a weary life before him. At Dum-Dum, and at one or two other stations, museums and lecture and reading-rooms for soldiers have been started in some regiments, not by Government, but by their officers and private individuals, but these are the exceptions and not the rule. Institutions like these are invaluable. They keep the soldier from the weight of his own thoughts, from brooding over his misfortunes, real or fancied, from regretting the happy home he may have left, and from seeking relief in drink and other vices which idleness cannot but engender. It is really too bad that in this country, where too often a European soldier's life is one of extreme hardship, some provision is not made to render his station in life as sufferable as possible. In this enlightened and practical age the soldier has ceased to be looked upon as a mere machine, without the faculty of thought or the power of free action. We feel the justice of the heavy claims which he has to our gratitude, and what is more, we admit the policy of taking care of so costly a commodity. We therefore have some right to expect that Government will take into its serious consideration, and carry out effectually and at once, the measures for the amelioration of the condition of the soldier in India, which it is both their duty and their interest to do.—Oude Gazette.

JOONPORE.—The North-West Gazette understands that considerable excitement prevails among the Rajpoots of the Northern Pergunnahs of Joonpore. This is of course attributed to that standing bug-bear, a seditious Fuqueer. Mr. Jenkinson, the joint magistrate of Joonpore, has proceeded to the disturbed districts to investigate the matter. Meanwhile people are not wanting to remark the coincidence of this excitement with the arrival of a native regiment (47th N.I.) at the station.

THE PASSAGE-MONEY specified in articles 185 and 186 sec. XLIV. Jameson's code, will in future only be paid to officers ordered to proceed to England by the Cape route on medical certificate. This regulation refers equally to officers of her Majesty's British and Indian armies. Those proceeding by the overland route who may be entitled to free passage according to existing regulations, will be provided with a passage, instead of receiving passage-money as heretofore. Application by officers of the British army should be made to the brigade-major of her Majesty's British forces, and those by officers of the Indian army to the assistant quarter-master-general at the Presidency. The former applications, if endorsed by the brigade-major as corrected, will be forwarded by him to the assistant-quarter-master-general at the Presidency for compliance, and it will be the duty of the latter officer to apply to the Admiralty agent in Bombay for passage in the P. and O. Company's vessels at the contract rates, to the extent of eight first-class passages in each overland steamer, if requisite. Applications for first-class passage beyond that number in any one steamer should be made by the assistant-quarter-master-general, direct to the P. and O. Company's agent in Bombay, on the ordinary terms.

H.M.'s 75th REGIMENT.—From a private letter received from Allahabad we (Oude Gazette) learn that the number of deaths in H.M.'s 75th regiment stationed there figures very high; that scarcely a day passes but the beating of a muffled drum does not proclaim the demise of some one belonging to this gallant corps. Our correspondent visited the hospital of the regiment, in hopes of ascertaining the cause of this dreadful mortality, but could gain no information on the subject. He, however, assures us that the hospital presents a most painful spectacle; on one cot is stretched an unfortunate being in "foaming madness;" on another, one delirious from fever; a third supports a patient labouring in fearful agony under the dire influence of spasmodic cholera, while many other sufferers are prostrated from dysentery, rigid rheumatism, consumption, asthma, distorting convulsions, and small-pox.

THE AFFAIR AT CAIRO.—The Englishman states that two senior officers have been dismissed the service for their participation in the disgraceful scene that was lately enacted in a mosque at Cairo, and that two others have been severely reprimanded.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—We (Delhi Gazette) congratulated the Indian medical service in February last on the publication of their amended royal warrant. It appears that it has again been found necessary to return it to the Secretary for India for revision, as the Indian Government did not feel authorised in deciding whether "service in India" was intended to include "leave in England for two years" or not, to qualify for the rank of surgeon-major. The principle of allowing a certain amount of leave in England to count as service for pensions was conceded a year ago, and it is generally expected that it will be allowed to count in favour of the new rank of surgeon-major. We hear that the limitation of age to fifty-five years will lead to the retirement of Drs. Tweddell, Downes, and Campbell, at an early date.

NATIVE ARMY.—All recruiting for the native army has ceased until further orders. When a regiment falls below the established strength of 700 rank and file, commanding officers are to report the same to the adjutant-general of the army.

CHAPLAIN'S CLERK AND SEXTON.—The practice of detaining soldiers for the performance of the duties of chaplain's clerk and sexton at out-stations being attended with inconvenience to the regiments to which they belong, the Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to direct that they shall be made available for such duties only after failure to secure the services of pensioners, or others, who may be residing at the station.

ENGLISH POSTAGE STAMPS.—The Commander-in-Chief, on the recommendation of the Director General of post-offices in India, has directed officers commanding European troops to explain to their men, many of whom, it is believed, are under the mistaken impression that English postage stamps are recognised in India in payments of postage, that such stamps are not current in this country, and that letters with only English postage stamps upon them are treated as unpaid letters, and charged with double postage on delivery.

COLONEL R. HORSFORD.—On the representation of H. E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, the Right Honourable the Governor-general in Council has been pleased to remove Colonel R. Horsford from the appointment of Brigadier-commandant of Artillery.

GENERAL SIR HUGH ROSE has been appointed an Extraordinary Member of Council, and took his seat and the oaths on the 6th July under the usual salute. The following Gazette Extraordinary contains the notification:—"Notification: Fort William, Home Department, 6th July.—The Right Honourable the Secretary of State having, in a despatch dated the 2nd June, 1860, announced to the Government of India the appointment of General Sir Hugh Rose, Knight, Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India, to be an Extraordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, it is hereby notified that General Sir Hugh Rose has this day taken his seat and the oaths as an Extraordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, under the usual salute from the ramparts of Fort William. —W. Grey, Secretary to the Government of India."

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.—The superintendent of the settlement of Port Blair is vested with sole authority to allow access to the Andaman group of islands (including the Cocos, Prepairs, and Narecondam), for trading or other purposes, and is empowered to impose such restrictions with regard to visiting the islands as he may from time to time deem necessary under the present circumstances of the settlement.

MAHARAJAH DULEEP SING, now in England, has subscribed a monthly donation of Rs. 1,000, which is remitted through his Highness's agent in Calcutta, to the order of the director of public instruction in the Punjab, for the benefit of the educational institutions there.

RUMOURS.—Some little time ago we brought to notice the circulating gharras of the Gwalior States; we now understand that an anonymous Hindoo letter has been circulated in the Allahabad district, calling on villagers to perform certain religious rites, the object of which is not very clear, on pain of the displeasure of one of the goddesses. Though not apparently of a seditious or treasonable character, the secrecy with which it was passed on from village to village, and the connivance of the police, who should have brought it to notice, constitute features in the case that render it worthy of attention. No doubt it was accompanied by some verbal explanation of its object, though nothing appeared in the letter itself to indicate it. It may, after all, be harmless, but secret combinations of this kind for any purpose are suggestive of danger. The worst part about it is the connivance of the police. Of what earthly use, we should like to know, are these bodies of police, for whose support India is to be taxed, when they do not even report an affair like that alluded to. We believe that by far the greatest amount of mischief done during the mutiny was perpetrated by the police of the North-West Provinces and the liberated jail-birds. By overstocking the country again with them as the Government have done, they have taken the best measure they could to ensure a repetition of the mischief the moment the opportunity offers. We do not think they have the pluck to make the opportunity themselves.—Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, July 10.—The last item of absorbing and important public intelligence is that the natives have discovered a flag of light over the sun which is supposed to signify all sorts of portents. Omens or no omens, the state of the grain market nearly approaches the appalling; we are close upon famine prices, at fifteen seers for the rupee; this is peculiarly unfortunate when it is remembered that taxation must be introduced in a few months, placing a further burden on the back of an already heavily-laden people. Government have taken compassion on the miserable dependents of the ex-King's family, and have doubled their subsistence allowance for as long as the scarcity prevails.

CAPTAIN C. D. GRANT, of the 11th N. I., whose conduct recently formed matter for inquiry by a Commission, has been removed from the appointment of Deputy Commissioner of Martaban, and his services placed at the disposal of Government.

B.L.—The Sudder Court has ruled that in future only those who have attained the degree of B.L., or that of Licentiate of Law in the Calcutta University, shall be deemed to be eligible to practise at the bar of the Sudder and Mofussil Courts, and that no one so qualified can be admitted to practice without first subscribing the usual declaration before the Judge of the Sudder Court.

MR. H. D. CHICK has been reappointed editor of the Oude Gazette.

SHOWER OF FISH.—The North-West Gazette relates a fall on the 24th of June, when the sky was bright and clear and a strong wind blowing, of a shower of fish to the south-west across the Jumna, in the district of Bonda. Six seers of them were picked up in one place, and a portion of them sent to Allahabad. They were about two inches in length, resembling the stickleback, but without the prongs in the dorsal fin.

SALE OF INFANTS.—We (Delhi Gazette) have been informed that many natives are now so far reduced to a state of actual starvation that they have begun to sell their children. Our informant, who sends us a long letter on the subject, which it is to be regretted he does not authenticate, and we therefore cannot possibly tell what amount of dependence we can place on his assertion, adds that he has just heard of two such cases occurring within fifteen miles of Agra. It is a curious thing that the Christian colony of Secundra which was formed, as every one recollects, from children purchased during the last great famine, and which was destroyed during the mutiny, has thus a chance of being re-established in the present year, owing to exactly a similar cause.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—According to Sir William O'Shaughnessy's report, the total number of private messages by electric telegraph in India in 1859-60 was 170,566. The number sent by native merchants was, in 1858-59, 39,724; in 1859-60, 71,554. The errors, in 1858-59, were one in 752 words; in 1859-60, they were one in 1,182 words.

LUCKNOW MEMORIAL.—Proceedings of a meeting assembled at the Chutter Munzil, Lucknow, on the 10th of July, 1860, Lieut.-Colonel L. Barrow, C.B., in the chair. Proposed by Lieut.-Colonel Abbott, and seconded by E. C. Bayley, Esq., C.S.—"That a monument be erected to Sir Henry Lawrence, K.C.B., and the brave men who fell in defence of the Residency of Lucknow." Carried.

MUSSOONIE, 10th July.—Lady Canning and suite left this evening for Calcutta. She enjoyed herself during her stay here, riding and walking all over the hills morning and evening. Lord W. Hay returns by the lower route to Simla. Strange that none of your correspondents have noticed the fact of the comet having made its appearance here on the 4th instant. I saw it on the evening of the 7th very distinctly, almost due west, with its tail upwards. Our astronomers appear behindhand in their calculations, if we are to conclude that this is the old comet; it, however, I may add, is very small.

HYDERABAD, June 19.—The provisions of the commercial treaty of 1802 with Hyderabad annulling all charge of transit duties on the produce of the English territories, to merchants subjects of that Government, have not been, up to this period, carried into effect. The Resident has now taken measures which cannot fail to give proper effect to this provision of the treaty, and much benefit will be conferred on persons trading with the English territories. I should wish to see transit duties on all traffic, either foreign or internal, abrogated by the Nizam's Government. I understand, but not upon sufficient authority to assert it very positively, that the Resident has demanded compensation from the Nizam's Government for some property destroyed recently by plunderers. If the Nizam's Government will adopt the spirit of this measure and make the authorities, where the depredation was committed, pay what it is made to disburse to the English Government, it would have a most salutary effect. It is by the connivance in a great measure of the officers of that Government, or by their laxity, that the chiefs of the depredators are not apprehended, and a little wholesome justice towards them would put down this mischief, extending almost over the whole country, or rather which did so extend, for the system of appointing Zilladars to watch certain arondissements, and the operations of the Hyderabad Contingent against depredators, and the impending punishment of powerful officers of the Government who sheltered them, have reduced to no inconsiderable extent the limits of their range. I hope to see a still better order of things. There is no doubt that it is ardently desired by the administrator. Without the intervention, however, of the English Government, his task will be arduous in the last degree. His ideas of government go beyond those of his compatriots, and the consequence may be understood. They will not easily gain popularity, nor will proper instruments be found to co-operate with him and give them effect. We require here, as you do in your territories, the use of a little force to give effect to new systems.—Englishman.

INAM COMMISSIONER.—The number of cases decided by the Inam Commissioner during the month of May was 6,887, which raises the whole number of cases decided from the commencement to 53,535. Besides these 3,365 village service Inams were recorded during the month, making a total up to the end of May of 6,510. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of May was 44,509; of which 2,906 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 25,617 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the inamdars; 15,551 were personal grants enfranchised compulsorily; and 405 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The number of title deeds issued up to the end of last month was 28,290. The total amount of quit rent now payable to Government in addition to former Jodi is Rs. 60,723. The amount paid in redemption of quit rent is 5,973. The combined quit rent annually payable to Government, for the future, upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders, amounts to Rs. 110,950-20, which is nearly one-fourth of the full assessment of the land—viz., 490,852 rupees. The whole of the Inams so confirmed, Mr. Taylor reports, belong to the old districts of Rajahmundry and Masulipatam, where the inquiry is nearly brought to a close. The Guntoor division of the Krishna district is now fully occupied by seven deputy collectors, and the remainder will proceed to Nellore, Chingleput, and North Arcot, on the completion of the Talooks in which they are now respectively engaged.—Daily Times.

CAPT. J. T. CLARKE.—A European general court-martial, of which Colonel P. T. Cherry, 1st Light Cavalry, is appointed President, has been ordered to assemble in Fort St. George, for the trial of Captain J. T. Clarke, 34th Regiment L.I.

COCHIN.—The Madras papers mention that the Rajah of Cochin has been robbed of his jewels. They were abstracted from time to time from the palace, and the robbery, it is said, extends over several years. Several of the palace servants are implicated. The Dewan is instituting a strict inquiry into the affair.

CENTRAL CHURCH IN BLACK TOWN.—Government have contributed ten thousand rupees towards the erection of a Central Church in Black Town. Upwards of twenty-seven thousand rupees from first to last have been contributed by the public towards the same object; and there is now every reason to hope that the project started nearly thirty years ago by the late Rev. F. J. Darrah, one of the most devoted and popular chaplains that ever served in the district, will now be vigorously pushed on to completion.

BOMBAY.

NATIVE WEALTH UNDER BRITISH RULE.

A correspondent of a Bombay journal, in referring to the aversion of natives who have acquired enormous wealth through the protection of the British Government, to contribute to the maintenance of that organisation through the instrumentality of which alone they have prospered, gives us some curious information as to the rate at which wealth has accumulated under British protection in the Western Presidency. When the island was made over as a dowry to the Queen of England two centuries ago, the whole property in it was considered worth £2,833. By 1688 it was estimated at £6,496; so late as 1812 it had risen to only £130,260. Behold the spring it has taken within less than half a century! In 1858 the fixed property within the island, including merchandise in store, was estimated to be worth more than five millions sterling. If we turn to the population returns, we find results still more extraordinary—

1716	...	16,000	1837	...	240,000
1826	...	162,579	1855	...	600,000

The census now due will, we have no doubt, give us a return of at least three quarters of a million—750,000—a population trebled since 1837, or in twenty-three years. Not one of these auspicious results could have been realised, unless through the virtue of British protection. So late as 1812 the Pirate Coast deserved the bad name it had long held, and Angria and his buccaneers pushed out from Colabah and plundered vessels across the harbour literally within sight of the lighthouse. The Peishwa, equally unscrupulous, was equally near at hand, and a visit to Panwell or Bhewndy was almost a perilous adventure. Poonah was a foreign Court; the Bhor Ghat, now traversed by the most magnificent railway incline in the world, was tracked by a footpath down which it was almost impossible for a horseman to proceed without dismounting. Bombay now boasts a sea-borne commerce worth thirty millions sterling, while vessels leave and arrive in the harbour bringing close on a million of tons of freight.

Of the fortunes realised by commerce within the present generation we cannot speak with exactness. Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy is understood to have left considerably upwards of a million sterling, the fruit of his own industry and talent. The Manchester Cotton Reporter mentions that some years since a body of native merchants applied for leave to erect some work at the presidency at their own expense, and that the first five on the list represented realised fortunes of half a million sterling. The property of Manackjee Petty was about a year ago sworn to as somewhere about £120,000, and this sum is quite a common figure at which to set down the earnings of the life of a Parsee merchant. The Peishwa, with a company of Mahratta spears, would have raised half Mr. Wilson's necessary balance in a forenoon in Bombay; or, more correctly speaking, had native rule existed, these fortunes would never have been realised. The man who had five lakhs of rupees in his possession would have known that he was ready to be squeezed and tortured till he surrendered them.

We rejoice at the prosperity of our native fellow-subjects; we lament to think of their short-sightedness and greed. Hitherto the native of India has been the only man in the world who enjoyed the blessings of government without paying for them anything beyond the trumpery contribution of the salt tax. It is from the land revenue, or, more correctly speaking, rent—the Sovereign being the owner of the soil, and from the opium duty, that the treasury has been filled. A rebellion, the child of that ignorance and superstition those very millionaires are most anxious to foster and perpetuate, arises, and they refuse to contribute of their abundance to pay for the evils that this ignorance has wrought. As each successive year rolls on the claims of the treasury increase—their disinclination to meet them increases with the claims. The blessing of a past exemption, in place of proving ground of gratitude, and of eagerness now to meet a necessity which can no longer be evaded, is considered a precedent for perpetual immunity from burthens which all men throughout the world who enjoy government know that the governed must bear.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARGO-BOAT COMPANY.—It is in contemplation by a Mr. Coe, who, in 1858, laid before the merchants and the Chamber of Commerce a scheme for a Cargo-boat Company, which met their cordial support, to bring out his scheme in the shape of a Joint-Stock Company, with limited liability. Judging by the promises of support then made, both as to subscribed capital and business influence, there can be no doubt that the project will now be perfectly successful. It is self-evident to all who are acquainted with the trade of the port, that by judicious arrangements the delay and inconvenience in landing goods at present experienced by the mercantile community may be entirely obviated, and that the entire amount of business in the harbour may be carried on with much greater regularity and safety than at present by a well-managed company, with a moiety of the boats now used for the purpose. When a ship arrives in the harbour with a cargo probably consigned to a hundred different firms, each or every one of them sends off a boat. The consequence is, disappointment to almost all. From what we hear, the company is to take the cargo out of ships as it comes to land, and to land it at once by the aid of tug boats, independently of wind or tide. It is easy to see that this will not only be a saving of money but a great convenience, and we cordially wish the promoter every success.—Bombay Gazette.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—Mr. J. M. Erskine, sub-treasurer, has been appointed a director of the Bank of Bombay, in the place of Mr. Corfield, who has returned to Europe.

THE TARIFF COMMITTEE, of which Mr. Spooner, the commissioner of customs, was the chairman, have just terminated their labours, and the result of their deliberations is a confirmation of the general opinion that the Bombay tariff will not admit, as supposed by the Calcutta Board of Revenue, of being revised to any appreciable extent, so as to give a large increase in the revenue. The Bombay Government coincide in the views of the committee, and are further of opinion that any special revision of the tariff is not called for, and that any modification, if any, should be made on the usual revision of the tariff in the course of the ensuing year.

KIRKEE.—The remount depot is abolished, and such horses as remain with the depot are to be distributed to the mounted corps at Poona, under the arrangements of Captain Wallace, acting remount agent.

MR. FORDE, the chief engineer of the Baroda Railway, has been removed from his appointment, on the ground of certain differences with Mr. Lane, of the merits of which we are not well enough acquainted to hazard an opinion.

KHUL, July 4.—You must have heard of the marauding excursions of the Bheel chieftains Khaja Naik and Bheema Naik, who have been carrying on their exploits on the bullock transport train road between Wassind and Mhow, for more than a month past. Their rendezvous is the jungle behind the hills between Dhoolia and Sindwa. The same marauders rebelled against Government in 1858, when they were pensioned, and pardoned. They have now found an occupation in plundering the passengers on the road between Wassind and Indore. They have also laid their hands on some villages between Dhoolia and Sindwa. About three weeks ago, a caravan of 150 camels, laden with treasures to the amount of about Rs. 400,000, was looted. On the first intimation of the rise of these men received by the authorities, detachments were marched against them from Malligaum, Dhoolia, Indore, and Mhow. Of the forces sent against them, 300 cavalry troopers of the Rajah of Indore, the 6th and 9th Regiments N.I., with ammunition, &c., under Major Baugh, Lieutenant Bennett, Lieutenant Walter, Lieutenant Diester, Captain Davison, the Assistant Director of the Transport Train, and other European officers, encamped here (Khul) for four days. They had succeeded in capturing the uncle of Bheema Naik, who is said to have been one of the ringleaders on this side of India during the great mutiny. He was escorted by a strong guard of a detachment of the Bheel Battalion and 50 men of the Indore Irregular Cavalry. After a visit from Major Baugh and others, he was conveyed away to be confined in the castle of Mundlesur, near Khul. The forces then left the camp to pursue Khaja Naik and Bheema Naik, but they have not yet succeeded in capturing these chiefs. It is said that the marauders have looted some opium boxes which were on their way from Indore to Bombay, and their efforts are still confined to that nefarious object.—Jam-i Jamshed.

REMOVAL OF THE BYCULLA SCHOOL.—Our attention has been attracted to a notice in the Poonah Observer, of July 7, to the effect that the Byculla school children are to be removed from Bombay to Poonah; and we are told another report prevails, that these schools are to be banished to Poorundhur, against which removal the editor calls upon parents and guardians, we think unwisely, to protest. All we can learn about this projected movement is, that fifty children, selected indiscriminately, are eventually to be sent to the sanatory station of Poorundhur as an experiment. We have, however, received the assurance of those deeply interested in the schools, that no ill-considered or hasty movement is contemplated, and that when the children come to be removed, extraordinary care is to be taken. They are to be measured and weighed before leaving Bombay, and a careful weekly register is to be kept of their increase, or decline, in height and weight. The children are to be narrowly watched, and under the fostering care of the soldier's friend, the Rev. Mr. Gell, we have no doubt they will flourish and prosper, and that the change will prove, in every respect, a beneficial one to them. Should the experiment, as we feel it will do, succeed, the Byculla schools will, we believe, eventually be removed to Poonah, with a branch at Poorundhur, or whatever hill station may be finally selected. The present school premises at Byculla are well adapted for barracks or public offices, their vicinity to the church would prevent their being made available for other purposes.—Telegraph and Courier.

COLABA.—Government has sanctioned the grant of Rs. 7,210 for the purpose of erecting a shed, north of the pilot bunker station at Colaba, to shelter the stores belonging to the master attendant's department, as well as to form a kind of depot for property saved from wrecks, and likewise to afford a temporary place of refuge to shipwrecked seamen. The depot is to be transferred to Khandalla, but a sanitarium is to be established in its place.

LIEUT.-COLONEL KIRBY, H.M.'s 94th Regiment, has been appointed to act as military secretary to the commander-in-chief.

MR. KERSHAW.—A farewell dinner took place at Mount Castle, the residence of J. J. Berkley, Esq., on Friday evening, the 20th July, in honour of John Kershaw, Esq., upon his retirement from the office of locomotive and carriage superintendent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The party consisted of Captain Rivers, the Government Consulting Engineer, Captain Southey, Acting deputy Consulting Engineer, Messrs. A. and R. Wallace, John Kershaw, Esq., Messrs. W. B. Wright, West, Dawson, Terry, R. E. Wright, Sandford, and Hood, of the engineering department, and Messrs. Charlton and Whatley, acting superintendents, Mr. Heads, locomotive assistant, Messrs. Reading and Sandford, foreman carriage builders, Messrs. King, Reade, Moores, Gibson, Corns, and Ringrose, of the locomotive and carriage department. A deputation of about fifty of the European employees attended in the evening to take part in the presentation to their late chief of the address and testimonial, consisting of a handsome service of plate. The party was also joined by Messrs. Jugonnath Sunkersett, and Venayekrow Jugonnathjee, and several native gentlemen connected with the railway. Mr. Berkley took the chair.

THIRD BELOOCH REGIMENT.—Under instructions from Government, the Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to direct that the 3rd Belooch Regiment shall be broken up from such early date as may be fixed upon by the Major General Commanding the Scinde Division under detailed instructions which have been communicated to Major-General Cunynghame, C.B., by the Acting Adjutant General of the army. The date from which the regiment is disbanded is to be reported to army head quarters; from which date all appointments and establishments are to cease, and the European commissioned officers attached to the corps are to be directed to rejoin their respective regiments.

A UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION FOR WESTERN INDIA.—At the suggestion of Sir William Mansfield, it is proposed to establish a United Service Institution for Western India, similar in design to the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall Yard, London. The head-quarters of the Institution are to be at Poonah. All gentlemen in the civil, naval, and military services in the Bombay Presidency are to be invited to become members of it. The object is the promotion of art, science and literature. The means by which it is proposed to attain this object are, the formation of a library containing historical, scientific, and professional works, maps, charts, and plans, the delivery of lectures, the collection of inventions and natural curiosities, and, if possible, the publication of a journal, the collection of arms of all nations, models, and a museum, which shall serve as a central depository for objects of professional and general information, and for trophies and relics connected with Indian history.

THE INDUS FLOTILLA.—The following letter has been published for general information:—"No. 573.—To the Sec. to the Government of Bombay, Mil. Department.—Sir,—The Government of India has recently had before it an account of the transport of the families of soldiers from Kurrachee to Peshawur and elsewhere in the Punjab. Owing to the judicious arrangements made by the authorities, both civil and military, and the great care and attention paid to the comfort and wants of the families by the officers of the Indus flotilla, and those in whose immediate charge they were placed, this difficult task was carried out with complete success. The approbation of the Government of India has been conveyed, through the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, to the functionaries of that province who are concerned; and I am now desired to request that the Government of Bombay may be moved to make the cordial approval of the Governor-general in Council known to the officers of the Sind commission, of the Indus flotilla, and of the Commissariat Department, who afforded such material aid in carrying out the measure.—I am, &c., R. J. H. BIRCH, Major-general, Secretary to the Government of India.—Council Chamber, Fort William, the 15th June, 1860.—Poonah, 10th July."

NATIVE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER.—At the special sessions of the peace, held on July 12, in the Town Hall, Mr. Narayan Dinnanathjee, interpreter of the Supreme Court, was elected a municipal commissioner in room of Dr. Winchester, resigned. The other candidates were Mr. Brooke and Mr. Manley.

MR. THOMAS LIDBETTER has been appointed Lloyd's agent for the Port of Kurrachee.

FALL OF A HOUSE.—GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.—On Thursday night, July 19, a mud and plaster tenement, three stories in height, situated in Jugjeevon Kika-street, leading off the Parell towards Duncan-road, gave way at one corner, and with a heavy crash which startled the inhabitants near by, buried no less than eighteen of its inmates in a heap of ruins. The first bodies taken from the ruins were those of a Hindoo husband and wife, who had occupied a room in the upper story of the building; they were both horribly mutilated, and must have met with instantaneous death. A young man, son of the above, who was sleeping in the second story, was also taken out dead, and the body of a girl two years of age, the daughter, who was sleeping in the same room with him, likewise dead. Four out of the five persons who met their death by this catastrophe, are therefore of one family; and what is rather remarkable, two children who are made orphans by this sad blow, and who were sleeping on the ground floor, were taken out uninjured. They are a boy and a girl; and the former, when discovered by Mr. Avron, was buried under a plank, on each end of which there were enormous quantities of rubbish, and the centre borne up by the boy's head, who was probably saved from death, by a large bundle of cloth around his head. The little girl, when first discovered, was attempting to force an air-hole. Mr. Edginton was soon on the spot, and aided in clearing away the rubbish, and in sending off the mangled bodies of those who were yet living to the hospital. No less than eighteen were taken out, and of this number five were corpses; eleven were horribly mangled, one having the skull almost completely bared of the scalp, and others with arms and legs broken, made a dreadful spectacle. Those who were yet living were sent to the hospital as soon as they were got out of the ruins.

THE MONSOON.—The total fall of rain at Bombay, up to the 21st July, inclusive, is as follows:—At Byculla, 56 in. 53 cts.; in the Fort, 50 in. 86 cts.; and at Colaba, 43 in. 23 cts.

Military Finance.

No. 710 of 1860.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication for general information of the following resolution:—

By paragraph 14 of Financial Resolution of the 7th April it was declared that the accounts of the various departments of the army should after examination at the several presidencies, be transmitted to a Military Finance Department at Calcutta; and that the said accounts having been finally examined by that department in communication with the audit board, abstracts thereof would be sent to that board for ultimate and appropriation audit.

In order to give effect to the objects thus indicated, the following resolutions have been passed in detail. The functions to be entrusted to the Military Finance Department as therein described, will, pending the organisation of the department, be exercised by the Military Finance Commission now sitting in Calcutta.

1. The Military Finance Department, acting under the immediate supervision of the Govt. of India, shall be charged with the duty of examining into all sources of military expenditure, and controlling all permanent and contingent military expenses, whether relating to pay, moneys or material, throughout the presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and all territories under the direct control of the Govt. of India.

2. The functions of the department will extend to enforcing the observance of the limits of expenditure prescribed by Government for every branch of the military service, also constantly watching the progress of issues of stores and disbursements of money in relation to the sanctioned expenditure; and whenever the prescribed limits are in any way transgressed, the said department will take such steps as may be necessary for inquiring into and checking the same, or will report the circumstances for the orders of Government. In like manner, wherever reductions in the expenditure of money or stores, or further economy in the application of means may be considered practicable, it will be the duty of the department to represent the same to the proper authority, with a view to the necessary measures being taken to give effect thereto, reporting their proceedings to Government.

3. The financial examination to be exercised in the military finance department will not affect the functions of the several local governments of the established military authorities, or the executive heads of the several branches of the service, whose responsibilities for ensuring economy and efficiency will remain as heretofore.

4. The said department will exercise supervision over all accounts of military expenditure, and to this end will be empowered to call on the heads of all branches of the service for information, and to require the assistance and co-operation of all department disbursing officers; also receiving from each head of department timely notice of every probable increase or decrease in requirements of any kind, whether as regards moneys, establishments, or material, and whether contingent, or provided for in the annual estimates. The Military Finance Department will be responsible for inquiring, and reporting to Government whether the duties of disbursing, accounting, and controlling officers, involving the issue of money or stores, are duly performed; also requiring the verifications of balances of cash and stores, restricting the cash amounts, either kept in hand or outstanding, and enforcing the carrying to account of all recoveries. It will be the duty of the department to keep themselves fully acquainted with the nature of each service, examining the records of receipt, issue and consumption of stores, equipment, clothing, &c., and ascertaining whether the workshops, manufactories and depots connected with the military service are so conducted, and the allotment of stores, supplies, and equipments so kept up, that the utmost economy, consistent with thorough efficiency, may be maintained. All requisitions for stores, whether on England, or on authorities in India, will be scrutinized by the department, who will watch over the accumulation of stock, and control the quantities maintained in this country; also examining the terms of all contracts or other arrangements for obtaining supplies entered into on behalf of Govt. of any military branch, in order to ascertain whether framed with due regard to economy and efficiency, and closely observing all disbursements, so as to be able at any time to furnish to the financial department of the Supreme Government returns of all monies received and issued, under the different heads of service, up to the latest date.

5. In order to ensure strict and unvarying uniformity of record in all controlling, examining, and disbursing officers of the military service, the Military Finance Department will see that the forms prescribed for all books, returns, vouchers and accounts are adhered to; being at the same time authorised to re-consider all existing forms and under general instructions from the Government of India to make such modifications as may be necessary, and lay down new rules, adopted to the process of examination, and check as ordered to be carried on under the new system. The department will also lay down the periods for the submission of those documents, and take measures to ensure their being rendered in a regular and uniform manner, defining and strictly enforcing the responsibility of controlling, disbursing, and accounting officers in this respect, and as regards the correctness of the vouchers and authority for expenditure.

6. The Military Finance Department will determine the mode and form in which the detailed estimates of expenditure and requisitions for stores for each executive military branches are to be framed, for incorporation in the general budget. Those for the Bengal Presidency, and for territories under the direct rule of the Government of India, will be forwarded to the department for submission to the Supreme Government; and as regards Madras and Bombay the military portion of the general estimate, together with the detailed estimates received from the governments of those presidencies, will be referred to the Military Finance Department.

7. The said department will carefully check and examine all the estimates and requisitions with due regard to financial considerations, and the wants of the several branches of the service, proposing to Government any modifications that may be necessary; and will combine the revised estimates into one general estimate of military expenditure for all India, in which the numerical strength and location of the several arms of the service, and of the army establishments will be exhibited, with the estimated cost thereof; the proposed charges of army clothing, hospitals, material, provisions, pensions, &c., being also arranged, item by item, in appropriate divisions, so that when the estimates have been sanctioned, the disbursements may be at once brought under their respective heads. The general estimate will then be submitted by the Military Finance Department to the Supreme Government, and will, after their orders have been passed, be incorporated with the imperial budget.

8. The accounts of all the military branches will, after the prescribed examination has been made, be transmitted in such forms and at such periods as may be ordered to the Military Finance Department, with whom will rest passing and final examination of such accounts, and they are accordingly authorised to institute further inquiries, call for detailed records, vouchers, explanations, and the like, disallow charges, or report the matter to Government. The strict appropriation of all disbursements of money or issues of stores under the head of service for which sanctioned will be enforced by the department, who will also ascertain that the several amounts are charged against the specific sanction given, and against the year in which the said expense has been incurred. When the accounts have been finally examined and passed, they will be classified and consolidated into the statement for all India, and abstracts thereof will be transmitted to the audit board of the Supreme Government in such form as may be prescribed for final audit. The Military Finance Department will also allow such persons as may be deputed by the audit board to have access at all times to accounts of all kinds in their office for such examination as may be prescribed.

9. The department will be authorised at any time to inspect any office whether of control, account or disbursement connected with military expenditure of money or stores; to examine the books and investigate the transactions, as also to depute any person from the department to conduct such inspection and report thereon.

10. At each of the presidencies (Bengal, Madras, and Bombay), and in such other localities as may hereafter be fixed, an officer subordinate to the said Military Finance Department, will be appointed, designated "Controller," who will cause due effect to be given to the orders of the department in the matters described in the foregoing paragraphs subordinate to each controller; there will be "Examiners" of the accounts of the several military branches, and an officer for classifying and compiling accounts in such numbers and at such station as may hereafter be found necessary; and one officer in each compiling office will be specially responsible for the correctness and speedy classifying of the said accounts.

11. Disbursing officers of all the military branches will transmit to the examiners of the branch to which they respectively belong, the accounts of disbursements and issues of stores made by them, at such times and in such forms as may be prescribed, accompanied by the vouchers and authorities. The examiners will, under the orders in force, scrutinise and compare all the accounts obtaining explanation if necessary, or in the event of doubt existing as to the correctness of any charge, referring to the controller; but if satisfied, will pass the accounts, and transmit them to the compiling officer in the manner prescribed.

12. The compiling officer at each presidency or in each circle will, under the supervision of the controller, classify the accounts in such form as may be laid down; transmitting them to the Military Finance Department through the controller, at such periods as may be ordered.

13. The special duty of the controllers will be to examine and control all the offices of examination within their respective circles, and to enforce the carrying out of orders under the established system; but they will also inspect all offices of accounts and disbursement within their respective circles, calling for such information regarding the accounts received from the examiners as they may deem necessary, and, in the event of doubt on any point, making reference to the department at Calcutta.

14. In the Bengal presidency it will be the duty of the controllers to examine and submit to the Military Finance Department the detailed estimates of military expenditure for incorporation in the general budget of the empire. In the Bombay and Madras presidencies the controllers will submit such estimates to the local government for incorporation in the general estimate of the presidency.

15. The duties of examination and check now performed by the military auditor general, and the auditors of commissariat, medical ordnance and clothing accounts, at the several presidencies, Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and in the territories directly under the Government of India, will be transferred to the examiners of accounts appointed to those branches respectively; the officers and establishments attached to the above offices being, under instructions from the Military Finance Committee, redistributed, so as to meet the requirements of the new system. The general powers now exercised by the military auditor general in each presidency will be merged in the enlarged powers to be entrusted to the controllers.

16. The officers employed as controllers, examiners, and compilers, will be in future appointed under the same competitive system as that prescribed for the financial department, and will be transferrable from one presidency to another, as occasion may require.

17. The system of examination and account now laid down will take effect in each presidency from such date as may be determined by the Government of India, and pending the detailed arrangements for carrying it out, the duties will continue to be conducted as hitherto by the officers in charge, their full responsibility for efficiency remaining undiminished, while at the same time they attend to the requisitions of the Military Finance Department.

18. It is known that, consequent on late events, arrears of accounts have in many cases greatly accumulated to the detriment of efficiency and the interests of the State. The Supreme Government has hitherto looked leniently on such arrears, but from and after the date of the introduction of the new system, absolute regularity must be maintained, and no arrears permitted to accumulate without being at once brought to notice. In order that existing arrears may be cleared off as soon as possible, special establishments will be entertained for that purpose under arrangements made by the Military Finance Commission through the several controllers, with strict injunctions that the object is to be speedily accomplished.

The Civil Finance Commission.

Financial Dept., Fort William, July 6.—Notification:—In consideration of the large and rapid increase in civil expenditure of various branches, which has occurred within the last four years, and which shows a tendency to still further augmentation, the Governor gen. in Council is pleased to constitute a Civil Finance Commission, to consist of the following officers:—

Mr. Richard Temple, C.S., president; Mr. Hugh David Sandeman, C.S., Mr. Robert Healy Hollingsberry, members; and Mr. W. S. Halsey, secretary.

This commission will first take note of the increased expenditure under each head in the imperial accounts of Government of India political, judicial, fiscal, and the like. Prosecuting its inquiries under each head, it will ascertain in what proportion in presidency, province, or other division of the empire, the detailed augmentations, which make up the aggregate of increase have occurred, in every case analysing the causes of increase. It will further compare the expenditure in the several civil departments of the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay presidencies respectively as shown in the accounts presented by the several local governments to the Supreme Government, with a view to suggesting such reductions as may be practicable, and will from time to time submit such reports to the Supreme Government as may be requisite.

Furthermore as regards the Bengal Presidency and the several local governments comprised therein, also as regards the several provinces under the direct control of the Supreme Government, the commission will investigate as closely as may be practicable all civil charges whatsoever, excepting the charges of the covenanted and commissioned officers, the police, civil and military, and public works, with a view to the suggestion of any reductions that can be properly made. The commission will carefully collate and compare the cost of the political, judicial, and fiscal establishments of all grades and all charges in the said departments, including pensions. It will specially examine all miscellaneous and contingent charges in all departments, and all extraordinary charges. It will in each branch of the revenue consider the cost of collection in reference to the proceeds.

Whenever the Commission shall proceed to inquire into the cost of any civil establishment at the Presidency of Calcutta; the head of such office will be associated with commission, and be a member thereof.

In the Bengal Presidency and the provinces under the direct control of the Supreme Government, the Commission will, in respect to inquiries made in virtue of this resolution, communicate direct with the Secretary to the Local Government, or to the head of the province. In request to the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, any communication which the Commission may have to make, should be made to the Supreme Government.

For any particular instructions required for guidance, the Commission will apply to the Supreme Government in the proper department, such general reports as the Commission may make, will be submitted to the Financial Department.

Published by order of his Excellency the Governor general in Council.

Id. Gen. Simla, Sept. 23, 1859.—With the sanction of H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council, the C. in C. is pleased to determine that the practice now in force,—a practice not enjoined by the regulations, of detailing officers to muster corps, not their own,—shall as a general rule be abolished.

On the 1st of each month regiments will be formed on their respective private parade grounds, in open column of companies, right in front, each company having the first man on the roll on the left. After the captains or officers commanding companies have inspected their men the regiment will be formed into close column, with the non-commissioned officers and drummers on the left of their companies, and the officers on the pivot flank.

The commanding officer will then face the column to the left, and the officers will be called to the front; the paymaster will then proceed to take the muster.

After the officers are mustered the subalterns will move to the reverse flank and remain there until the muster is concluded, the commanders placing themselves ten paces from the left of their companies facing towards them, having a roll of their men ready for the purpose of accounting for absentees.

Each pay-sergeant or havildar, on being mustered, will take post one pace in rear of the commander to assist in answering for the company; on each man's name being called, he will answer to it, recover arms, and move quietly to his barracks or lines.

The muster of the men who may have been on duty on the first of the month will be taken in the evening, on the following day, by the paymaster in barracks or at roll-call.

Grant of Lands to the Maharajah of Nepaul.

From the Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. of India to H.H. the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, dated May 17, 1858.

SIR,—Your Excellency will remember that on the last occasion on which I had the pleasure of receiving your Excellency on the eve of your departure from Allahabad, I announced to you my intention to restore to the Maharajah of Nepaul a certain tract of country adjoining the frontier of his kingdom, which had been ceded to the British Government in 1816.

Your Excellency will also remember that I expressed a wish that you should be the medium of the communication to the Maharajah.

The restitution is made in recognition and as a lasting memorial of great services rendered by your Excellency in person, and by the brave troops under your command, to the British Government. It cannot, therefore, be made known to the Maharajah and to the durbar through any channel so fitting as yourself.

The last of the regiments which composed your Excellency's army are now about to cross the British frontier on their return to Nepaul. I, therefore, again repeat to these gallant men, and to your Excellency as their leader, my cordial thanks for the good service which they have performed, and I place in your Excellency's hands the letter to the Maharajah, communicating to his Highness the cession of territory to which I have alluded.

Extract Statement of Brig.-gen. Macgregor, Mil. Commr. and Gov.-gen's Agent with H.H. Jung Bahadoor, dated March 30, 1858.

In concluding this brief memorandum of the services performed by our ally, Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, I feel it incumbent on me to place on record the high sense I entertain of the value and extent of the service performed. Embracing with firmness the alliance of the British Government from the first, his Highness has never swerved from his loyalty. Assailed by temptations of all sorts, he has thrown them all aside, and at once acquainted me both with the agents and their promises. He has cheerfully endured privation and exposure himself, and expended the blood of his soldiers in the cause of justice and humanity, and in what he has the sagacity to perceive lie the best interests of his own State. He has led his troops in person in battle, and there they have shown the qualities which have made their nation famous.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, August 22, 1860.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

THE failure of the Red Sea line renders it imperative upon Government to do something more than "take into consideration" the expediency, or rather the necessity, of adopting some other route for establishing a telegraphic communication with India. Hitherto every attempt to use submarine cables for long distances has proved miserably abortive, nor does there appear to be any reasonable hope of laying one successfully over coral reefs or across sharp ridges of rock. Independently of these dangers recent experiments have shown how defective is the present system of insulating the wire when immersed in deep water. Either new materials must be employed for the outer coat, or some great improvements must be introduced in applying them, before it will be possible to establish a submarine telegraph with a fair prospect of success. Even the wire prepared to connect this country with Gibraltar has been found unfitted for the purpose, and therefore it was proposed by Government to lay it down between Rangoon and Singapore, with a view to obtain speedier intelligence from China. The wiser plan, and the cheapest one in the long run, would be to dispose of the wire for what it is worth, and patiently submit to the first loss, instead of increasing it by a fruitless attempt at its diminution. But while the long sea routes have so cruelly disappointed the sanguine calculations of speculators, the different lines on dry land have turned out all that could be desired. It is needless to insist upon the immense advantage to this country of having direct communication with India. Lord Ellenborough and Sir Charles Napier estimated a knowledge of the native tongue as equal to 10,000 troops, but a telegraph in good working order would be better than 20,000. No time should be lost in diplomatic intrigues. If it be useful to have the line at all, it will be doubly useful to have it made at once. The Euphrates route is already known, and might be prosecuted without delay if the Government could for once decide upon taking prompt action. This line must be chosen at last—why, then, not now?

THE INDIAN EXODUS.

"WESTWARD the path of empire lies." Confident of the justice of his cause, the Secretary of State for India, rising in his place in Parliament, expressed his belief that very shortly after the prorogation he should be able to remove his office to the Westminster Palace Hotel. Since that announcement the House of Lords, speaking by the mouth of the Lord Chancellor, have confirmed his claim, and already the preliminary arrangements for the transfer are rapidly advancing towards completion. In a few weeks, then, we may expect that the Wise Men of the East will go forth out of the land of Goshen, "that pleasant land," to take their ease in their inn in aristocratic Westminster. In many respects it will, no doubt, be more convenient to carry on the business of the Indian Government in close propinquity to the other public offices, so that as little time as possible may be lost in journeyings to and fro between Downing-street and the virtual seat of the Indian Empire. There may be, indeed, some apparent lack of dignity in the idea of the successor of the Great Mogul issuing his decrees from a house of public entertainment; but, after all, this is strictly in keeping with ancient precedent. The Directors of the old Company in its early days were wont to solace themselves with a pipe and a pot in a City tavern while they regulated the prices of teas and silks, rice, sugar, and cinnamon. In like manner does the Crown inaugurate its rule of a mighty empire in the spacious apartments of a comfortable as well as fashionable hotel, the only difference being that claret and cigars will take the place of brown stout and tobacco. Perchance—absit omen!—there may be one other trifling difference: as in the tavern a system was concerted which led to a fabulous success, so in the other a policy may be adopted which shall lead to ultimate discomfiture and ruin. In the mean time, however, the commercial spirit of London capitalists is busily engaged in devising plans for the improvement of the metropolis and the increase of their own incomes, consequent on the migration from Leadenhall-street to the West-end. In our advertisement columns there appears the prospectus of a (Limited Liability) Company, who propose to erect a magnificent block of buildings in the open space in front of the Westminster Palace Hotel. The want of residential chambers and good offices in the immediate vicinity of St. Stephen's has long been the cause of great inconvenience to all persons connected with Parliamentary business and the different Government services. It is the object of this new company to supply a remedy for the existing state of things, by the erection of a handsome structure, which will contain no fewer than five hundred and thirty-six rooms, of which four hundred and eighty-four will be let as chambers or offices. The completion of this design will undoubtedly be a great boon to hundreds of individuals, as well as a vast improvement to the neighbourhood. As to the success of the undertaking from a commercial point of view, it is no part of our province to express an opinion, nor is it necessary to do so where success is almost a certainty. The capital required is so moderate in amount that no time is likely to be lost in raising it, and thus—whether we lose or retain our Indian empire—the metropolis will decidedly be a gainer by the transfer of the India-office from the city of London to the city of Westminster.

"LA GUILLOTINE NE VA PAS MAL."

THE Indian revolt has ended, but the Indian revolution marches fast. Politicians—particularly English politicians—are so accustomed to consider amalgamation as a question of military detail that its true significance is almost forgotten. The innovation, great even in its military aspect, carries with it the most far-reaching political consequences. It changes entirely, for example, the relations of the Presidencies to each other and the Central Administration. Hitherto the three great divisions of the empire, though subject to a uniform control from Calcutta, and invested with a common right of appeal to England, have remained as distinct as separate monarchies. The Bengal officer knew nothing of the Bombay army, and utterly despised the pariah sepoy of Madras. The Madras officer detested the Bengalee as the cloud between himself and official sunshine. The Bombay "man" contemned them both—the Bengal army for its want of discipline, the Madras army for its inferior physique. The members of each army married among themselves, held their own staff appointments, managed separate funds, and organised irregulars on their own widely diverged theories. Above all, the tone of the three armies was widely different. To express it in a brief and, therefore, partially exaggerated phrase, the specialty of Madras was discipline—of Bombay, readiness for service—of Bengal, a brilliant and somewhat careless dash. The amalgamation destroys at once this diversity. For the three armies Parliament substitutes one, identical throughout the empire, uniform in all things, from the distribution of commands to the stamp on dress-coat buttons. Rivalry, as between armies, is extinguished. The regiment stationed in Bombay for five years may pass the next five in Calcutta or Bangalore. That difference of organization which made the Madras army the best army for garrison, the Bengal army for the combat, and the Bombay army for foreign service, is suppressed. We are not arguing now whether these diversities were or were not beneficial. We point simply to the new identity as involving a total change in the ideas, customs, and tone of the great Indian garrison.

The change will be accelerated by the change in the administration of the staff. There is to be a staff corps, a single body of gigantic proportions, raying out officers in all directions to fill offices varying from pro-consulates to post-masterships, superintendencies in the Mahratta provinces, and commissionerships in Mysore and Oude. There cannot be three staff corps. The single army liable at any moment to transfer from one province to another cannot furnish men with specialties for local work. All capacities must be fused into one great whole, and all, allowing for differences in the languages studied, will be members of one body, animated with one esprit de corps, accustomed to look to one system as embodying the perfection of reason. All, too, must look in a greater or less degree to one authority for promotion, or, if the local patronage is retained, all will set their highest hopes on the direct service of the Central Government, the source of all permanent honours, and all really valuable promotion.

Lastly, the innovation centres all authority in one hand. Hitherto the approbation or dislike of the Supreme Government has mattered little to Colonel Jacob; his own presidency could give him leave to try a new rifle. The Governor-general might consider Colonel Cotton a dreamer without influencing his weight as consulting engineer for Southern India. The innovation largely modifies this independence. The staff corps must be selected by the central authority. All really valuable appointments must be left in its hands; all for which men in India strive, rapid reputation, swift promotion, must be dependent on its fiat. Sir C. Wood argued justly against the charge that the amalgamation would limit the power of the Governor-general. Amalgamation may even widen his authority, and intensify its action; but he wisely kept silence on the position of the governors and lieutenant-governors. Their authority at least will suffer inconceivably. They, at all events, cease to be the sole distributors of reward in their own dominions. The result will be a centralization such as even India has never yet witnessed, a centralization which will make the Central Government sole military, and almost sole civil executive. The Indian scheme of administration for a century, organized on the principle of diversity, will in twenty years be homologous. In 1880 the man who left India in 1860 will recognise nothing—not even the external framework of the system to which he was accustomed.

As if this great change were not enough, all other branches of the executive are sentenced to pulverisation. The Civil Service, but for the overtalkativeness of the session, would by this time have been thrown open. The judges are to be replaced by barristers of five years' standing. The council of colleagues is to be supplanted by a cabinet of secretaries. The Legislative Chamber is, as a necessary consequence, to be completely remodelled. The European theory of finance is already introduced. The use of English is probably at hand, and in ten more years the mighty empire, the peculium or close of the East India Company, will be in all externals, in policy, in administration, and in difficulties a tropical colony of the Crown. The new policy may be for the good of India, it certainly is inevitable, but whether good or evil, it at all events involves a revolution.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

At length, at the far end of the Session, we are presented with the usual annual statement of the finances of India, and a more unsatisfactory one it would be hard to imagine. To use a homely phrase, the candle is being burnt at both ends. In India the dangerous experiment is to be tried of a vastly increased taxation, while in this country the Indian revenue is to be supplemented by a loan of three millions sterling. It is true, Sir Charles Wood asks only for power to raise that sum in the event of its being found necessary, but no man in his senses can seriously regard this proviso as anything more than a means of "making things pleasant." It will, indeed, be an agreeable surprise to all parties, except perchance to a few capitalists, to be informed next Session that this authority to borrow money has remained a dead letter; that it has been simply what it purports to be—a collateral security, to which there has been no occasion to have recourse. That the probability of such a joyful announcement being made is very small, will be seen from Sir Charles Wood's own estimate of the receipts and expenditure for the current financial year. The deficit for 1858-59, it appears, amounted to £14,187,000, and for 1859-60 to £9,981,000, making a total deficit of £24,168,000 for the two years. The prospect for 1860-61 is, however, somewhat less discouraging, though still far from re-assuring. The income being estimated at £37,762,000, and the expenditure—including £1,276,000 for guaranteed interest on railways—to £45,234,000, there remains a deficiency of £7,472,000, for the liquidation of which extraordinary means are to be adopted. In the first place, a tax of four per cent. is to be levied on all Indian incomes—with a few exceptions—of £240 a year and upwards. Then there is to be a license tax on trades and professions, and one for dealing in tobacco, while various alterations have been made in the Customs' duties. But from all these different sources of assumed ultimate wealth and certain present disaffection, it is not anticipated that more than one million sterling will be realised during the current year. This leaves a balance of six millions and a-half on the wrong side of the sheet, to cover which Government propose to lay their hands on whatever surplus will be remitted to this country from the seven millions expected to be paid into the Treasury by the Railway Commissioners in India, after deducting the amount required during the year for the construction of railways. But as even this discounting of future resources is likely to prove insufficient to fill up the chasm, Sir Charles Wood has applied for and obtained power to raise £3,000,000 by way of loan in this country, though not guaranteed by the Imperial Government. If this were positively the last time that the Indian revenue would require adventitious aid from English capitalists, we might be disposed to accept the present necessity with a sigh of resignation, though it must be remembered that this temporary convenience is purchased by a permanent charge of at least £120,000 per annum,—but we shrewdly suspect that the same process will have to be repeated for the ensuing year. Already the deficit for 1861-62 is estimated at upwards of three millions, after making a very large allowance for the revenue which the new taxes are likely to yield; and it does not appear that Sir Charles has taken into account the two or three millions he proposes to abstract—well, to borrow—from the railway funds. It is quite impossible that the system of tinkering and soldering by means of loans and anticipations will ever restore the annual balance of the Indian finances. Every new loan increases the ultimate difficulty, and merely staves off the evil hour for a year or two. There is but one way of equalising expenditure with receipts if the latter can be made to cover the former, and that is by reducing the former to the level of the latter. This, we are aware, is never a popular method with persons in power. It is apt to make enemies, or at least to alienate friends, and no public man cares to increase the number of his opponents, or to diminish that of his supporters. That a very considerable reduction, however, may be effected, we believe on the authority of Lord Elphinstone as well as of Sir Charles Trevelyan, to whose opinions Ministers attached such great importance in the debates on the local army question. During the last three years the public expenditure has increased under every head to an immense amount, so that it is not merely to a reduction of the army that we are entitled to demand, but also the introduction of a more economical system into every department of the Government. But so long as scarce forty members can be found to listen to the annual exposition of the Budget it is idle to expect that the Indian authorities will much concern themselves about the ways and means. Their business, it seems, is to spend the public money as lavishly as possible, while that of the Secretary of State is to make good their shortcomings by taking from empty benches power to raise an annual loan. It is a pleasant game enough while it lasts, but the reaction will be found rather painful, for what is sport to the dispensers of the revenue is serious work to those who find that revenue. As long as a man can pay his taxes from his annual wages he may grumble, but he will submit; but compel him to break in upon his humble hoardings, and it were safer to rob a tigress of her cubs. This, however, is what the Indian Government proposes to do—with what result remains to be seen.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—AUGUST 10.

EUROPEAN FORCES (INDIA) BILL.

The Duke of ARGYLL having moved to resolve that the European Forces (India) Bill was of such urgency as to call for immediate consideration, moved the second reading of the Bill. He alluded to the necessity for passing the present measure, which had been carried by an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons, consisting of all political parties, and he therefore did not expect any great opposition from their lordships. At great length he pointed out that the proposed change of combining the relatively speaking small European force of the late East India Company with the regiments of the line was far less extensive than it would have been had the Government decided on establishing a European force in India totally distinct from the regular army.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH strongly protested against the Bill, as it was of a very dangerous character. It would destroy the efficiency of the European army in India, as it would be impossible to obtain under the provisions of the present Bill such a class of officers as had been trained under the old system. The Bill, too, was not in accordance with the proclamation issued to the natives of India on the transfer of that country from the East India Company's rule to that of the Queen's.

Lord DE GREY and RUSSELL supported the motion at considerable length.

The Duke of CAMBRIDGE had considered this question with the greatest care, and having consulted many military men in whose opinions he placed the highest confidence, had come to the conclusion that this great question should be settled in the mode proposed by the Government. He could not agree with Lord Ellenborough that the proposed change would in any way deteriorate the future class of officers; in his opinion, it would rather add to the efficiency of the service. One of the advantages which would arise from the present Bill was that a large body of well-tried officers would be added to the officers of the British army, and obviate a difficulty which occurred in the Crimean war concerning the employment of Indian officers. In conclusion he vindicated the Horse Guards from alleged possible abuse of patronage, and in reference to the treatment of Indian officers, who, he asserted, had met with the most considerate treatment, and had, in fact, obtained the greatest share of public honours.

Lord DERBY was sorry he could not entertain the sanguine expectations of either the Duke of Argyll or the Duke of Cambridge as to the results of this measure. One great objection to it was the confiction of opinions on the subject, especially as all those persons connected with India wished to preserve the present state of things, and only those connected with the regular army were anxious for the present measure. While expressing a doubt as to the wisdom of the amalgamation of the two armies, he wished it to be distinctly understood that he did not advocate a divided command or responsibility as to the army in India. He thought, however, that great advantages would arise from having a local force for local purposes, which it would be desirable from time to time to renovate with fresh blood. Now, this Bill was not so much for amalgamating as for destroying the local force, and he thought, before such a plan was sanctioned by the House, the House ought to know what the Government proposed to substitute for that force, and how they intended to meet the difficulties they had created. Another question of which they had had no information was as to the system of promotion. Was that of seniority or that of purchase to be introduced? How, also, was the promotion of the native officers to be regulated? However, he supposed that the Government had well matured their plans, and were acting on positive and good information, and he should, therefore, leave the responsibility of this great and dangerous measure with them, in preference to assuming it himself by voting against the second reading.

Lord CLYDE wholly concurred with what had fallen from the Duke of Cambridge, and strongly and briefly impressed upon the House the necessity of unity in an army as to its command and its discipline, a state of things which did not exist in the present local force in India.

Lord GRANVILLE defended the Bill, and assured the House that, although the details of the scheme and the means for carrying it out had not been introduced into the Bill, the Government had well considered and matured those most essential parts of the measure. It was absolutely necessary to decide this matter one way or the other as soon as possible, in order to do away with the anxiety caused by the present unsettled state of the question. He sincerely hoped that there would be no division upon the Bill.

The Bill was then read a second time.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Sir DE L. EVANS asked whether the Secretary for India would have any objection to communicate to the House the names of the commissioners appointed to consider the question of the amalgamation of the local force in India with the Queen's troops, and also the letter of instruction furnished to the commission on that subject.

Sir C. WOOD said it would perhaps be satisfactory that he should state at once the names of the officers composing the commission which had been appointed to consider the various details connected with the amalgamation. In conversation with a distinguished Indian officer it had been suggested to him that it was far better that a mixed commission of officers should meet for the purpose of considering these details. He was fortunate enough to obtain the services of his noble friend (Lord Hotham) to preside over the commission, and the officers who composed it were Sir Charles Yorke, General Clarke, of the Madras army, Brigadier General Russell, who served in India, not a member of this House; Colonel Wetherall, Colonel Melville, Adjutant-General of the Bombay army, and Colonel Norman, Adjutant-General of the Bengal army. These officers were working satisfactorily together, and great benefit would, no doubt, arise from their united consideration. With regard to the minute of instructions he thought there would be no advantage in laying it on the table. It was intended that the commission should inquire into the various questions which would arise, paying due regard to the just claims of Indian officers, and providing at the same time that the arrangement should be carried out as economically as possible.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The House of Commons having resolved itself into a committee upon the East India Loan, the House consisting at that time of less than forty members,

Sir C. WOOD, in moving a resolution enabling the Secretary of State in Council of India to raise money in the United Kingdom for the service of the Government of India, after touching upon a few preliminary points, proceeded to show the state of the Indian finances. Taking the last two years together, he had last August estimated the aggregate deficiency at £23,988,000, and the actual deficit in those years turned out to be £24,168,000, a difference of only £180,000. The deficiency of Indian revenue for the present year was £8,196,000, or, including guaranteed interest on railroad capital, £7,472,000. No one, he observed, could be sanguine enough to suppose that this deficiency could be met by a reduction of the military expenditure, in which, however, there had been a reduction in the last two years of this branch of the expenditure to the amount of £6,000,000. After reviewing the principal items of charge which had augmented since the year 1856-57, the pattern year, before the mutiny, he stated that, comparing the estimated amount of revenue with that of charge for the year 1861-62, the estimated deficiency would be £6,611,000. The question was how this deficiency was to be met, and, after a careful examination, he had come to the conclusion that it was impossible to effect this by a reduction of expenditure. The Government of India had resolved to meet the exigency by a system of increased taxation including an Income-tax, and, although the result of this experiment might be contemplated with some anxiety, there was no alternative, and he thought the Home Government and Parliament ought to give its best support to the Government of India. The next question was the probable produce of the new taxes. Not much could be expected to be obtained in the present year; but, in 1861-62, it was estimated that they would yield £3,500,000; deducting this from £6,611,000, there would still be a deficiency of £3,111,000. This, he believed, would be eventually met by a reduction of expenditure, so that at the end of the year 1861-62, the expenditure and the revenue would be equalised. He proposed to provide for the immediate deficiency without having recourse to borrowing money by means of the balances in the Treasury, and from the payments on account of railroads in India, which would amount to £7,000,000, this year, of which £5,000,000 would be disbursed in India; and he moved the resolution empowering him to raise a sum not exceeding £3,000,000 by way of precaution only. He then entered into details regarding a paper currency, railroads, public works and improvements in India, revenue settlements, the new arrangements made in Oude and the Punjab, the treatment of the talookdars, and other matters of a social and economical nature, concluding with a confident anticipation that in time the improvement of the country and the augmentation of its resources would make our rule of India the means of conferring a lasting benefit upon the people.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR considered the statement of Sir C. Wood most unsatisfactory, contending that the Government had not exerted their endeavours to keep down the expenditure to the lowest point. He discussed at much length, and in a tone of severe criticism, the financial statements of Sir Charles, the topics introduced into his speech, as well as its omissions of such subjects as the civil service, law reform, and the sale of land, accompanying his strictures with suggestions of his own. He condemned the proceedings of Sir C. Wood in relation to Sir C. Trevelyan, and complained generally of his mode of carrying on the business of India.

Mr. W. EWART was of opinion that the military expenditure of India might be diminished by the reduction of the army and the establishment of an efficient police.

Mr. GREGSON approved the course pursued by the Indian Government of meeting the deficiency by new taxes, and hoped and believed that, by degrees, the revenue and expenditure would equal each other without further taxation.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY, on the other hand, thought the state of the Indian finances most alarming. One of the great dangers, he observed, was the doubtful foundation upon which these financial statements rested, as Mr. Wilson had discovered. Much depended upon the composition of the army. There was, in his opinion, danger of losing India by obnoxious taxes.

Mr. ROEBUCK complained of the principle upon which compensation for losses during the mutiny had been made as unjust.

Sir DE LACY EVANS asked what could be the object of keeping up such an immense military establishment in India, native as well as European, now that the mutiny was extinct, and the people were disarmed; and how it was possible that, with such an establishment, the finances could be relieved?

Mr. VANSITTART doubted whether the produce of the Income-tax would be so large as Sir C. Wood anticipated; at the same time, he did not believe the collection of the tax, unpopular as it was, would be attended with any difficulty.

Mr. CRAWFORD threw out suggestions for a modification of the system of Indian railway guarantees, and made a few cursory remarks upon subjects referred to in the speech of Sir C. Wood.

Mr. T. G. BARING replied to Mr. Seymour, and said with respect to the military expenditure, that the Indian Government were fully convinced of the necessity of reducing the army in India, and were taking every practicable means to effect its reduction, which must be a work of time.

Mr. AYRTON objected to the course of giving to the Government of India what was asked without examination, a course of unlimited credit that would produce unlimited extravagance. He urged the abolition of what he termed the "mock Parliament," the Legislative Council of India, and the establishment of separate Governments in India.

Some observations were made by Mr. HADFIELD, Mr. KINNAIRD, Mr. LYGON, and Major PARKER; Sir C. Wood gave a general reply, and the debate, the greater part of which was listened to by not more than thirty members, was brought to a close by the resolution being agreed to.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—August 14.

INDIAN BILLS.

The European Forces (India) Bill, after a short discussion between Lord LYVEDEN, the Duke of ARGYLL, Lord WYNFORD, and Lord DE GRAY, was read a third time and passed.

The India Stock Transfer Bill was also read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—August 14.

THE INDIA LOAN.

The Report on the East India Loan was brought up and agreed to, after a brief conversation.

EAST INDIA LOAN.

On the order for the third reading of the East India Loan Bill,

Mr. BUXTON complained of the unnecessarily large army maintained in India.

After some remarks by Mr. HADFIELD and Mr. H. SEYMOUR,

Sir C. WOOD, in reply, said the Government in India were best able to decide what was the amount of force necessary for India; they thought that 80,000 was the minimum number of European troops, and he was not prepared, in the face of their opinion, to withdraw any portion of the force now in India. He had, he said, repeatedly urged upon the Indian Government the necessity of economy and the reduction of all expenditure not absolutely required.

The Bill was then read a third time and passed.

BOOKS.

From London to Lucknow: with Memoranda of Mutinies, Marches, Flights, Fights, and Conversations. By a Chaplain in H.M.'s Indian Service. In Two Vols. London: James Nisbet and Co.

So long as Mr. Mackay confines himself to the description of what fell under his own eyes, his letters are full of interesting matter told in an easy and natural manner. In fact, his chief fault has been the desire to make two volumes, where he had materials only for one. He has therefore been obliged to supply the deficiency with telegrams and letters that have already appeared in the public prints. His own narrative relates to the advance of Sir Colin Campbell into Oude for the last time, and the final capture of Lucknow, during which operations the author officiated as chaplain to the cavalry brigade. He joined the force at Cawnpore while General Windham was engaged with the Gwalior contingent, and experienced a fair share of hardships and hairbreadth escapes during his "church militancy." Though rather late in the day, this cheerfully-written addition to the mutiny literature will no doubt command a large circle of readers.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS

PURE AND MIXED.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The works selected, with the approval of Government, for first operations, consist of—irrigating and Navigable Canals throughout the rich and extensive Deltas of Orissa (in Lower Bengal), and the Districts between those Deltas and the Port and City of Calcutta.

These works have been already investigated by Engineer Officers in the service of Government, of known ability and experience, who have pronounced them to be among the most important, and in promise the most profitable of their character in India; in fact, the present Secretary of State for India in Council in March last addressed to the Government of India an official communication, calling attention to the importance of constructing these very works, and stating that Her Majesty's Government were prepared to carry them into effect as soon as the plans and estimates were approved by the Local Government. A desire to see an unguaranteed Company established, he states, led to their concession to this Company.

The main sources of profit will be:—

Firstly.—The sale of water to the Government for the Irrigation of Land.

Secondly.—Tolls levied in respect of the use of the Canals and Water-ways by the public.

To these may be added as available but subsidiary means of additional returns:—

1. The working of the canals by the Company by the conveyance of passengers, animals, and goods thereon.

2. Rent and other income derived from mills and factories established on the banks of the various channels.

3. Cultivation and sale of timber and other produce raised upon the land of the Company. And,

4. The supply of water for general purposes.

Although these latter are now put forth as secondary only, they should by no means be lost sight of; the first of them has been already ascertained to be highly productive in India, and, by the official accounts of the existing canals in the north-western provinces of Bengal, the profits derived from mills, timber, and bank produce represent a large per centage upon outlay.

The following returns realised by the Government on existing works of Irrigation in India will afford some idea of the highly remunerative character of such works, if selected with ordinary judgment.

The works connected with the Coleroon River cost £21,700, and for sixteen years returned a net profit of £118 per cent. per annum.

The Fordwah Canal cost £27,000, and paid £5,000 in the first year. Another Canal in Sindh paid £58 per cent. on its cost during the first year, and a third, which cost £3,600, produced £5,000 in the first year.

The Western Jumna Canal has paid £5 per cent., and produced a clear surplus of £1,000,000, the cost of construction being £51,158.

The works in Maiwara produced a return of 265 per cent. per annum.

These are not exceptional instances.

Terms of a very favourable character have been arranged with the Secretary of State as the basis of a final agreement to be made with the Government of India at Calcutta.

It is proposed to limit the issue of capital in the first instance to the sum of £1,000,000, divided into 50,000 shares of £20 each, and to take a first deposit of £1 per share only, with a further payment of £1 per share when the final agreement has been concluded. This will, it is believed, suffice to support effective operations for the first twelve months. Of all subsequent calls, full and timely notice will be given to each shareholder.

A full prospectus and form of application for shares may now be had upon request at the Company's Offices, 27, Cannon-street, E.C., London; or at the Company's Bankers, Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie, and Co., No. 1, Pall-mall East.

The site embraces a main frontage of 450 feet, by a depth of 80 feet, on the south side of Victoria-street, close to the Abbey, and immediately opposite to the Westminster Palace Hotel, and two other frontages in the rear, of an equal length and depth, thus making the entire frontage 900 feet, which will be leased to the Company for the term of 27 years, commencing from Michaelmas, 1860.

The average rental from 184 rooms will be £49 each, and give a gross annual return of £19,360

Leaving a net profit of £13,360

Or upwards of 10 per cent. upon the capital of £130,000.

The above return is not subject to the many contingencies to which the profits arising from undertakings of a strictly commercial character are exposed.

Applications for shares must be accompanied by a deposit of 10s. per share, in part payment of the deposit of £1 per share. Should the amount so paid exceed £1 per share on the number of shares allotted, the surplus will be returned; but if it fall short, the balance must be paid on allotment. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—SPASMS, FLATULENCY, CONSTIPATION.—So many persons suffer from these disorders that a description of them is unnecessary; but the recommendation to take Holloway's Pills for the cure of disordered digestion will be repaid with gratitude by all who give them a single trial. No medicine will so safely and speedily restore a deranged stomach or torpid liver to order. No other preparation will so effectually and healthily correct digestion so that spasms, flatulency, and other torments of dyspepsia cannot, by any possibility, arise; or if present will be soon cured. The power of these Pills in removing acridity of the stomach, sick head-ache, biliousness, diarrhoea, dysentery, and debility is wonderful. They act as tonics, alteratives, and general regulators of the frame.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Bilious Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BARCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 14d. and 2s. 9d.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We regret to say that our private advices from Bengal, received by the Calcutta Mail of the 20th July, are most unsatisfactory. The drought has continued for eight months, and from the Sutej to the Kurunnappa the scarcity is assuming the proportions of a famine. In some districts the people are already perishing, and the sale of children, the last terrible sign of Indian pauperism, has commenced. In all, the money-dealers are collecting their funds, cancelling orders for European goods, and preparing for a monopoly of food. The immediate result has been a total stagnation of trade in Calcutta. The warehouses are choked with goods, and sales can be effected only at a loss of twenty-five per cent. It is in the midst of distress unequalled for years that the new measures of taxation will be enforced. Already there are mutterings of popular resistance, and the people of Oude, where the tax has been enforced, complain loudly of oppression.

The political horizon is as cloudy as the mercantile. The Income-tax has passed, but the Tobacco Bill has been deprived of all its searching character, and the Licence-tax will probably be rejected. The Council and all the higher officials oppose it furiously. Nothing is heard of the Currency Bill, and a feeling of distrust is springing up towards Mr. Wilson. It is said he lacks organising force, and cannot overcome the resistance of boards and commissioners. He has awoke at last to the frightful increase of civil expenditure, but has only appointed a commission to inquire, a task which will waste twelve months. Add to these facts that Hyderabad, with its Mussulman population and Arab army, is drifting rapidly into anarchy, and we have reason sufficient, if not for apprehension, at least for cautious watchfulness.

The Indigo Commission was expected to close its sittings at Kishnagur in the course of another week, when it would return to Calcutta and receive any supplementary evidence that might be offered. Thus far the planters have been fully exonerated from the charges of oppression and cruelty brought against them, and the missionaries and a few civilians as clearly convicted of having adopted and circulated all sorts of wild stories to their prejudice, without first taking the trouble to inquire into their authenticity. It has also been shown that the recent outrages originated in the belief entertained by the ryots that it was the wish of the Lieut.-governor that the cultivation of indigo should cease throughout Bengal.

The departure from India of Lieut.-general Sir James Outram, G.C.B., has called forth expressions of goodwill from all classes of the community. In Calcutta alone a thousand pounds were subscribed in one day for the purpose of presenting the veteran hero with a testimonial of the esteem in which he is universally held, by natives as well as by Europeans.

The Italians in Calcutta have held a meeting to express their sympathy with Garibaldi and the Sicilian patriots, and have subscribed 600 rupees to the fund.

The Knighthood of the Bath has been conferred on the puppet Maharajah of Nepal.

The Nawab of Moorshedabad, it is said, proposes very shortly to visit England.

The valuable collection of books and manuscripts constituting the library of the old East India Company will be removed by the 15th of next month to what was formerly the office of the Board of Control, in Cannon-row. The museum is also bound to the westward, and will be placed in Fife House, near the United Service Institution in Scotland-yard.

From China we learn that Lord Elgin and Baron Gros had arrived at Shanghai. The allied forces had reached their respective places of rendezvous in the Gulf of Pecheli.

BENGAL.

THE GOVERNMENTAL POLICY AND THE INTERLOPERS.

Although the Arms Bill has, through the exertion of the judges of the Supreme Court, been stripped of its most offensive clauses, the principle on which it is founded remains untouched. The policy of the Government of India remains unchanged with regard to Englishmen settling in India. So far as we can discern this policy, it is hostile to Europeans; it is one which all Europeans now settled in India think hostile, and which all who propose to invest capital in India, and either establish themselves or their friends and relations, will believe to be hostile. We think the time has now come for the Government of India to declare clearly and distinctly what its intentions are for the future with regard to Europeans settling in this country; what the policy is to be, that all may know what they have to expect in coming to India; that, in fact, they may know what to accept and what to avoid. Englishmen who came to India under the Company's Government, came as enemies to that corporation; they accepted their position, submitting to necessity, but remaining bitterly hostile as they bent under its intolerable yoke. They were not recognised as subjects, but as equals who entered into a treaty, and submitted to a power they could not resist, to gain their own objects. Under this treaty they were not permitted to hold lands or to be subject to courts, or to have any position whatever which would give them a hold in the country, and change their character from equals, who had temporarily given up their rights, to that of subjects claiming a right to remain in the country and obey its laws. The East India Company, in their endeavours to discourage the interloper, actually raised a privileged class, and when their own privileges were curtailed, were very much surprised to find that out of their old opponents they had created a very troublesome order, difficult to deal with, and who, now that the despotic powers of the company were withdrawn and the treaties abrogated, remained in possession of a so-called privilege they would by no means yield without a struggle. But the position of the English has altogether changed since the absolute annexation of India to the Crown of England, and the declaration that the Queen of England is Queen of India. It is now but fair and just to them, and those whom Mr. Wilson wishes to encourage to settle in India, that the Government should declare its policy, so that all may know what they have to expect in the future; and those who are already in India may make their arrangements accordingly. The principle of equality before the law—the principle so frequently alluded to in council—is that to be introduced at once and universally in every Act, and before any code of laws is prepared or proper courts are provided in which Englishmen can have confidence? Are Englishmen to be tried by Mohammedans and Hindoos in foreign languages, with laws translated from English into these foreign languages? Are Englishmen to be subject to Courts over which Assamese, Burmese, Bengalese, Colles, Suntuks, Ooryas, or Bheels preside? Is trial by jury to be denied to the Englishman living in the interior? Whatever is to be, for the sake of those whom the Government are inveigling by the promise of lands in the Tea districts, and coaxing into settling all over the country, assuring them that they are highly valued, that they will strengthen Government as settlers, should be clearly explained, that all may know what they are to expect as subjects residing in the country. This will be much better for all parties, for with a clearly defined policy regarding Europeans, who venture to come to the country and live under it, can have no reason to complain if they find it unpleasant; if they find they are living amongst a hostile people, helpless, and treated as having no claim for other protection than is extended to the whole population, they have accepted the conditions and must be contented. Those who do not like the prospect can make arrangements to leave and seek their fortunes elsewhere. In thus making it clear what the design of Government may be for the future, Englishmen in the country will be enabled to meet it, and make their representations to Parliament and the people of England. When the policy is finally decided on, there can be no further resistance or heart-burnings on the question. Though no Englishman in his senses thinks that India is to be governed for the benefit of the few Englishmen in India, and the phrase is only one of those happy tricks of party which create a well-sounding cry to lead the unthinking away; yet whilst so believing, it is quite as evident that India is not to be governed at the expense of England or without benefit to her sons. If India is to gain by their residence, it is only some advantage which will tempt the Englishman to seek her shores. This is not a question for the people of India to answer, but for England who has conquered and is resolved on holding India. Whilst, then, the Government of India is holding out a bait to Englishmen, it is intolerable that a hidden barb should be preparing for the unhappy settler, which will make him complain all his life that he has been deceived. In the Presidency towns the question has not that importance which it has for those living in the Mofussil; the Europeans can live and carry on their business as merchants with comparative indifference to any policy, though they will no doubt deplore it much, if the result should be the gradual withdrawal of all the respectable classes of Europeans from the business of the interior, and the introduction of a class who will still further make the people regret the class of Englishmen who formerly settled amongst them.—Englishman.

INDIA FOR ITSELF.

The first fruit of taxation is economy, economy in the subject who pays and in the executive Government which spends and so undergoes a new responsibility. Even without a representative body to check expenditure and promote imperial economy, more powerful than the Legislative Council, it will henceforth not be difficult for the Indian Government to resist any attempt to apply its revenues to purely English wars with which it has no concern. That such an attempt will be made is most probable from the experience of the past, from the new military relation to England caused by the amalgamation of the armies, and from the probability of complications in Central Asia, and of a European war extending itself to eastern seas. The Indian Government has now two unanswerable arguments for resisting the pressure of the Home authorities. The Act of August 1858 expressly provides that "except for preventing or repelling actual invasion of her Majesty's Indian possessions, or under other sudden and urgent necessity, the revenue of India shall not, without the consent of Parliament, be applicable to defray the expenses of any military operation carried on beyond the external frontiers of such possessions by her Majesty's forces charged upon such revenue." But more effective than this is the fact that Indian money spent on English wars would be the fruit of financial measures which are justified only on the ground of their imperious necessity for the salvation of India itself. The moment an English ministry touches a rupee of Indian revenue for purposes other than Indian, it gives an imperial guarantee for the debt, it falsifies all its declarations through the mouth of Mr. Wilson. Our own frontiers are now continuous with those of nature. Only the most frightful anarchy will justify our absorbing the three great States in the centre of our dominions, Indore, Gwalior, and Hyderabad.

There is a distinct pledge that the money we are now lavishing on the China war will be repaid, and meanwhile it represents our contribution to the home charges for India. Except local emements we have no war to fear in Hindostan. As yet the black cloud of a French war in the East is no bigger than a man's hand. That would upset all our calculations, and strain all our resources. But with that exception, India, like Europe, seems likely to enter on a forty years' peace, when taxation, commerce, and a despotic form of constitutionalism shall go hand in hand, and shall do as much for her as the Reform Bill and Sir Robert Peel have done for England.

But that we have reason for jealous watchfulness over the application of our hard-won revenues is evident when we consider that nearly half our present debt has been created by wars not necessary for the prosperity or extension of our empire in the East. By the returns of 1836 and '37 it was shown, that if we would only keep our hands from needless fighting, we might save some crore and a-half annually, even as our income then stood. With the increase since then made to it, in addition to this we might have had four or five crores annually at our credit, and at this rate, and by this time, not only have paid off the whole of our debt, but have been enabled to commence and complete the whole of our railway lines now in process of construction. Colonel Sykes stated before the committee in 1852 that up to that date the India-house had been kept in the dark as to the actual charges of the Chinese and Afghan wars of 1838-42, and of the Burmese war then in progress, so that we must be thrown very much on a surmise. Of the expenses of the annexation of Scinde and Gwalior campaigns of 1843 and the Punjab war of 1845-46 we can barely form a conjecture. The Murree Hill raid of 1844-45, when we had 6,000 men four months in the field, most probably cost a million or so. The Kholapore war of 1844-45, when 7,000 men were occupied eight months, must have cost considerably more than this. Postponing an attempt to estimate for the present, we come to the following fact:—In 1842, when Sir Robert Peel introduced the Income-tax he set down the charges of the Afghan war betwixt 1838-41 at fourteen millions. The war of retribution between March and November, 1842, with the loss of our treasure and munitions at Cabul, could scarcely be set down at less than three millions—bringing up the charges of the Dooranee Alliance to seventeen millions. Scinde, during the first eighteen months of our rule, putting together the charges of the conquest and those of the Murree expedition at the end of the following year, may be safely set down at three millions at least. The gross annual charges of Scinde in excess of income have within the past seventeen years amounted, as shown by the accounts, to above nine millions—giving the grand total of twelve millions at least. William Napier called it "the tail of the Afghan storm." In place of the Dooranee Alliance forming any justification of the conquest, it afforded the strongest warning against it. In the words of the Simla Proclamation of October, 1842, our real policy was then "to keep the rivers of the Punjab and Indus and the mountain passes beyond between the British army and an enemy approaching from the West, instead of betwixt the army and its supplies." We are altogether at sea as to the charges of the Gwalior campaign of 1843, and the Sikh war of 1845-46, nor are we sure that either could have been avoided. Sir Charles Napier's threat in April, 1845, of invading the Punjab, provoked the Sikhs to cross the Sutlej next December, and rendered an attack on them inevitable. The second Sikh war of 1848-49 was a corollary from the first: the two probably cost seven or eight millions; but this sum was really due by India. In 1852 Sir James Melville stated in his evidence, that thirty millions sterling had been spent within the previous twenty years on wars in India, twenty millions of which had been added to our debt. The Bill for the Burmese war had not then been rendered; we had 8,000 men a twelvemonth in the field, and may set it down at some three millions. To this falls to be added our share of the charges of the China war in 1839—amounting to some two millions, but not brought to book till 1854. With the charges of the Persian war of 1856-57, amounting to about five millions, our bill, therefore, will stand as follows, dropping the Gwalior and two Sikh campaigns and those of Kolapore and Burmah:—

Scinde, from 1843 to 1860 ...	12,000,000
The Chinese and Persian Gulf Wars, 1838 to 1843, and 1856 to 1857 ...	5,000,000

But one-half of this, twenty millions or more, was money borrowed at the rate of five per cent., and if we assume the interest of this to have gone back for fifteen years only, and take no account of compound interest, we shall have a matter of seven or eight millions to add to the little bill, which is charged on the revenues of India without one shadow of justification, excepting that the law permits that it should be so. The wars of Lord Auckland and Lord Ellenborough were devised and undertaken when the Governors-general were in the North West Provinces with absolute power. In September, 1850, Sir John C. Hobhouse stated that he had ordered the Affghan war—but that, unknown at the time to the Board of Control, Lord Auckland had intended to recommend it to them. The great majority of the members of the Calcutta Council were opposed to these wars. They were protested against and denounced by nearly every member of the India-house. But what of that? The Act of 1775 had made the Board of Control supreme, and if the whole revenues of India, including the dividends of the proprietors, had been appropriated for Imperial purposes, it was as the first President of the Board of Control, Dundas, boasted at the time, quite within the compass of the Act.

With the express declaration of the Act of 1858, and the still stronger argument of an obnoxious Income-tax, it will be the fault of the tax-payers of India if the history of the next twenty years has facts like these to record. To us, India is valuable only as it increases the glory of England by adding to her military prestige, and enabling her to play her part as the Sovereign of Southern Asia. But to risk a financial deficit again by allowing an English minister to rifle the Indian purse, is to risk our eastern empire, to strip England of half her glory.—Friend of India.

THE BENGALIEE.

"Fiat Experimentum in Corpore Vili."—As it seems to have been determined that our nostrums, recipes, and infallible cures for a diseased constitution, which have in successive ages purged and strengthened the hardy Britisher, and have made him the tough and independent citizen whom we see before us, shall be tried upon the fortunate natives of India, it is certainly just as well that we should begin with Bengal. The Bengalee rather likes our political pharmacopoeia than otherwise, will swallow readily all that we administer, and feels really something more like a man afterwards than he did before. And, if the effervescent mixtures get into his head, cause him to annoy his physicians by disorderly and troublesome behaviour, nothing is easier than to trip up young Bengal, tie him on to a shutter, and lay him down in some cool corner of Government-house until he comes round. Whereas, the incautious administration of exciting political drinks to the stalwart patients of the North West, to warlike and comparatively courageous Pathans, Rajpoots, and Seikhs, would be comparatively more dangerous and ticklish experimentalism. Therefore, the announcement that the English Government are thinking of establishing an open Legislative and Representative Council in Calcutta affects not too severely our nervous system. The Bengalees will have it all to themselves for some time to come. The Baboos have the impudence to pretend to represent Hindustan, and in this matter we in the North West are fain to give them rope enough, so long as they will keep their representative puppet-show from travelling beyond Benares, and do not try to interfere with us practically. A Legislative Representative Council for Bengal! Truly the nation has progressed rapidly since a century back; their apparent position in Hindustan has become completely reversed. They who were the lowest now call themselves the highest and first. They have seemingly made as much progress as England since the Heptarchy. And young Bengal is naturally pleased with himself, being perfectly sure that all this is the fruit of his own heroic endeavours and aspirations, wherefore he congratulates himself upon his great intellectual capacity and enormous mental superiority over the other natives of India.

The manner in which England is heaping her political privileges and institutions upon her Indian subjects is very characteristic, and the result will evolve phenomena worthy of consideration. The Bengalees naturally fancy that they are fully entitled to all that they can get, and that it is all the fruit of their meritorious progress in science and education. As the taste for political excitement is not dulled by gratification, it is not extraordinary to find that the more they obtain, the more clamorous they become and will become, and of course more impatient of any assumption of superiority on our part. Now, though we own that we have not much sympathy with young Bengal, yet we cannot help remonstrating at this unfair treatment of him. We are leading the poor youth on to his own destruction. We are teaching him to believe that a superficial education, and a sort of exercise of his imitative powers in copying the tone of our political writers and mimicking the proceedings of our national assemblies, will enable him to assert and maintain his rights and claims to British freedom and independence. Whereas we all must see that it is the most heartless joke upon the Baboos, and that as soon as they bring their pretensions into collision with our real and dominant superiority, we shall be forced in self defence to trip them up and give them a mortifying tumble. It is very hard upon them, because we shall have encouraged them to make themselves ridiculous—just as it is not fair to give a boy champagne and then whip him for getting tipsy. We completely deceive the Bengalee by the wonderful liberality and benevolence of our Government, and he characteristically takes all advantage of these qualities. He has discovered, much to his astonishment, that he may abuse the Sirkar and its officers in the public papers without any unpleasant results.

Anonymous attacks suit him admirably, and he works that engine with vigour. He has found out that he may even sneer at our religion—that he may revile English settlers generally at public meetings, and that Government will prevent the interlopers from thrashing the breath out of his carcase. He sees that he may hold public meetings and oppose in every way Government measures—above all, that he is not contradicted when he declares his undoubted right to object to taxation, to have a voice in the election of representatives, and a share in the government of India. He observes that the English enjoy these privileges, and education has taught him that he has a right to demand them, while no one tells him that he is not to have them. On the contrary, through mistaken kindness, and to stop his intolerable noise, he gets every now and then fresh political sugar-plums to suck.

Will any one have the boldness to tell us fairly what the logical consequence of these things will be? We are teaching the Bengalees to assert their grand political rights, and are indulging in all their dreams of enlightened progress to any extent, yet we carefully conceal from them, and they are far too young in the world's history to perceive that national independence and liberty, merely by the consent and indulgence of a dominant race, is a mockery and deception. At present we are giving them line, but we can pull the string at any moment, and the time must come when we shall be obliged to do so, lest our friend escape altogether, and then the pull must be obeyed unless indeed the string breaks. We must check the Bengalees at some point in their career, or else they will get beyond our control. And if they do, the latter state of these unfortunates will be far worse than the first. For the warlike tribes of the North will pour down upon the intellectual and educated millionaires of rich Bengal, and the inhabitants will discover to their sorrow that they had been following will-o'-the-wisp in their pursuit after national independence, and that all the blessings and privileges of civilisation have no other given basis or root save in the physical courage, resolution, and bodily prowess of a nation.

The supposition that the Bengalees are capable of turning the tables upon us is of course an absurdity, and, therefore, as we observed at the commencement, this political experimenting is comparatively harmless if confined to that region. Yet, if representative assemblies and elections by suffrage be really introduced, we cannot allow the Bengalees for a moment to keep up the ludicrous assumption that they represent anything more than a rich province of Hindostan. The North-west and the Punjab, the grand historical seats of empire, must take their share in the movement, and will soon reduce the pretensions of the Bengalees to their proper level. But herein lies the danger. The whole of India will learn political combination, the arts of factious opposition, and the enormous power of thwarting and paralysing the Government by mere constitutional methods, which their numerical superiority and national ingenuity will give to them. The British Government will find itself alone on the Treasury Bench, with all India in the opposition, and the leader of the opposition will move and carry the vote of non-confidence in the Britishers. Whereupon we come to a dead lock, out of which we are only extricated by a shameful resort to that old exploded, unconstitutional, barbarous institution, the British bayonet, and—"As you were."—Mofussilite.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY.—The dividend of the Oriental Gas Company for the last year was 3 per cent., free of Income-tax. Gas makes its way in Calcutta but slowly. The apathy of the natives, in whose hands house property chiefly is, and the changing nature of European society, operate against its speedy introduction.

THE RAJAH KONDEPESUR SING of Seebasagar, who has been kept at Burdwan under surveillance, is not allowed to return to his native country as he had solicited. He is a young man, and would be a mere dupe in the hands of his amlah. He may, if he likes, reside in any other district of Bengal besides Burdwan.

SPIRIT OF THE NATIVE PRESS.—A new monthly Bengali periodical has just appeared, the Jyoti-ratnakar. It gives sixteen quarto pages, with three columns each, good type and paper, for Rs. 3-4 annually. It contains abundance of tolerable poetry on various subjects, a tale of olden days, and short articles on the affairs of the day—China, Darjeeling, indigo planting, the state of Bengal.—The Bhaskar mentions that lately at Fyzabad the earth fell in on men digging a well; a number of people rushed up to remove the earth, but they found the men suffocated. A woman who went to see it, on returning to her house, what should she see but a tiger there devouring her young child! He states also that a Marwarri merchant lately at Uterpara cooking his food in a room of the bazaar saw a large hole there and poked a stick in, on withdrawing it a large snake came out and bit him on the hand; he died in ten hours, though medical aid was speedily given. The fact is, unless remedies are given at once, there is no chance of recovery from snake bites.—The Bhaskar has a long article on the Income-tax; he is in hopes that as it has been so long delayed it may not be eventually passed. He says the country is bad enough already, provisions very dear, and many only able to have a couple of handfuls of rice as their daily food. At Chandernagore a native hung himself some years ago, not being able to support his family; but if the Income-tax passes hanging will become very common. He trusts that the English editors will not advocate this tax on the poor; they feed on spirits and flesh, but a poor Hindoo is satisfied with the broth of Chingri fish.—The Bhaskar, in a long editorial on Sir C. Trevelyan, congratulates his readers on the fulfilment of his prophecy that Sir C. Trevelyan's recall, so far from being his extinction, would be his glorification, and he refers his readers to the eulogiums pronounced on Sir Charles by the House of Parliament, and the menaces held out in Parliament to Sir C. Wood in case he did not state the grounds of his recall that it would be as easy for Sir C. Wood to bring a lotus from the sky as to overcome Sir Charles Trevelyan's friends; but the real grounds of Sir Charles's dismissal was the English wanted money, and when they require this they are without shame, and no other native equals them in this grasping for money.—The Probhakur has a long editorial on the Arms Bill; in it he points out what the policy of Lord Macaulay and others was against class legislation, but now he says the stench of European prejudice is become manifest and is opposed not only to the principles of all Europeans in India, but in its inculcating partiality in the laws is a great crime. He has a long dissertation also on the probable successor to Lord Canning and on the state of East Bengal, owing to the quarrels of Zemindars, referring particularly to two individuals whose names he forbears to mention.—Hurkuru.

THE KING OF AVA.—A "Journal of Events" containing a record of Colonel Phayre's last visit to the Court of the King of Burmah at Mandalay, the new capital, has been published. The conversations between his Majesty and the Commissioner of Pegu are somewhat amusing. The first of the four interviews was of a private and unofficial character. The King was particular in his inquiries as to the health of Queen Victoria and the number of her children. He dwelt on his own friendship for the English since the last war, and asked if he had not acted as a friend when he sent Rs. 10,000 to the Relief Fund. He declared friendship to be better than gold, elephants, horses and worldly prosperity, and referred Colonel Phayre to the "Hitopades" in confirmation of his remark, promising him at the same time a copy of the work. The King was then presented with a treatise on anatomy translated into Burmese, and with a human skeleton, for which he had asked on a previous occasion. After some moralising on the uncertainty of life, he rated the Commissioner for not having studied the "550 dzats" with which he had presented him. He questioned him on the contents of the Mahardza Weng, remarking at the close,—"Phayre has studied the book well." He invited the embassy to witness the performance of the "Mahan," a drama, and to return to Mandalay when the buildings were completed. The King is one of the best scholars in Burmah.

THE NEW TAXES IN OUDE.—We (Englishman) have been very particular in making inquiries in Oude as to the working of the Income-tax scheme in the form in which it has been developed by the Chief Commissioner of that province. The letters which we have received in reply tend to but one and the same conclusion, and that is, that the new taxes have caused no excitement, except in Lucknow itself, and even there it is supposed to be instigated by the lower order of clerks. These people, with the Oude Gazette as their organ, have been engaged, like the Parsees at Bombay, in getting up a vague though popular cry, in the hope thereby of screening themselves from the operation of the tax. We are assured, however, that the action which has lately been brought against that journal for libel will prove how utterly false and groundless are the complaints of oppression and tyranny in which it has lately indulged. It is a fact that throughout the district the most perfect order prevails; the people admit the legality and justice of the measure, and even the landowners are satisfied with its provisions. It was considered, indeed, in some quarters, that the method of assessment by the lump was not so theoretically fair as that introduced by Mr. Wilson, but it was also felt that, should the advantages of the latter be manifest after a short trial, it would be quite possible to revert to it. The new talookdare system was prospering, and, altogether, the condition of Oude was in the highest degree promising.

JESSORE, July 13.—Grant, Eden, Herschell, the missionaries, and the zemindars have got our ryots to rise at last, which, considering it is the middle of the manufacturing time, is no joke. Men in shoals from the Hazrapore, Beejoolie, Sericole, Neschindipore, Ramnaghur, Nohutta, and Meerungunge concerns have complained to our joint magistrates. The only concerns from which the ryots have not yet complained are Muddenderry and Babookally, but they are daily expected. The ferries and the roads towards the Magoora station are crowded, and every one asks every one he meets, "What are you going to do?" who generally replies, "Try my luck; if I can get four to six rupees a beegal more by repudiating my agreement and advances, and by offering my plant as nugdee, i. e., cash purchase, why should not I? and especially as all the factories are to be shut up after this manufacture by order of Government; the Moonsiff, who has just returned from Calcutta, says so." The managers of almost all the concerns have induced many of their ryots to go on quietly; but no sooner has one village settled down than another rises; for the masses of ryots going through the different concerns to the joint magistrate's kutcherry are upsetting the minds of the best intentioned men. Golucknath Chowdree, the Digapoteya Rajah's naib, has summoned a lot of the Rajah's ryots from the Sericole, Ramnaghur, Nohutta, Hazrapore, and Meerungunge concerns to prepare them to go up before the commissioners, and other people have sent for their ryots from the Neschindipore concern for the same purpose. The rivers, fortunately, are as yet six feet below their lowest height at this date, or one-half the plant in this part of the country would have been under water, while this delightfully destructive state of affairs is going on; in the mean time not a planter can get even half his number of vats filled. Out of fifty-two I have twelve to eighteen working, the increase or decrease being according to the daily will of the ryots; whereas there is plant enough to fill the whole complement for the next thirty days, and the produce at present is at its best, that is, about twenty seers per vat of sixty bundles, light measurement. This is only the beginning of the end, for the combination now taught the Bengalees on a grand scale is a lesson which they will never forget, and had they known it before 1858, not an Englishman nor a single white face would have been left in the country excepting in the native's Zenanas, notwithstanding the bosh some people will write of, and think that the decennial settlement kept by the Bengal Zemindars with us, which said decennial settlement was an attempt at a do by Lord Cornwallis and his advisers, and who were themselves most beautifully sold by the Zemindars. For a case in point, read that of Goroo Dass Roy v. Ram Rutton Roy, decided last year by Mr. Seyton Karr, and in which sell the Zemindars were not a little, but very greatly assisted by the Government Kanoo-ngos Ameens and the Bundobustee Omlah.—Englishman.

KANGRA.—The fourteen lots of waste land in the district of Kangra, believed to be fit for tea cultivation, were sold by auction on the 2nd July, as advertised. The whole did not realise more than Rs. 8,000, and only in two cases was there spirited competition. The fourteen lots were purchased by eight European gentlemen. The present assessment has nineteen years to run, during which no revenue will be required by the Government. After that period the land will be assessed at one rupee an acre. The average sum paid was Rs. 2-8 an acre, the price at which the coffee plantations in Ceylon were originally sold. Why not sell the land in fee-simple at once?

THE VICEREGAL PROGRESS.—The Oude Gazette states that the cost of the Governor-general's recent tour is Rs. 37,50,000.

NYNÉE TAL, June 27.—The Lieutenant-governor N. W. Provinces and staff will remain at this station up to the 10th of November next, after which date his honour's camp will proceed to Agra, where he intends to stay for some time. Dr. Clarke, the inspector of jails N. W. Provinces, accompanies the Lieutenant-governor to Agra, whence he proceeds direct to Benares, evidently to lay the foundation of the long-proposed central prison buildings. He then proceeds on a tour of inspection into the districts of Ghazepore, Goruckpore, Azimghur, Juanpore and Mirzapore. In the course of fifteen or twenty days the inspector will return to Agra, from whence he accompanies the Lieutenant-governor to Saugor and Jubbulpore. A friend writing from the Punjab says, that there was a rumour afloat in his station, to the effect that the offices of the civil auditors of the North West Provinces and of the Punjab are to be abolished, and that there will be only one audit office at Calcutta, which will transact the business of all the presidencies, Madras and Bombay excepted. How far this report is correct we, being placed at such an immense distance from the seat of Government, are not in a position to say. From the Delhi Gazette of a recent date I learn that Mr. Wilson has not sanctioned the estimate of three lacs of rupees for building several public offices of Allahabad. If not, does the great financier intend to remove the seat of Government from Allahabad to Agra again? Such an idea I should think is absurd, since two and a half lacs of rupees have already been disbursed to Mr. Thornhill by Lord Canning for building the civil line roads, and for other municipal purposes at Allahabad. Besides the above sum, a lac of rupees has been paid by order of the Governor-general to the East Indians, as a loan to build their bungalows, in order to domicile at that station. Rumours are also heard regarding the establishment of an imperial board. The weather here, since the late rains, has been delightfully cool.

CENTRAL ASIA.—The position of affairs in Central Asia is noticed by the Friend of India in the following extract:—"Some of the North-west journals have of late contained letters drawing a gloomy picture of the state of the country beyond our frontier from the Cabul river to the Oxus. Encounters between the armies of Dost Mahomed and those of Turkistan have been described with a detail apparently truthful. The death of one of the Ameer's sons has been distinctly asserted. These reports are the exaggerations of native news-writers. The truth is only this. The Ameer has been for some time menaced by Bokhara and some of the half independent tribes on the Oxus. He has accordingly sent up reinforcements, but no encounter has yet taken place. Sirdar Azim Khan, the son whom rumour killed, sent in a letter to our Government three weeks ago. He is governor of the newly annexed province of Koondooz. There will be troubles enough in Central Asia when old Dost Mahomed dies. France and Russia will then both be busy. Our frontier is too well marked by nature, and our experience of Cabul too unpleasant to admit of our being tempted in any case beyond the valley of Peshawar and the gorges of the Sulimans.

ASSAM.—The tea planters of Luckenpore have expressed their disapproval of driving ryots by taxation from their lands in order to secure their labour on the plantations. Such a course would increase the difficulty of getting rice and other provisions, and would be detrimental both to planters and labourers. The earnings of a cooly are from 4-8 to 8 rupees per month. Government considers the imposition of a higher land tax inadvisable, if not impossible. "The object is to devise a tax that would not discourage the employment of labour and capital in any way, whether upon the cultivation of land or for any other profitable purpose." Exclusive of the labourers the Assam Company employ there are in the district only 2,000 coolies engaged in the manufacture of tea, and of these only one-tenth are natives of the district. The India General Steam Navigation Company's steamers have not yet begun to run to Assam, as promised by Government.

THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—The Hurkaru learns that Mr. Riddell has recommended the appointment of two additional Postmasters-general, one in the Rewah territories, and the other in the Punjab, for the more efficient management of the postal department in those parts of the country, with a salary of Rs. 1,500 each and other office establishments of 400 or 500 rupees respectively.

LIBEL CASE.—The case of Gordon versus Brett was tried on the 11th July at the Supreme Court, on the plea side. It was an action for libel against the managing proprietor of the Englishman newspaper, in respect of two libellous articles which appeared in that journal on the 13th and 14th April reflecting on the plaintiff's character. The libel arose from the re-publication in the Englishman of an article from the Times, commenting upon the fraudulent misappropriation for many years of funds the property of the Aberdeen bank, by parties connected with that bank, and from an original article appearing in the same number of the Englishman, directly asserting that the plaintiff was one of the actors in these fraudulent transactions. A separate libel was made out against the Englishman in consequence of that paper, in reply to a letter of remonstrance from the plaintiff's attorneys, publishing a second original article, and repeating the assertion made in the first article. The matter was compromised by the defendant making, through his counsel, an ample apology to the plaintiff for the insertion of the obnoxious articles, and as it was shown by Mr. Peterson, the defendant's counsel, that no malice actuated the conduct of the Englishman in the matter, the apology was accepted. Verdict by the judge, nominal damages and costs as between attorney and client.

SHOWER OF BLOOD.—The Futtegur correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle states that that district was visited with a shower of blood. A cart load of the earth was brought in for the purpose of being analysed.

A VACANCY.—The Rangoon Times regrets to have to record the death of a distinguished Burmese statesman, his Excellency the Pabai Woonggyee, or minister of state, for the department of public works in the Government of his Majesty the King of Burmah.

MURREE.—The Punjab Government has granted a site and Rs. 1,000 for a Presbyterian Church at the Sanatorium of Murree. One of the American missionaries, stationed at Rawul Pindce, will conduct the service.

FORCIBLE VACCINATION.—We hear that Dr. Christon has been forcibly vaccinating the children of some people at Koloo, in the Simlah hills; the Governor-general, on the matter being brought to his attention, ordered the doctor to be removed from Simlah.

ROYALTY IN RAGS.—Government has sanctioned an allowance of eight rupees a month to Amanee Begum, one of the wives of the King of Delhi, and three rupees for each of her two daughters.

CAPTAIN DICKENS, officiating secretary to the Government in the Public Works Department, will in all probability proceed to England in September next, to aid Colonel Baker in the same department under the Secretary of State for India.

THE CHIEF OF KOTAH has applied for permission to adopt a son and heir, but it is said the Governor-general has refused to recognise the adoption.

CASHMERE.—An officer has been appointed to survey the River Ravee through Cashmere, to which the Maharaja at first objected, but his doubts have been overruled.

THE NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY has now fairly started. Its capital is £120,000, divided into 6,000 shares. The mines are held upon a nominal yearly rental of ten pounds for the first five years. Both the iron and the coal in this district have been known for twenty years, and the chief drawback in the way of working them has been as usual the want of cheap transit. The prospect of having the railway three years hence has encouraged the formation of the company.

JHANSI.—We hear from Indore that the adopted son of the Rancee of Jhansi has been discovered by the resident, and he confirms the fact of the death of the Rancee, which has hitherto been considered as somewhat doubtful.

"NOT CAUGHT YET."—A reward of ten thousand rupees has been offered in Rajpootana for the apprehension of Prince Ferozeshah.

BANK DIRECTORS.—The rule prohibiting the Government directors of the Bank of Bengal to receive any remuneration from the bank funds has been abrogated, and they will be authorized in future to draw, like their mercantile colleagues in the direction, a fee of Rs. 25 for their attendance at each meeting of the directors. Lord Dalhousie was always against the measure, and the Government directors of the said bank should now thank Mr. Wilson for this concession.

SIR JAMES OUTRAM, G.C.B.—A meeting held at the Town-hall, on Saturday, the 14th July, for the purpose of expressing the respect and gratitude of the residents of Calcutta to Sir James Outram, in recognition of his military career and services, was most numerously attended. Besides the two Judges of the Supreme Court, barristers, and the respectable European merchants, &c., there were many of the civil servants present on the occasion. The speeches were good. An address was voted to Sir James, and a committee, composed of Europeans and natives, was appointed to collect subscriptions for a testimonial expressive of the admiration felt for him.

BARRACKPORE.—A letter from Barrackpore, dated 2nd July, states that H.M.'s 6th Royal Regiment had been inspected from half-past twelve to three o'clock, by the new Commander-in-Chief. His Excellency appeared much pleased, and praised the commanding officer, Colonel Robertson, for the appearance and discipline of his men. The Commander-in-Chief was accompanied by General Sir John Hearsay and the station staff; every barrack house was visited, and his Excellency appeared gratified with the regularity and system observed in the regiment, and the dinner tables spread with white cloths, covered with delf of the come colour, and very substantial food, to say nothing of the bouquets of flowers in honour of the occasion. This fine regiment has two hundred men in hospital with fever, but up the present time without any casualties.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The Directors of the Bank of Bengal have notified to the public that in future they are prepared to realise interest due on Government paper, placed in deposit with them by constituents, at the same charge as the other banks do the same business. The convenience of this arrangement to the public is evident.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, July 19).—There has been little or no activity evinced in our market since last mail, owing chiefly to the small quantity of produce in the market. We expect a liberal supply on the opening of the rivers, when we hope to report transactions on a larger scale, but which will mainly depend on holders reducing their present prices. Hides.—Hides have been in pretty fair demand all round at former prices. Oilseeds.—Linseed.—The inferior kinds have gone up an anna and a half per maund, owing to purchases to some extent having been made by the Greeks in such quantities. The prices of superior sorts remain unaltered. Rape Seed.—There are four or five purchasers now in the market, and prices are Rs. 3-2 to 3-8 per maund. Stocks moderate. Salt-petre.—In anticipation of arrivals purchasers are unwilling to operate largely. Calcutta refined is scarce, and maintains its price, being Rs. 10-4 for 1 per cent. refractions. Rice is not so active as it was on the date of last mail, little being done in cleaned table sorts. Seeta, Rs. 3-12 to 4-4 per Bazar maund; Ballum at 2-4 to 2-9 ditto; Moonghy, none in the market. Raw Silk.—No Bund silk in the market. The market is very active, and arrivals very slow and small, which meet ready sales at extreme prices. Silk Piece Goods.—Cornals.—A moderate amount of business done for this mail at previous prices.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, July 19).—The long-continued dullness in our market has increased considerably during the last fortnight. Grey Shirtings.—Owing to the large arrival the prices of all descriptions of these goods have declined about 2 annas per piece. 39-inches 60 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 3-9; do. 64 do. at yellow evening light, it felt more like an autumn than a June evening at home; and to-day the thermometer is below seventy even in the cabin, though there is a hot sun shining through a sky of cloudless blue, with a pure exhilarating atmosphere around.—China Mail.

CEYLON.

Colombo, July 28.—At Colombo the drought has continued unabated. July is generally one of our driest months, but this year it has been drier than usual—instead of compensating for the deficiency of rain in April, May, and June. For the first six months of 1860 the rain-fall at Colombo was only twenty-three inches, against fifty inches in the corresponding period of 1859, and against the average of forty-two inches. That is, in the first six months of 1860 we have had little more than half the average supply of rain. The deficiency seems to be general over the island. Rain has recently fallen on the hills, but too late for many of the lower districts. In the higher regions of the hill country they have been more fortunate, and in some of them, doubtless, the very deficiency of rain, so detrimental in the low country, will lead to an increased yield of coffee. Over the majority of the coffee districts, however, there can be no doubt that, from the effects of drought and bug—the “white bug” being especially prevalent—there will be a serious falling off. Mean time the old crop continues to leave our shores. During the fortnight three vessels have sailed for London with 18,244 cwts. of coffee, in the proportions of 14,932 plantation, and 3,312 native. Our shipments are now 577,000 against 534,000 cwts. to the corresponding period of the previous season. The increase is thus 43,000 cwts., and this, notwithstanding a falling off in native of no less than 37,000 cwts. The increase in plantation has not only made this good but given us the excess of 43,000 cwts., above noticed. The shipments of plantation in the ten months of the three previous seasons averaged about 350,000 cwts. In the ten months of the present season we have shipped 428,000 cwts., or 78,000 cwts. above the average. We have now only two months of the season before us, so that we may form an approximate estimate of what the outturn of both kinds in 1859-60 will be. There seems to be no chance that in the two months we can send away 12,000 cwts. of native as we did last season. Let us say the half, or 6,000. On the other hand, instead of 28,000 cwts. of plantation we think we may reckon on 40,000 cwts. If our anticipations are realised, the exports for the season ending 30th September next will be—plantation, 468,000 cwts.; native, 154,000 cwts. Total, 622,000 cwts. That will be 20,000 cwts. above our largest previous export for one season. Had the native only increased in the same proportion as plantation the total of 700,000 would have been reached. In the season now about to commence we fear we can scarcely calculate on 500,000 cwts. The shipments of coconut oil are also in excess of last season, and the encouraging advices from home are calculated to give a fresh impetus to the trade in this article. Cinnamon, coir, and plumbago keep well up, and altogether our prospects, but for the drought, might be reckoned very good.

Our Governor, and the General Commanding the Forces having both left us, and the Anglican Bishop having applied for leave to retire on his pension, it is probable that by the beginning of 1861 we shall have a complete new set of dignitaries in Church and State. We have a new and very efficient Chief-Justice already. We wish the Home Government would forget to send us a Bishop—but as we cannot hope for such a negative blessing, let us trust that a man may be sent at whose birth the star of peace was in the ascendant.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

INCREASE OF PIRACY.—In the beginning of April last nine large Lanun pirate prahus made their appearance in the Java sea, making descents upon several of the islands lying off the south coast of Madura, but they were not very successful in their attempts to obtain booty. They would appear to have been so far on their return home from one of their annual cruises through the Molucca, the Java, and the China seas. We have received information of their having reached the China sea, and the probability is, that unless they should fall in with a Spanish force, they will reach their head quarters unmolested, and with a large number of captives. Prahus which have recently arrived from the Anambas and Natuna groups bring intelligence of these islands having been visited by a fleet of nine large Lanun pirate prahus, each pulling thirty oars double banked. At the Anambas, and lying between the large islands of Siantan and Jamajah, there are a number of small rocky islets and reefs which furnish large supplies of tripong, shells, &c. In the beginning of June a number of persons, inhabitants of the Anambas, Malays from Singapore and elsewhere, were busily engaged collecting these articles when the Lanun pirates made their appearance. They anchored outside, and sent a number of boats to the islets, the people on which offered a determined resistance, and considerable loss occurred on either side, the pirates having left twenty of their number behind killed or mortally wounded. The Lanuns eventually gained the day, and carried away with them fifty-four persons, seventeen of whom were inhabitants of Siantan, twelve of Jamajah, and twenty-five were Malays from Singapore and elsewhere. Amongst the killed were the nakoda and one of the crew of a Singapore boat. The pirates then proceeded to the Natunas, and from Bungoran (Great Natuna) they are reported to have taken away sixty-four of the inhabitants. At one of these places a Hadji was amongst the captives, but as soon as his claims to sanctity were known, he was released and sent on shore. In former years these islands and others on the coast of Borneo were frequently visited by fleets of Lanun pirate prahus, and the inhabitants suffered severely on such occasions, many being killed in the resistance which was very naturally offered, and large numbers being carried away. For a time after, the British naval forces, during Sir Thomas Cochrane's command in these waters, inflicted such signal chastisement upon the pirates, Lanun as well as Dyak—destroying many of the strongholds of the former on the coast of Borneo—that they were very cautious, and rarely showed themselves in the China sea. Of late years, however, they have been regaining confidence, and, notwithstanding the efforts of the Dutch and Spanish authorities to suppress them, they are apparently becoming as audacious and destructive as formerly. This squadron of nine, we are afraid, has by this time reached its head-quarters, and no doubt its success will stimulate more to set out next season. From the accounts given in the Java papers there would appear to be still several parties which have not yet quitted the Molucca Seas, and it is therefore to be regretted that there is no naval force here which could make the attempt to intercept them in the passage across the China Sea. The Natuna and Anambas groups are under the jurisdiction of the sovereign of Johore, and the inhabitants carry on a constant intercourse with Singapore. There is therefore the duty of assisting and protecting the subjects of an intimate ally, besides the inducement of considerations of humanity, which should make our Government anxious to protect the above-named islands from the ravages of these remorseless pirates.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

May 2.—An urzee from Shah Mudut Khan, of Jellalabad, reached the Ameer, from which it appeared that Ahmed Khan, the nephew of Dowlut Khan, intended to murder Neeasunt-oolah Khan in the night, but the latter having heard of this was on the qui vive, and ere the former could carry his plan into execution he was fired upon, but to no effect, whilst the latter fell a victim to a sabre stroke. Dowlut Khan, in order to escape, fled to Soorkhad, and joined his mother. Shah Mudut having heard of this, sent people for his apprehension, but ere they could reach the place he had bent his way to the fort of Kafunseah Kos. The Ameer on hearing of this was very sorry, and stated that such a brave-hearted man could scarcely be found again. The Ameer requested Shah Murdah Khan to apprehend the murderer at once, and not allow him to wend his way elsewhere, otherwise he would be committing further outrages.—May 3.—Sirdar Mahomed Khan, of Toorkistan, sent a letter to the Dost, but the purport of it was not made known to any one, but I hear that on this occasion Peer Mahomed Khan, Sirdar Mahomed Ismail Khan, and Gholam Mahomed Mookhtar, held a private meeting, when Sirdar Shere Ally Khan was requested to tell Mahomed Ismail Khan to take both the old and new regiments and three guns to Mahomed Afzul Khan, to render him assistance. Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, after inspecting the men and the guns, requested them to march to Toorkistan. Since the receipt of the above letter the Ameer seems to be very dull, the cause of which I hope I shall be able to communicate in my next.—May 5.—A letter was received by the Dost from Khoosh and Koorum, which intimated that the Koonj Wuzerees, in the district of Bunnoo Tonk, had attacked the outposts there, killing and wounding a great number, but the loss on their side is not known. The enemy, it is rumoured, are gathering in immense numbers to attack the British frontier. The Ameer on hearing of this sent for Gholam Hossen Vakeel, and asked him if he was aware of all this. He replied, that he had heard of some Europeans being killed. After hearing this, the Ameer sent a message to Jellalabad, requesting the ruler of that place to be on the alert, as it was rumoured that the Wuzerees were wending their way towards his territory, and that to frustrate their efforts they should not be provided with any provision whatever, or allowed to create any disturbance which would bring the Ameer into trouble.—May 6.—A Kaffla arrived from Bokhara Shurref, who intimated that the Hindoo merchants of Shikarpore were ordered by the king to quit his territory. They have dispersed themselves, some to Toorkistan, some to Herat, and others to Candahar and Cabool. I asked many of the men why they were expelled. Some of them replied that the king of Bokhara suspected that they were in the habit of sending news to Hindoostan, and that although they assured the King that they were not in the habit of doing so, he still persisted on their quitting his territory, and in their place the Russian and Yakodee merchants have come in. The King was also informed that two Englishmen in the disguise of Hindoostanees had arrived; he at once ordered their apprehension. He was, however, subsequently told that they were not there, but had gone to Aga Musjid Khan.—May 7.—An urzee was received by the Ameer from Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan of Candahar, which intimated that his accounts, found to be correct, were sent, and up to the time of writing no intelligence was obtained about Sultan Ahmed Jan, as to whether he was at Teheran or anywhere else, but that the force from Iran had arrived at Mushed Muquddus, and a small force from Mushed had marched to Herat.—May 9.—The Ameer of Cabul, whilst in his durbar, was interrupted by the jageardars belonging to the brother of Akbar Khan, by a report that, owing to the obstruction of the water running into their lands, caused by an order from the Resident of the Fort, named Bunnee Hissar, this season's crops were destroyed. The Ameer on hearing this requested them to return back to their avocations, when he would adopt means to remedy the evil complained of. After the durbar, the Ameer and his Mookhtar, Gholam Mahomed Khan, drove off thither, and having seen that everything was right, and the report false, was returning, when unfortunately his elephant's feet got sunk into the ground, and he and all that were with him fell off and were injured a great deal; they were conveyed home in doolies, and are recovering fast.—May 11.—An urzee from Toorkistan reached Mahomed Afzul from the Ameer, which stated that the people of Turkman Koondocz, Indrab, and Khorth, assembled and plundered the residents with impunity, owing to a great scarcity of provisions. The people of Tashgurgah and Shereghah follow a similar course of occupation. The King of Bokhara, who was at Mungul Koorkee at the time, returned and remains there adopting means to suppress the disturbance. Mahomed Afzul Khan stated that he was badly off for forces, but that should the Ameer of Cabul aid him in his undertaking, he would prove successful, otherwise his life would be at stake, and that Toorkistan would be in rapine as long as he lived. The Ameer, on hearing of this, went away, and consulted Gholam Mahomed Khan and Sirdar Shere Ally Khan on the subject.—May 12.—Sirdar Shere Ally Khan having prepared an army list for the Ameer's inspection, was requested to despatch it to Toorkistan. The Ameer, subsequently looking over the list, requested Shere Ally Khan to proceed with 3,000 sowars and 3 regiments to Toorkistan, and the regiments that remained back to proceed to Bameah and the Morab Hill. The previous order given to Mahomed Hussien Khan to proceed to Toorkistan being cancelled, he was directed to remain at Cabul. The Ameer suspecting that Sirdar Shere Ally Khan was not inclined to march with the troops, informed him that he would go himself, but the sirdar assured the Ameer that he was willing to march anywhere he would be ordered, whereupon he was requested to muster the forces and proceed to Toorkistan.—May 14.—Fuzul Ahmed Khan and other merchants, whose property was stolen at Cabul, represented to the Ameer that the property was not yet recovered, neither were the robbers detected. The Ameer on hearing this got annoyed with the kotwal, and ordered Sirdar Shere Ally Khan to proclaim by beat of tom tom throughout the city that, if the property is not recovered after the proclamation, four or five men living in the serai where the theft was committed would be apprehended and put to death. At this measure the sirdar said that it would be a case of great injustice and discouragement by putting to death people who were totally ignorant of the deed. The Ameer thereupon said that the non-recovery of the property would stigmatise him, so that it would be better to make good the loss from his treasury. The above orders were carried into effect.—May 15.—The Ameer, whilst sitting in his durbar, requested Sirdar Shere Ally Khan to send a letter to Mullik Mahomed Khan, Moostagir of Ghuznee, ordering him to enlist 2,000 to 3,000 men from the Koum Wilzai, Sukhemal Kheyil and Nasul Mya Kheyil tribes, and send them off to Toorkistan. The letter was sent. The merchants whose property was stolen came in and said that 4,000 tillas were found in the serai, but could not for a moment imagine how they came there. The Ameer hearing of this became quite glad, and informed them that every trifle not recovered would be refunded. The Ameer informed the sirdar that he suspected that the theft was committed by their own brethren, otherwise the property would not be replaced by robbers.—May 16.—Sirdars Peer Mahomed Khan, Mahomed Oosman Khan, and Shere Ally Khan, came to the Ameer, and intimated that they were going to Toorkistan; the Ameer stated they must one and all unite together, and get on smoothly, and that their services would not go unacknowledged. The Ameer, moreover, declared that if he could not settle Bokhara within this year, he would give up his reign and put an end to his life.—May 18.—The Ameer held a durbar this day, on which occasion the attendance of all the sirdars and men composing his court was requested. In this assembly were Sirdar Sooltan Khan's son, and Sirdar Kundham's son. The Ameer requested these two men to prepare themselves for Toorkistan; to this request they kept awhile a little silent, and then replied that they were ready to go anywhere, but not to Toorkistan. On hearing this the Ameer said, that at this moment there were no conflicts anywhere but in Toorkistan, and that they must go. Seeing that the Ameer was determined to adhere to his previous order, they silently proceeded homeward. The Ameer being irritated at the behaviour of these men, sent for one Hafiz Jee, and requested him to go and persuade them, and to assure them that by their proceeding to Toorkistan he would bring their services favourably to notice, otherwise their punishment would be greater than they could bear.—May 20.—The Ameer was informed that a kafilah from Peshawur, by order of Syud Nazim Shah, of the district of Tera, were on their way to Cabul through the Khyber, and that during their journey the Khyberies plundered them with impunity. The Ameer became greatly excited at this news, and remarked that the Khyberies were a set of wicked men, not knowing their own Prophet and God, and that they (the men of the Kafilah) would be recompensed for the losses they had sustained.—May 27.—The Ameer, summoning Sirdars Sooltan Mahomed Khan, Peer Mahomed Khan and Gholam Mahomed Khan Mooktear, informed them that news from Bokhara had come; that the king of that place had written a letter to his son, stating that he should muster up his force and fully equip them, and that for this he would write to Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan to be on the alert; that the forces of the King of Bokhara intended to make an attack; that after this information being sent, no subterfuges would be listened to; and that when the forces would arrive at Tasgurkah he would be informed.—May 24.—The Ameer of Cabul having given Sirdar Shere Ally Khan a khilut valued at Rs. 10,000 and a few regiments, requested him to proceed to Toorkistan. The influential members of the Court after having congratulated Sirdar Shere Ally Khan for the command of the forces being conferred on him, retired to their homes in the evening.—May 25.—An urzee from Mahomed Afzul Khan, the commander of the forces at Toorkistan, reached the Ameer, which stated that the men under his command and the citizens of the place were discouraged, owing to the progress of importations from Bokhara and Cabul being impeded, consequently the Ameer summoned all the merchants of Cabul, and requested them to join Sirdar Shere Ally Khan's force, taking with them all sorts of merchandise; the latter acquainted the Dost that they entertained fears of being plundered; but he in answer assured them that if from Cabul to the river Knamoo they would be plundered, he would make good the losses from his treasury.—Lahore Chronicle.

From the Resident at Nepal to the Sec. to the Gov. of India in the Foreign Dep. with the Gov. gen., Camp Cawnpore, dated Nepal Residency, October 18, 1859.

SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 5,707, of the 17th ult., and its accompaniments, conveying instructions for the delivery to Maharajah Jung Bahadoor of the collar and badge appendant of a Knight Grand Cross, Military Division, of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, and the investment Badge and Star, also a copy of the statutes of the Order, and a sealed packet containing her Majesty's grant and warrant, or dispensation of investiture, and a letter from his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

2nd. All your instructions have been minutely carried out. The sealed packet was opened by the Maharajah, to whom I fully explained its contents; and H.E. afterwards, in my presence, signed the engagement (herewith returned) promising to restore the collar and appendant badge in the event of his ceasing to be a member of the Order, &c.

3rd. The presentation of the insignia of the Bath, referred to in several parts of the statutes as being annexed to them, did not accompany them.

4th. I presented the insignia to H.E., as desired, on the 15th instant, at a full durbar; royal salutes were fired in honour of her Majesty and of Prince Albert, when I put them into his hands, and every care was taken to render the ceremony as imposing as possible, in accordance with the Maharajah's own ideas, whose wishes I consulted before we arranged the details of the presentation.

5th. Addresses which, at Maharajah Jung Bahadoor's suggestion, had been prepared in the Parbutteah language, were read to the assembled sirdars by the Raje Gorao of the durbar, such being considered by H.E. as the most public, and, at the same time, the most complimentary manner in which they could be delivered, so as to be perfectly intelligible to H.H. the Maharajah Dheraj and to the members of his court.

6th. The Mahila Sahib, the King's brother, was present on the occasion, this being the first time since his release from imprisonment that I have ever met him at a public durbar.

7th. After the ceremony, Maharajah Jung Bahadoor gave me a nuzzer of two gold mohurs, in token of his respect for her Majesty Queen Victoria, and he afterwards presented me to Maharajah Dheraj.

8th. H.E. appeared greatly pleased, and spoke in warm terms in acknowledgment of the high honour which has been conferred upon him, and both he and the Maharajah desired me to convey to the Viceroy and Governor-general their sincere reciprocation of his kind feelings, and their grateful thanks for the manner in which his lordship desired me to express them. He will address a letter in reply to the communication he has received from his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Great Master of the Order of the Bath, in the course of a few days, which he trusts that the Governor-general will do him the favour to transmit to England.—I have, &c., G. RAMSAY, Resident.

I do hereby acknowledge to have received from the Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's household the collar and badge appendant of a Knight Grand Cross (military division) of the most Honourable Order of the Bath; and I hereby covenant and promise, that in case I should hereafter cease to hold my rank and place as a member of the Order of the Bath, I will forthwith restore to the registrar and secretary the said collar and badge; and I further promise that I will, without delay, make due provision for the restoration of the said collar and badge by my personal representatives in case I shall continue a member of the Order until the period of my decease.

Witness my hand, this twenty-fourth day of September, one thousand eight-hundred and fifty-nine.

By MAHARAJAH JUNG BAHADOOR RANAJEE, Minister and C.-in-C. of Nepal.

Signed in the presence of G. Ramsay, Lieutenant, Resident at the Court of Nepal, and of H. Oldfield, Hon.-Asst., Resident.

G. RAMSAY, Resident.

From the Resident at Nepal to the Sec. to the Gov. of India, Foreign Dep., with the Gov.-gen., Camp Cawnpore, dated Nepal Residency, Nov. 8, 1859.

SIR,—In continuation of my letter to your address, No. 135, of the 18th ult., I have the honour to forward a letter from Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, G.C.B., to the address of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, which his Excellency trusts that the Right Honourable the Viceroy and Governor-general will do him the favour to transmit, through the proper channel, to his Royal Highness.

2. A copy of the letter is herewith appended.—I have, &c., G. RAMSAY, Resident.

To H.R.H. Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, Prince Consort, &c., and Great Master of the Order of the Bath, dated Khatmandoo, Nepal, Nov. 4, 1859.

YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS,—I have had the honour to receive your letter, dated Buckingham Palace, the 18th of April, 1859, announcing to me that her Majesty the Queen of England has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint me to be an honorary member of the Military Division of the First Class, or Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, of which your Royal Highness is the Great Master.

I have also received her Majesty's grant, and the warrant of dispensation with the ceremony of investiture, a copy of the statutes, and also the various insignia of the Order, which have been transmitted to me by his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general of India, through Lieutenant G. Ramsay, his lordship's representative at this Court.

I beg that your Royal Highness will be pleased to convey to her Majesty my sincere acknowledgments for this very high mark of favour and of honour, and that you will also express the gratification I feel at the high consideration with which her Majesty regards my humble services, which will again be freely placed at her Viceroy's disposal should occasion ever arise upon which they may be likely to be useful.

I beg also to thank your Royal Highness for your congratulations, and for the kind wishes you have expressed for my happiness and for the preservation of my health and life. I desire to return these compliments both in my own and my Sovereign's name. It is our united hope that all prosperity and happiness may continue to attend her most gracious Majesty and yourself, and that I may be permitted to subscribe myself as your Royal Highness's sincere friend,

SIR JUNG BAHADOOR.

(Extracts.)—Letter from the Rt.-Hon. the Governor of India to the Secret Committee, dated May 30, 1858.

HON. SIRS,—I have the honour to report to you the steps which I have taken to mark the appreciation by the British Government of the great services rendered to it by the army of Nepal under the command of H.E. Jung Bahadoor.

H.E. long ago signified a wish, to which I gladly assented, that I should receive him, here or elsewhere, on his return from Oude to Nepal; and at the close of the operations against Lucknow he marched to Allahabad, accompanied by two regiments of infantry and a field battery.

H.E. was attended by some of the chief officers of his army, amongst whom were his brothers, Generals Kunooddeep Sing and Dere Shumshere.

The usual visits of ceremony took place, and I had the satisfaction of offering to the Maharajah, in full durbar, my cordial thanks for the aid which the Government of India had received from him and from his brave soldiers, and my assurance that the friendly conduct of his Government, and the exertions and successes of his troops, would be held in grateful recollection, not less in England than in India.

Jung Bahadoor was earnest in his declarations of attachment to the British Government, and took occasion to commend highly the services and conduct of General Macgregor, C.B., and of the other officers whom I had attached to his head quarters.

He seemed desirous to impress upon me the inability of his hill-men to bear the heat of the plain at this season, and that this made him anxious for their return to Nepal as soon as possible.

On the 8th of April, the day before Jung Bahadoor's departure from Allahabad, I received H.E. at a private audience, at which only his own vakeel, who understands English, and the Secretary to Government in the Foreign Department, were present.

On this occasion, acting upon the discretionary authority conveyed to me in your letter of the 9th of February, I announced to H.E. the intention of the British Government to offer to the Maharaja of Nepal the restitution of a portion of the territory which was ceded by Nepal in 1815, and my wish that H.E. should be the channel through which the offer should be made to his Sovereign and to the Nepaulese durbar, it being made in recognition of great services rendered to British India by himself, and by the troops which he commands.

I have the honour to enclose copies of letters which, on the 17th inst., I addressed to his Highness the Maharajah of Nepal, and to Maharajah Jung Bahadoor.

Your honourable Committee will see that in the letter to the Maharajah of Nepal I have described the territory to be restored to Nepal as the whole of the former Goorkha possessions below the hills, extending from the River Gogra on the west, to the British territory of Goruckpore on the east, and bounded on the south by Khyreegurh and the district of Baraitch, and on the north by the hills. This constitutes that portion of the territory ceded by Nepal in 1815, which in 1816 was made over by the British Government to the Nawab Vuzeer of Oude, and in return for which, and for the cession of the district of Khyreegurh, the Nawab Vuzeer cancelled a debt due by the British Government to himself of one million sterling.

It is a tract 200 miles long, of varying breadth, and adjoining the province of Oude from end to end.

The other portions of the territory ceded by Nepal in 1815 adjoined our own old provinces, and have been from that time absorbed into them.

I proposed that the new boundary line between the Nepaulese territory and the British province of Oude should be marked out in the cold season of this year. It will not be possible to enter upon this work, with due regard for the health of those employed, before the end of November.

From the Rt. Hon. the Gov.-gen. of India to H. H. the Maharajah of Nepal, dated May 17, 1858.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—I addressed a letter to your Highness on the 23rd December last, congratulating you on the achievements of a portion of your Highness's forces at Chanda and Kodhova.

Since that time the main body of the auxiliary force of your Highness, under the immediate command of Maharajah Jung Bahadoor, has been in co-operation with the British army, and has greatly distinguished himself.

The troops composing it have fought at Sahibgunge, at Peepraieh, at Goruckpore, at Shahgunge, at Phoolpore, at Julalpore, and at Konda Nuddee, and they have in every instance been victorious.

Maharajah Jung Bahadoor reached Lucknow in time to assist in the investment and capture of that city. The service which the Maharajah rendered was rendered with the greatest zeal and courage, and was very valuable.

I now desire to offer to your Highness the cordial thanks of the Government of India for the assistance thus given by the troops of Nepal. Within a few days of this time the troops will have recrossed the British frontier, and I wish that their return to your Highness's dominions should be marked, not only by this written expression of thanks, but by a public and substantial token of the estimation in which the British Government hold your Highness's friendly conduct.

To this end I have determined, on the part of the British Government, to restore to the Nepal State the whole of the former Goorkha possessions below the hills, extending from the river Gogra on the west to the British territory of Goruckpore on the east, and bounded on the south by Khyreegurh and the district of Baraich, and on the north by the hills. Measures will hereafter be taken at a favourable season of the year to mark out the exact boundaries, by means of commissioners to be appointed on the part of the British Government and the State of Nepal.

I trust that the return of this territory to your Highness's rule will be acceptable to your Highness and to the Nepaulesse durbār.

I wish your Highness to be assured that the great services which have been rendered by your brave soldiers and their distinguished leader are appreciated by the British Government, and that the goodwill and friendship of England towards your country is sincere and lasting. CANNING.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE NEW ARMS ACT.

THE Government of India has succeeded in passing an Arms Act, which has partially evaded opposition, but wholly missed the object it was intended to secure. In India an Arms Act can have but one end—to render overt rebellion more difficult. The people are not duellists. They are not, as a race, addicted to violent crime. Their faction fights are generally conducted with bamboo clubs, and when intent on private murder they resort usually to the wood-chopper or poison. But though less turbulent than most Europeans, they have a dangerous familiarity with arms. In the North-West every man can use a sword, and is acquainted with the theory of the musket. Every man keeps arms, and the instant society is threatened millions of half-drilled soldiers are ready for the glorious work of plunder. So long as the native troops remained faithful this penchant mattered little. The sepoys could always scatter a mob, and from their numbers were so widely distributed that emeutiers had no time to obtain even the brief success necessary to rouse the Orientals into action. Since the mutiny, however, the first object of Government—though feebly pursued—has been to diminish the number of the native army. To this end it is essential to disarm the native population. The European soldiery, massed at central points, and slow of movement, cannot be employed to put down local rioters. The civil police cannot be employed against armed men without the certainty of defeat. It remains to disarm the population, and in the Punjab and Oude this has been accomplished.

Those provinces are extra-regulation, but in the older districts an Act of the Legislature is necessary to sanction the new policy. Such Acts, temporary in their aim, were passed during the mutinies without difficulty. It was, however, at last decided to render their operation permanent, and a formidable opposition instantly arose. The Europeans refused to be disarmed. Living among a race scarcely restrained from massacre by military force, they demanded the free use of every means of self-defence. The Government was most unwilling to comply. Its abler members conceived that a formal distinction, based on colour, would create intense acerbity in the minds of the ruled, without really strengthening the hands of the rulers. Behind them a more prejudiced party, hating the interlopers simply as such, clamoured against the concession of privileges to men, over whom their own sway was incomplete. A third section including, we believe, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, held all measures of the kind to be radically unjust. The people, they argued, were in the hands of an infamous police, and until that body could be reformed they must be permitted to defend themselves. All three parties pressed on, what they were pleased to style, an equal law, the last-mentioned secretly hoping that the European opposition would defeat the Bill.

The measure was furiously opposed. The Europeans openly expressed their determination to disobey, and the Government, though secure of a majority, knew that in the North-west the officials would decline to carry out the law. They receded, and introduced a new measure, prohibiting only the habit of bearing arms. Domiciliary visits are not sanctioned, save when a district is proclaimed. In other words, the possession of arms, except under exceptional circumstances, ceases to be an offence. It is only the wearing them which is prohibited.

The law, as it stands, involves nearly every possible element of evil. The native traveller, unprotected by the police, and threatened by organised gangs of ruffians, is refused the protection of a sword. The native intriguer organising a revolt may accumulate arms by the thousand in his house. The formation of European volunteer corps becomes impossible, for even Europeans may not openly bear arms. The formation of native corps drilled for rebellion is easy, for evidence against the national cause can never be obtained. If a Rajah of Pachete drills thirty thousand musketeers in his jungles, who is to betray him? Or if his house is searched, who is to prove, in the teeth of all his dependents' oaths that the arms have been used abroad. To keep them in store bright and ready for use is within the law. The people are irritated by a prohibition which they detest, while the political object is not gained. The lion's claws are weepingly menaced and never cut, and the keepers congratulate themselves that his temper is improving in the process.

All this while the Government of India had before them a measure which would have ensured equality before the law, yet have disarmed every native, and armed every loyal subject. They had only to decree the disarming of all classes indifferently, save and except the members of volunteer corps. Every European would instantly have joined a district corps if only to preserve his weapons, and Government in six months would have had an addition of ten thousand men to its reliable militia. Some of these corps might have been small to a degree which seems ludicrous in Europe; but eighteen men at Arrah saved Behar, and dozens of stations were rescued from plunder by the presence of half-a-dozen gentlemen accustomed to snipe shooting. There would have been a corps in every station; and in every station, therefore, a force costing Government nothing, but on which it could rely even to the death.

It is not a little doubtful whether, even as a matter of policy, it is wise to attempt the complete disarmament of India. To find a native's arms is the most difficult of tasks. The native agents employed detest the duty. The police accept any rusty tool as a weapon. The magistracy dread the club far more than the sword, while the better classes consider the loss of their weapons a grievous dishonour. It would have been perhaps wiser to forbid utterly the sale, manufacture, and possession of fire-arms or gunpowder alone. Both are visible manufactures. Both could have been made valuable monopolies, and thus enlisted the cordial aid of the native States, which will now become depots of arms. By thus limiting the range of inquiry complete results might have been obtained, and the use of fire-arms cannot be transmitted by tradition. A man may learn the sword exercise with a club; he must have a musket to learn to load it. Were one generation only completely deprived of powder, their descendants would be for armed revolt as feeble as the natives of Peru. The native, unless backed by fire-arms, will never oppose them. Ten trained riflemen would scatter a tribe of swordsmen, and the population, while strong for defence against marauders, would be politically powerless.

MISSIONARIES AND THE GOVERNMENT.

It is wonderful how much mischief may be done by a deficiency of tact and intelligence on the part of a single commanding officer. In the early part of 1859 Major Hovenden, then in command of the 24th Punjab Infantry, reported to the Commander-in-Chief that four men in that regiment had embraced Christianity, and that a good many more were in the habit of visiting the Chaplain of the station. This movement did not appear to cause any excitement in the corps, but, on the contrary, was regarded by the others with perfect indifference. The circumstance having been very properly brought to the knowledge of the Supreme Government, the Governor-general in Council instructed the Commander-in-Chief to warn officers commanding troops at Peshawur not to make use of their personal influence to induce their men to renounce the faith of their forefathers and be baptised. There the matter rested for a while, but after a little time it transpired that Major Hovenden, whether from a prejudice against proselytism or simply through carelessness, had called his officers together, and after verbally communicating to them the instructions he had received from headquarters, had ordered them not to attend any religious meetings with the men. The latter, naturally enough, conceived it to be the intention of Government to discountenance proselytism, and in that light represented it to the missionaries. Strange to say, the authorities were allowed to remain in perfect ignorance of this misconception on the part of the sepoys, though one might reasonably have expected that recent experiences would have sufficed to impress upon the officers the necessity of cultivating the confidence of the men under their command. The missionaries alone appear to have been aware of the real state of the case, but as they hold no recognised position in the European community, there was no channel by which they could officially communicate with the Government. A more anomalous situation can hardly be imagined. In their blind reverence for liberty Englishmen are continually committing absurdities of this kind. The free will and independence of the individual is in their eyes such a rigid and unbending principle, that they prefer imperilling society to inconveniencing one of the atoms of which society is composed. On no account are the religious prejudices of the natives to be offended, on no account are the missionaries to be restrained from attacking those prejudices so long as they do so as simple "adventurers." Left to themselves, the natives would very soon make short work of the missionaries, were not the latter (very justly) protected by the Government that disowns them. An appearance of double-dealing is thus imparted to the whole affair, as the native mind is incapable of appreciating the rights and privileges implied in individual responsibility. Let the Government disclaim ever so emphatically all connection with the missionary movement, its protestations will be unheeded alike by Hindoo, Sikh, and Mussulman, or only attributed to fear. It is not easy, indeed, to see how this difficulty can be avoided. To prohibit missionary enterprise would be contrary to the whole teaching of Christianity, while a rebellion would be the almost certain consequence of its being openly sanctioned and encouraged. The Government is thus compelled to assume an attitude that gives satisfaction to no party, and which is neither dignified nor permanently secure. Holding no direct communication with the missionaries, it is deprived of one great source of intelligence as to the feelings and fancies of its subjects; and it is only through an occasional accident that it is able to avail itself of the local knowledge of those self-denying pioneers of civilisation. In the present instance it was owing to the Bishop of Calcutta's visitation to the Punjab that the authorities became acquainted with the nature of the statements that had been promulgated with reference to the General Order on the conduct to be pursued by officers towards their men on religious matters. Both missionaries and sepoy, the bishop ascertained, had come to the conclusion—

1st.—That no officer may speak on the subject of Christianity to any native Christian in his corps, nor visit him when he is sick, nor urge Christian motives as reasons for performing well his earthly duties as a soldier and servant of government.

2nd.—That no officer may be present when the Church service is read by a clergyman to native Christians.

3rd.—That no clergyman may hold any service for native Christians in the lines in which the soldiers live, though it be a native Christian's house with closed doors.

4th.—That no building may be set apart for Christian worship in the lines, though mosques and heathen temples may.

5th.—That soldiers on becoming Christians have not equal privileges with Mahomedans and Hindoos, and therefore Christianity is not tolerated.

6th.—That all these restrictions have been received from the highest authority.

Unable to communicate directly with the Supreme Government, the missionaries had not failed to report to their superiors at home that their sphere of usefulness had been greatly contracted in consequence of the order alluded to above. The following passage accordingly appeared in the annual report of the Church Missionary Society:—

"Punjab.—One of the most interesting and encouraging occurrences to which the missionaries refer was their call to give Christian instruction to a body of inquirers amongst the soldiers of the 24th Punjab Native Infantry regiment. When the regiment removed from the neighbourhood of the mission, the Christian officers met their new Christian brethren in social worship, and encouraged the inquirers in their study of the Scriptures. There was some prospect that the whole regiment would have joined the movement, for these men were a class of Sikhs who had become discontented with Hindooism and the Sikh religion, and were outcasts from all prevailing religions in India; and they were encouraged by the welcome they were receiving from Christian men, but at this point the Government of India stepped in, and issued an order to every Punjab regiment for every officer to hold himself aloof from Christian intercourse with his men."

This paragraph having come to the knowledge of the Indian authorities immediately after the arrival of Bishop Cotton's startling announcement, they at once perceived the necessity of removing such a serious misapprehension of their views and wishes. But before issuing any new order upon the subject, they have judged it expedient to await the receipt of information from Madras, with respect to intercourse for religious purposes between officers and their men in that Presidency. In the mean time the Lord Bishop has rebuked the missionaries for accepting and circulating without inquiry statements that were likely to prove so mischievous and injurious. All this ill-feeling, however, might have been avoided had Major Hovenden taken the trouble to master the obvious sense of the instructions he had received before imparting them to others, and if the officers generally would strive to acquire the confidence of their men and hold more familiar intercourse with them.

BOOKS.

Central India during the Rebellion of 1857 and 1858. By Thomas Lowe, M.B., C.S.E. Longman and Co.

Making due allowance for an occasionally inflated style and a general unskilfulness of composition, this very interesting narrative is entitled to take high rank among the literature of the Indian rebellion. In the capacity of medical officer to the Madras Sappers and Miners our author accompanied the British forces under the command of Sir Hugh Rose and Brigadier Stuart from the suppression of the mutiny in Aurangabad to the capture of Gwalior and the restoration of Scindiah to his throne. He was consequently present at the capture of Dhar, Rhaighur, Gurrakotta, Jhansi, and Calpee, and at the battles of Mundasore, the Betwa, Koonch, and Golowlie. In the description of scenes of strife and carnage he is particularly effective, and writes in a manly and vigorous style. It is only when he wanders into reflections, or attempts to be facetious, that his pen fails him, and bombastic expressions betray the shallowness of his thought. But these blemishes may well be pardoned for the sake of the many spirited passages that chronicle the heroic exploits of the Central India Field Force, and, indeed, for the impartiality and truthfulness which characterise the entire narrative. Of the fatigue and hardships endured by the troops throughout the brilliant campaign of 1858 it is impossible to form an adequate idea, though the following extract may suffice to show that a soldier's life in time of war is not altogether a blaze of glory:—

"Another day of extreme heat, paucity of water, a few hours of unrefreshing dose (sound sleep was impossible, from howling dogs, jackals, and beasts of burden chewing their cud, and jingling bells with every move of their heads), and then another march and a battle! We marched most of the night, and how long the hours seem in night marches! The infantry were fatigued before they started, but they began to try hard to bear up against it. In the first halt they sit down and are soon asleep, then they awake, nod off again, and awake again several times. The bugle sounds, and they are up and off again; but before a second halt is sounded they begin to fall out, and must be carried in dhoolies. An occasional joke passes off amongst the older campaigners, and the hopes of meeting the foe keep up their flagging spirits. The sun gets up, and then the heat and clouds of white dust well nigh overpower them, and the men begin to cry out almost hysterically for water. Water! but the bag is empty; and they look round imploringly, and keep on a little longer. By-and-bye a village and a large top of trees is seen, and then the bhooties rush off for water, and the men expect a halt. Long continued excitement like this soon begins to tell upon the best of them; a shadowing of delirium begins to show itself; there is a nervous restlessness and a wild glare from the dry red eye, and awful vengeance is vowed against the foe! Men begin to talk of home, and cool, shady places, and brooks, as the hot air begins to blow over them, parching up every drop of moisture in the body; and dogs rush past with great raw wounds in their backs, like sabre cuts, caused by the sun, howling for water and shade; the patient camel cries and grunts, and the intelligent elephant tries to rest the raw soles of his feet, and big tears trickle from his eye as the advance continues; at length the head of the column has halted, there is a village, and the men are blessed with ample shade and water for a time. Tea is soon made, and the jaded troops begin to revive."

"During the heat of the battle of the 23rd (Nov.) says our author, the sepoy of the 25th regiment suffered considerably; they came into the field hospital suffering from every description of wounds—arms and legs shattered by round shot, limbs and body perforated by musket-bullets, and flesh wounds of no slight nature. To see these men, as they sat or lay down in the burning sun, enduring all the excruciating agonies their wounds had caused them, while the surgeons were busy with others who had preceded them, was truly noble. The general observation made by them was, 'Ah! well, never mind, we have eaten the Sircar's salt for many years; this has been good work, and the Sircar will be good and take care of us, or our families if we die.' One poor fellow, whose blood was welling away profusely from a wound near the shoulder joint was offered a little brandy and water as a stimulant, when he nobly said, 'give it to my brother first,' who sat next to him groaning in agony; he then drank, and said he 'did not mind his wound, for he knew Government would not forget him.' Not a man refused to take what was offered to him as drink—even the all-shunned wine was willingly accepted by them; and when an amputation was performed they bore it with heroic fortitude, for, although chloroform was not administered, scarcely a groan escaped while the dreadful knife was severing the member from its body. In action they were cool, gallant, and intrepid; under the painful ordeal of the surgical operation they displayed patience, cheerfulness, and fortitude."

Want of space alone restrains us from making further quotations, but we cannot close this brief notice of Mr. Lowe's spirited narrative without recording our belief that he deserves no small amount of gratitude from all who are interested in rescuing from oblivion the memorable campaigns that were fought in Central India during the years 1857-58.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,
29, LOMBARD-STREET, LONDON, and
ROYAL INSURANCE BUILDINGS, LIVERPOOL.
Chairman in Liverpool—Charles Turner, Esq.
Chairman of London Board—Samuel Baker, Esq.
At the Annual Meeting on the 10th instant the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Notwithstanding the large accessions of business made annually through a long series of years, which obviously increase the difficulty of further advances, the Fire Premiums of the year 1859 rise above those of the preceding year by a larger sum than has been obtained by the increase of any single year since the formation of the company, excepting the year 1853; disclosing an advance of 60 per cent. in three years. To this circumstance must be attributed the gratifying announcement that the accounts for the year show a profit of £42,488. 3s. 4d.

The following figures exhibit the progress of the whole Fire Branches, running over the last ten years:—

1850	£44,027 10 0	£9,557 19 8
1851	52,673 5 11	8,645 15 11
1852	76,925 4 2	24,251 18 3
1853	112,564 4 4	35,639 0 2
1854	128,459 11 4	15,895 7 0
1855	130,060 11 11	1,601 0 7
1856	151,733 9 6	21,673 17 7
1857	175,049 4 8	23,315 15 2
1858	196,148 2 6	21,098 17 10
1859	228,314 7 3	32,166 4 9

LIFE BUSINESS.

The Actuary's Report on this subject is accompanied by an appendix, containing the fullest particulars of the investigation made, and is illustrated by two coloured diagrams, which make plain to the unprofessional eye the mortality experienced by the Royal, as indicated by curved lines, which contrast most favourably with the former averages of mortality, also displayed on the diagrams.

It is expected that these elucidations will attract a deep and profitable attention to the subject of Life Assurance in the minds of tens of thousands who have hitherto given no heed to its principles and advantages, and it is evident that this Company, as well as others, will not fail to reap much of the favourable consequences to be anticipated.

The Bonus apportioned to the assured, with participation, amounts to £2 per cent. per annum, to be added to the original sum assured of EVERY PARTICIPATING POLICY effected previously to the 1st of January, 1858, for each entire year that it had been in existence since the last appropriation of Bonus thereon, and is one of the largest Bonuses ever declared.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS

PURE AND MIXED,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

TEETH.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON DENTIST, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE, is the sole inventor of the above new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared India-rubber, in lieu of the ordinary gold or bone frame.

9, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

From the "Court Journal."

EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION IN DENTAL SURGERY.—To Mr. Ephraim Mosely, of 9, Grosvenor-street, London, may be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoveries of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive as to fix securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spiral springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the ne plus ultra of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified India-rubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect manner, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from becoming painful on the absorption of the gum, and enabling the patient to use any force in masticating or striking the teeth together, without the percussion or rattling that attends the action in general cases.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
"W. J. NEWMAN,
"Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A Cool Skin.

Almost the first indication of fever is the dry burning skin, which is soon succeeded by more distressing symptoms. The unusually wet summer has raised the number of fever cases far above the average; but they have been conducted to a speedy and favourable issue by the use of Holloway's fever-quieting Pills. Where malaria abounds fever soon becomes rife by contaminating the blood, depressing the nervous powers, and discouraging the functions of every organ. Such disordered actions are all rectified by these purifying Pills. They effectually remove the cause of many serious complaints which weekly endanger the lives of thousands of our fellow creatures. They clear the tongue, cool the skin, and renew the strength.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact; but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions, written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 7th August brings the melancholy tidings of the death, from cholera, of the new Governor of Madras, which sad event took place on the 2nd of that month. Sir Henry Ward had been too recently installed in office to render any of those important services to our Indian empire which characterised his tenure of the Government of Ceylon.

"In five years," says an Indian contemporary, "he covered that island with roads and bridges; fought for a railway from Kandy to Colombo with a wise doggedness that will yet bear fruit in success; surveyed the island, and secured fixity of tenure. By Ambulatory Courts of Requests he brought justice to every native's door. He abolished polygamy and polyandry among the Kandians. By wisely planned defences he made Ceylon one of the keys of the Indian Ocean. The revenue, which in 1854 was £310,910, was in 1859 £339,037 more. Upwards of a million sterling was with a wise liberality spent on public works. The customs revenue rose from £110,952 in 1854 to £218,498 in 1859. The land revenue and land sales were more than doubled. The receipts from the Pearl Fisheries were £140,490. The year 1855 began with a surplus of £10,781, the year 1859 closed with £85,814 in the treasury. Sir Henry Ward, in fact, saw the prosperity of the colony just doubled in his five years' tenure of office."

Some startling revelations with respect to the collection of the Income-tax in Oude have already come to light through a libel case that is being tried before the civil judge at Lucknow, and more are yet expected to be made. The imposition of the tax itself has been discovered to be illegal, so that a Bill of Indemnity has been found necessary to cover the arbitrary proceedings of the authorities in that province. And now it appears that not only was the tax irregular and contrary to law, but that gross corruption and oppression have been displayed in collecting it. At the very time when Lord Canning penned his despatch, assuring the Home Secretary that the Income-tax was being levied in Oude "without a murmur," the City of Lucknow was being goaded on to rebellion by the intolerable exactions of the native officials. Most painful and disgraceful disclosures, to which we shall allude more fully in our next number, have been made respecting the misery of the people through the tyranny of their almost irresponsible rulers. The veil that concealed the true state of things has been torn aside in consequence of an article which appeared in the Oude Gazette, accusing Ramdial, a magistrate and assistant commissioner, of lending himself to bribery and the employment of torture. For this the proprietors and editor of that paper have been put on their trial for libel, and a more ill-advised course of proceeding could hardly have been imagined, at least if Ramdial had any option in the matter. One witness against him has, indeed, been committed for perjury, which will surprise no one, however slightly acquainted with the elastic nature of native veracity; but the bulk of the evidence adduced is too clear and substantial to leave any doubt of the malpractices of the subordinate officials in Oude. We shall rejoice, indeed, if the natives alone are found worthy of blame; but it is strange that Captain Chamberlain and other police-officers should have been dismissed from their appointments for endeavouring to expose the rascality of the tax-gatherers. The proprietors of the Oude Gazette have also been fined 200 rupees for publishing the proceedings, as though the Commissioner of a non-regulation province were invested with despotic power and entitled to indulge every caprice without let or hindrance.

In Central India there are still a few bands of rebels at large, who are seeking to engage Bheels in their service. Feroze Shah was supposed to be in Upper Scinde, but his movements have at last excited the vigilance of the local officers. In Candeish, however, the insurgents have been overtaken in the Satpoora Hills by a light field force, under the command of Captain Atkins and Lieutenant Probyn, their camp captured, their plunder taken from them, and not a few of their number killed or wounded.

In Bombay itself considerable discontent had been manifested, in consequence of the new Income-tax, and the Hindoo cloth merchants had the assurance to close their shops and declare that they would transact no more business until the hateful impost was repealed. However, in a very few days they came to their senses, and resolved to submit to circumstances that were beyond their control. The high price of necessaries is likewise commented upon—meat being threefold dearer than in ordinary times—and it is clear that this is owing, not to any real scarcity, but to an organised conspiracy against the new financial measures of the Government.

In our issue of the 6th of August there appeared a contradiction of the rumour that the Elphinstone, H.M.L.N., had been lost in the Persian Gulf, and we are now in a position to substantiate that contradiction. On the 27th of June that fine ship was safe at Bushire,—a date considerably later than that of her reported loss.

We have been requested to mention that the home agencies of the Bengal Military and Orphan Funds will be removed to 55, Parliament-street, Westminster, on the 24th of the present month. The establishment of the India-office has commenced the preparation of labour of removal to the West-End.

We are indebted to the Bombay Times for the following telegram from China, ten days later than the latest accounts previously received in this country:—

HONG KONG, July 17.

Steamer Fiery Cross leaves to-day.

The steamer Urgent arrived from Talien Bay with dates to 6th July; came for supplies which cannot be had there; other steamers to follow her.

The French have lost all their harness in a vessel wrecked at Amoy, and want to wait for a fresh supply from France. They protested against our going on without them, and they will not be ready until the end of August. They also protested against our having 2,000 more men than they, and insisted on this number being left behind.

The British force was ready, and on the 26th June Lord Elgin induced Baron Gros to withdraw these protests.

The French force was being hurried up, and the attack was to be made at once.

SIR H. G. WARD.—Sir Henry Ward, whose death from cholera took place on the 2nd of August, succeeded Sir C. Trevelyan as Governor of Madras, whose protest against the Income-tax in India created no little surprise a short time since. He was the only son of the late Mr. Robert Plumer Ward, of Gilston-park, Herts, by his first wife, daughter of Mr. C. T. Maling, of West Hennington, Durham. He married, in 1824, the second daughter of Sir J. E. Swinburne; was Minister Plenipotentiary for acknowledging the Mexican Republic; was Secretary to the Admiralty from July, 1846, to May, 1849; Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands (and a G.C.M.G.), according to usage, on receiving this office) from May, 1849, to February, 1855, when he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Ceylon. He was also proprietor of the Weekly Chronicle from its establishment up to 1849, and took an active share in railway enterprise; was M.P. for St. Alban's from 1832 to 1837, and for Sheffield from 1837 to May, 1849.

MORALITY IN PEGU.

The trial of Captain Grant, formerly deputy commissioner of Rangoon, for criminal intercourse with the daughter of one of his own subordinate officers, reveals a state of things in Pegu most disgraceful to our administration and to our name. With his guilt or innocence we have at present nothing to do. The Commissioner and the Supreme Government are satisfied as to the former. The full evidence taken during the trial is not before us, but the report of the commission, consisting of Major Sparks, Major Tickell, and Captain Powers, and signed by the two last, is one of the most discreditable productions ever written by British officers. It is an elaborate special pleading for vice of the most detestable nature. It discloses an amount of immorality on the part of some British officers and Christian clerks in the province for which we were not prepared. The document might have issued from Holywell-street. Apart from its unworthy tone, the report indulges in insinuations against Colonel Phayre, the commissioner, which are carelessly based on mere rumour. We have seldom seen so severe, and have never read so well-deserved a rebuke as that administered by Government to Major Tickell and Captain Power. They acquitted Captain Grant, but he has been remanded to his regiment, and directed to await the orders of the Secretary of State for India on his case. Had they been as much biassed against him as they were in his favour they could not have done him more injury than by the "general remarks" officiously appended to their opinion.

We honour Colonel Phayre for the stand he has taken, and the odium he has incurred in an attempt to stem the tide of immorality which seemed likely to flood the Pegu Commission. At this moment more than one class of society in Burmah seems to be as bad as the English in India were a century ago, to be worse than communities so notorious as the people of Hong Kong and Macao. Concubinage is the rule, decency the exception. Our language is not too strong. Government thus addresses the Commissioner:—

"The Governor-general in Council perceives with deep regret that you have had to deal with a state of things very different from that which prevails in other parts of India, where the habits of the native population impose a certain restraint of outward decency, even in the least moral states of society. There are in these proceedings frequent traces of a shameless open profligacy which you justly consider to be a scandal to our administration. In the present instance your proceedings have certainly not been characterised by undue severity, and you may be assured of the support of Government in your efforts to clear the character of the administration from the stigma which such proceedings as those of Captain Grant are calculated to fix upon it."

Colonel Phayre is now in Calcutta. His own reputation is spotless. In personal conferences with the Governor-general he will be able to discuss many matters which need settlement. Police reform, the military defence of the province, the late outbreak at Shway Gyeen, the amalgamation of the Tenasserim provinces with Pegu, and the financial relation of both to the new Boards, are questions which press for decision. But no mere administrative reform will avail if the honour of the British name and the reality of the Christian profession are to be brought into contempt in the eyes of our heathen subjects. Some of our readers may remember the wise measures adopted by Lord Dalhousie on the annexation of the Punjab to prevent the state of things in Pegu now denounced as "a scandal to our administration." Let his successor follow his example. —Friend of India.

WAR BETWIXT MAN AND THE WILD BEASTS.

There is nothing more emphatically proved by science than that man was the last of the living creatures that was created, and that the forests and seas were filled, the mountains and plains covered with inhabitants, before he who was to have dominion over all appeared in the world. It is impossible to guess whether the love of hunting was an instinct planted in the bosom of man from the first, and only developed when its exercise became essential to his existence, or whether the importance of self-defence, and the excitement of the dangers attending it, begot a love of hunting, which survives the necessity out of which it arose. But this is certain, that from the remotest periods of time to the present hour, man has carried on a perpetual war with the beasts of the field, and when no longer necessary has become delighted with the strife. The contest has had in general but one issue, and intellect has always proved itself too much for animal cunning or mere muscular force. It takes us by surprise and fills us almost with incredulity under these circumstances, to learn that there are at this moment many parts of the British dominions where the beasts have the best of it, and where, though there are certainly many more who fall on the unreasoning than the reasoning side, the numbers of the former in reserve make up for the difference of loss. Where the animal man is most timid, feeble, and defenceless, the tigers, lions, wolves, and bears with whom he has to contend are in the very highest condition. Their paradise is in the steaming jungle, which to us brings sickness and death.

These reflections have been forced upon us by statements that would have seemed incredible had we not been certain that they are true, of the number of people destroyed by tigers in the Straits Settlements, by wolves in the Punjab, and snakes in Scinde—for the loathsome reptile which crawls upon its belly is quite as terrible in its destructiveness as the noblest looking, if they be the most ferocious of our animals. Betwixt January 1859 and February 1860 no fewer than 1,500 human beings were carried off by tigers in the extremity of the Malayan peninsula; nor do we know that this is very greatly in excess of the destruction of previous years. In the Punjab during the year 1858 five men, one woman and 293 children, or 299 human beings in all, were carried off by wolves, 171 having been more or less injured but not destroyed. In the following year 467 children were destroyed by these ferocious brutes, and the slaughter or abduction of the little ones is much more touching than the greater destruction in Malacca of adults. There is a belief very general, and to which the late Sir William Sleeman, a keen and patient observer, not apt to be led away by the fancies or unsupported statements, subscribes, that the children carried away by wolves are not always destroyed by them; that they are sometimes nursed and reared till they appear afterwards in the shape of demi-human savages, with the form and aspects of humanity, but the appetites and habits of the wolf. Robbers were said to adopt this fearful form of abduction to bring the wolves and their infant prey as often as possible into each other's vicinity—the wolf dens remaining to be searched becoming afterwards magazines of the ornaments of their little victims.

But the most fearful and inglorious form in which the sacrifice of human life presents itself is when it becomes extinguished by reptiles. Yet there are more Sindians who fall annually victims to the fangs of poisonous snakes than there were of the invaders who fell before the blade or the matchlock of the Beloochee during the consummation of the conquest. In 1855 the Commissioner reported that 300 persons had in this way perished within the year, and subsequent accounts give us reason to believe that this is about the average mortality from snake bites. If we go no further back than the year referred to, this will give us 1,500 deaths up to the present time. Yet the war carried on against this most disgusting of enemies is fearfully fatal to them. A reward of 4 annas a head being offered, about 10,000 were decapitated in three months, and somewhere from 10,000 to 25,000 a-year are thus made away with. Yet the mortality has scarcely decreased. There are above forty varieties of snake in the Concan and Deccan, of which not more than six or eight are poisonous, and this proportion in all likelihood exists in Scinde—so that, as no particular anatomical examination was possible, it is most likely that five reptiles innocent of murder were slain for one of the really guilty who suffered. In the three regions referred to it may without much risk be affirmed that not fewer than 2,000 persons are killed annually by tigers, wolves, and serpents. For results so very fearful there seems hitherto to have been no sufficient remedy and no one to blame.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JUBBULPORE, July 22.—We are to have the Governor-general and Commander-in-Chief here in the middle of October, and it is not improbable that the Lieutenant-governor of the North West Provinces will come with them. The Governor-general's camp is to be formed at Allahabad in the first week of October. He marches down through Central India via Indore to Bombay en route (I believe) to England. The old destructive centralisation is in full swing again at army head quarters. Commanding officers of regiments must be ciphers under Horse Guards' Commanders-in-Chief. The warning given us by the old Pandey army has been lost. Centralisation is rapidly sapping the discipline of the Punjab force. The commanding officers of Punjab regiments are constantly reminded now that this and that power which they not only exercised but were encouraged to exercise while the force was under the direct orders of the Punjab Government is not permitted under the new regime. The natural fruits of this policy are already forthcoming. The authority of the commanding officer is disregarded; powerless to punish and powerless to reward, how is he to maintain his authority? The plans, specifications, &c., for the railway from this to Allahabad have just been completed and sent home for the orders of the company, whose sanction may be expected here in October. There are no engineering difficulties of any consequence on the line, but owing to the great scarcity of labour in this part of the world no one expects to see it opened before five years. Some engineers say seven. We have had continuous heavy rain here since the 14th, average temperature 78 degrees.—Delhi Gazette.

PESHAWUR, July 18.—Monday, the 16th inst., proved a veritable "St. Bartholomew" for all soldiers' pets in the station. Early in the morning an order, said to emanate from the Quarter Master-general's department, and applicable to the whole of the Presidency, was promulgated, dooming to instant destruction dogs, monkeys, parrots, minahs, fowls, pigeons, et id genus omne which one sees about barracks, and which official naturalists are pleased to denounce under the broad appellation of "vermin." The massacre which followed the publication of this edict in Peshawur made one regret the absence of a "Martin's Act" in India. It was sickening; the men, wrought up to a pitch of fury almost at what they considered to be a most arbitrary order, hung, and killed with sticks and stones the pets that they had reared up themselves, and with whom they had shared their daily rations so long; it actually seemed as if they were striving to obey the very spirit of the enactment itself, which very many people hold to be cruel in the extreme. Captain Whish, 29th N.I., has assumed the office of Cantonment Joint Magistrate from Lieut. Wace, of the 33rd, who has officiated for some time past in that capacity, and performed the duty faithfully and with great ability.—Delhi Gazette.

PESHAWUR, July 25.—The events of the past week are highly creditable to the enterprise of our somewhat unscrupulous neighbours, the Khyberees. Whether Mr. Harrington's "Disarming Bill" has been mooted among them or not I cannot aver, but their proceedings almost confirm one in the opinion that they know something about it, and are carrying out its provisions with a little more zeal, however, than the honourable gentleman probably contemplated. I refer to a brace of exploits which these worthies perpetrated on the same night (the 17th) here and at Nowshera. Their Peshawur coup de main was achieved at the expense of a guard of the Bengal Artillery, the men who were then on duty losing several carbines, swords, and other articles of equipment, including, I am told, some one's pair of boots. A court of inquiry has investigated the circumstances attending this extraordinary affair, and the result is that an acting bombardier and two gunners are to be tried by district court-martial for not keeping a sharper look-out for hill visitors. The affair at Nowshera consists of the abstraction of six Enfield Rifles from the barracks of her Majesty's 94th, since which double guards, sentries and pickets have been detailed to prevent a recurrence of the transaction. Having thus provided themselves with munition of war, the Khyber industriels set about getting up an exchequer, and by way of a beginning entered the sergeant-major's Bungalow, in the lines of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, in this station, night before last, while he was in hospital, and carried off a box containing something like Rs. 800, mostly regimental money. The box was found on the parade-ground, some 400 yards from the bungalow, yesterday morning, broken open, but minus the vestige of a single rupee. Active measures have been adopted to trace the robbery to its authors; but thus far there is very little promise of success in the search.—Delhi Gazette.

MURREE, July 19.—The rains have set in at last. One incessant shower of sixteen hours' duration has completely changed the aspect of the station. Every green thing seems refreshed, and the cry so long and loud touching the scarcity of water has now ceased. The prices of grain have also fallen. Atta, which a few days ago was selling at twenty-five seers per rupee, is now to be had at thirty-two. The rain, however, is not seasonable for the cultivators in the adjoining villages. There is hardly any chance of realising even an average crop of Indian corn, which is the principal food of the hill people. You have doubtless seen an advertisement in the Lahore Chronicle setting forth a scheme for the establishment of a brewery at this station. It will indeed be a happy time when we shall be able to drink wholesome and cheap beer manufactured at our own doors. Every effort should be made to grow hops in the neighbourhood, for I have seen the hop plant in a most flourishing state at Murree in the public garden some few years ago, but I have never seen it flower, which may be attributable to cold, to continued rains, or to thunderstorms, from each and all of which causes combined the plant is very liable to injury. Hop gardens may succeed at Shamlee, or Bukkot, but there is hardly any doubt that they would luxuriate in the valley of Cashmere just as well as they do in Kent, if not in Germany, where, according to Beckmann's account, the plant grows wild, and is common in hedges and fences. I congratulate the projectors of the Murree Joint Stock Brewery (Limited) for their public spirit, and sincerely wish them every success in their undertaking. They are going to brew experimentally on a small scale in October next, under the superintendence of a person who is well acquainted with the process of manufacturing beer.—Delhi Gazette.

SIMLA, July 24.—The rain has at last come down in torrents, and we now complain as much of the damp and continuous rain as a few days back we did of the heat and drought. On Sunday the Bishop preached to almost empty pews, there being but six persons beside the clerk who dared to face the inclement weather. Mr. Wingfield, the chief commissioner of Oude, left Simla on the 22nd. His three months' leave having expired, of course he was compelled to return to the Plains, though it is reported that he is on the point of taking his furlough to England, and that it is possible he will be relieved by Mr. Barnes, the commissioner of this district.

GWALIOR, July 24.—Since I last wrote the weather has been very boisterous, and we have had two or three heavy showers of rain, which have reduced the heat in a great measure, but from little rain and severe heat arose a mist which remained for a day or so, as if small particles of red dust were suspended in the air, and soon after its abatement we had a regular down-pour of rain last evening, causing cholera to break out in the 71st Regiment. They had four cases; one died, but the other three are in a fair way of recovery.—I am told that four companies of her Majesty's 80th Regiment are to relieve the four companies of the 71st, now garrisoning the fort of Gwalior. They are to get together and make arrangements for their move to Umballah; two companies of the above detachment have arrived at Seepree, and it is expected they will be here in a day or so, as a portion of their women and children have arrived in the station.—Delhi Gazette.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—An accident occurred to Lieut. Kennard, of the 7th Hussars, on the 13th July, which was very nearly proving fatal. That officer was riding from Simlah to Subathoo, accompanied by a friend, when suddenly his horse shied and went over the side of the road, which was very precipitous, and was dashed to pieces. Lieut. Kennard, with great presence of mind, threw himself off his horse, and happily escaped unhurt.

A MARRIAGE IN NATIVE HIGH LIFE has lately taken place, which has caused a good deal of sensation, and has even been commented upon by a writer in a native paper published at Delhi. The bride is the illegitimate daughter of the Rajah of Keonthul, and she has been married to the Rajah of Mundee. The bridegroom came not to fetch the lady, he only sent a servant for her. From all accounts he has gained a prize, for the little bride took with her as dowry, it is said, a lac of rupees, partly in cash, the remainder in clothes, jewellery, and vessels of gold and silver. The only son and heir of the Rajah of Keonthul is somewhat, and very naturally, irate at so much wealth being given away, while the debts of the State, amounting to very nearly a lac of rupees, remain unpaid. When two or three years ago the two daughters of the heir were married to the Rajah of Sirmoor, the Rajah, grandfather of the little bride, pleaded poverty as his excuse for not being able to give an outfit, in the shape of clothes and jewellery, beyond 10,000 rupees, besides an elephant and eleven horses, and two slave girls; altogether the wedding was a shabby affair, according to the ideas of natives, while with his illegitimate daughter, besides the above named dowry, an elephant, the same number of horses, and seven slave girls were sent to the Rajah of Mundee. The heir says he considers himself to have been degraded by his father; the young man is kept with a large family of wives and children on a very short allowance, while he has the prospect before him, should his father die shortly, of having to pay off the debts of the State. The heir has appealed to the Punjab Government, and is told the authorities cannot interfere, these hills being merely protected by us. But the very fact of the British Government standing in the light of protectors, shows that it must have influence over the government of the country, and this influence should be exerted by the local authorities for the good of each State, preventing as far as possible any cause for internal disagreement, and all lavish expenditure injurious to its well-being. The hill chieftains are quite prepared for nay, almost expect this interference in a moderate degree; the weak, who are tyrannised over by the more powerful, would be truly thankful to the Government if it would exert itself to protect their rights from being encroached on.—Delhi Gazette.

THE NAWAB OF LOHAROO, one of the small protected States near Delhi, has been oppressing his people; this having been brought to the notice of the Lieutenant governor of the Punjab, the assistant-governor of the division was instructed to warn him that a continuance of such conduct would lead to serious, and to him disagreeable consequences. This Nawab is the brother of Shumsodeen, who was hanged for causing the murder of Mr. Fraser, the commissioner of Delhi.

DELHI, July 18.—On the night of the 16th instant, a party of Budmashes entered the house of an officer at this place, unnoticed, and took his sword from the head of his bed, besides other property of value; his revolver escaped their notice, as he had it under the pillow; the night being unusually cool, he unfortunately slept sounder than he generally does. The doors of his bed-room were open, but chicks with wood across the doors were nailed down. The visitors appear to have been provided with sharp knives, as they cut the chicks completely away from the wood. Having entered the bed-room they proceeded to work, and of course secured the sword first; they next went to an adjoining room, where the children slept, and having picked the locks, rifled the trunks and portmanteaus, and took everything worth taking. Next morning the bearer called attention to the chicks that were cut, in the most innocent manner possible. The officer who had been robbed immediately gave the alarm, sent to the Kotwal, searched every place adjoining his house, hoping to find his sword, but unfortunately sword, property, and robbers had disappeared, and he is left to console himself as best he can.

LUCKNOW, July 8.—Lucknow is much infested with wolves, which commit great havoc among the native children. Almost every week one or two cases of the kind are brought to the notice of the authorities; and although means are adopted by which they may be entrapped and rewards offered for their apprehension, yet all to no purpose, for the natives of the place seem to care very little whether they are apprehended or not. I went to the Alum Bagh the other day for the express purpose of seeing the tomb of the late General Havelock. When I got there, to my great surprise and disgust, I found that no tomb whatever was raised to his memory. It is true he is buried there, for some time after I had been strolling about the place, I found nailed to a mango tree under which he is buried a piece of tin with the following words marked on it:—"On this spot lie the remains of General Havelock. May he rest in peace!" This is all by which strangers when visiting the place may know that Havelock is buried in the Alum Bagh. Havelock, the man who fought and bled for his country's cause; Havelock, the saviour of Lucknow, there he lies, the man whose name was a very terror to the rebels when he was alive. Two years and more have now elapsed since the death of Havelock, and nothing has as yet been raised to his memory.—Phanir.

A "STERN PARIENT."—General Sir John Elley, Lieut.-governor of Galway, head colonel of the 17th Lancers, who had his breast covered with medals and orders, in 1835 died, disinheriting his son for marrying against his wishes, and was buried with high military pomp in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle—the writer of this notice assisting at the ceremony. Gen. Sir John Elley was learned in the Continental languages, which made his services valuable as the right-hand man of the Great Duke in gaining intelligence during the French war. On the 26th July, 1860, there died a pauper's death in the General Hospital of Bombay, John Elley, aged 40, late station master at Byeulla, who was the grandson of Sir John Elley.

OPIMUM CULTIVATION.—Government is going to make the experiment of cultivating opium in Oude without advances. Two sub-deputy opium agents have been appointed in Fyzabad and Seetapoor for the purpose of introducing this system. Licences are to be granted to cultivators willing to plant the poppy on the new terms—viz., payment on delivery of the opium at the factories. If they fail to cultivate or to deliver the opium the licences will be withdrawn; all the other rules and regulations are to be the same as now in force in the Benares agency. We are not informed whether or not the ryots are to be paid a higher price under this new system, but it cannot work well without an addition to the price at least equal to the interest usually paid for money by the ryot.

THE INDIAN MINTS.—The bullion or coin received at the Calcutta Mint during the month of June amounted to Rs. 3,357 from Government, and Rs. 24,27,910 from merchants; the amount coined being valued at Rs. 43,21,488. At the Madras Mint there was received the value of Rs. 1,268 from Government, and Rs. 8,19,407 from merchants, and coined Rs. 4,53,000. The Bombay Mint received bullion or coin to the value of Rs. 25,283 from Government, and Rs. 6,39,236 from merchants, and coined the value of Rs. 25,25,111.

PROGRESS OF PROSELYTISM.—The Christianisation of the Koles in the Chota Nagpore district is proceeding at a very rapid rate. Two thousand have already been baptised, or rather this was the number some six months ago. The number of those who have broken caste and have applied for baptism is also very large. Ninety were baptised in January last. A missionary writes that in the neighbourhood of Ranchi the Gospel is spreading like a fire in the jungle. As many as 800 villages have received the Gospel. So many Koles were pouring into the station from the jungle, that three missionaries were occupied all day in giving them instruction. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal visited the district in January, and was greatly astonished at what he saw. His secretary remarked to the missionaries, "There was never seen such a sight in India as this." This referred to a gathering of about 2,000 native Christians, at which he was present. From the province of Pachete, Kabripunthis have presented themselves to the number of forty-six, out of eleven villages, asking instruction. They say that large bodies of this sect are ready to embrace Christianity. There are six missionaries in the Chota-Nagpore field, Germans sent forth originally by Gossner. We see it stated that in Lucknow and the surrounding villages eighty-nine natives have been baptised since the rebellion.—Guardian.

ALLAHABAD, July 26.—Incessant rain for the last three days. Ploughings and sowings going on vigorously. Indigo (Kootee) flourishing, and the manufacture likely to commence about the 15th August.

BURMAH.—From the frontier we (Rangoon Times) learn that border robberies are still perpetrated with unblushing boldness and audacity. No people, it would appear, dare live near the boundary on the English side, as on the opposite side there are swarms of robbers, hungry after plunder as wolves are for prey. Two Burmese families, living on the premises of the late assistant-engineer of the Meaday district, were lately attacked and robbed of all they had, oxen, cows, carts, clothes, money, everything; and besides, the women and children were savagely tortured by burning with live coals. The frontier police force, if there is such a body in the employ of the Government, ought to be called upon to give a good account of these lawless and daring characters. Lead and rope are the only effectual remedies for these audacious gangs, and to meet the exigencies of the case, plenary powers should be permanently given to the deputy-commissioner, or the European officer in charge of the Promote district.

THE TRADE RETURNS of Madras for 1859-60 have been submitted to Government. In the imports of merchandise and treasure there was an increase, as compared with the trade of 1858-59, of Rs. 37,42,102. In exports the returns exhibit an increase of Rs. 49,82,002 in merchandise, and a decrease of Rs. 11,80,989 in treasure, the net increase being Rs. 38,02,004, and in the re-export of merchandise there was a decrease of Rs. 4,59,882. On the whole, the increase in merchandise is Rs. 51,21,726, and in treasure Rs. 19,62,488, the total being Rs. 70,34,224. Government consider the results reported satisfactory.

THE "MALABAR."—1,088 boxes of specie have been saved from the Malabar; only ten remain, containing about £16,000, and they will most likely be saved on the weather moderating. When the Pekin passed through the swell was too heavy for the divers to work. About one-half the mails and baggage still remain unrecovered. Owing to the unusual mildness of the monsoon, the divers have succeeded in a manner quite unexpected.

THE CEDED DISTRICTS, it is said, are to be restored to the Nizam, in acknowledgment, we presume, of the services he rendered us in the rebellion. The Hyderabad contingent is to revert to its old name, the Nizam's Contingent. This will probably lead to the re-employment of many of the local officers of the old service who were got rid of when the British Government took the contingent into its own hands.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BOMBAY, August 2.—An event of grave importance has occurred in Bombay. Terrified into action by the conviction now at last forced upon them that the dreaded Income-tax, which they so fondly hoped to escape, will certainly be imposed, the Hindoo cloth merchants in the bazaar took the initiative yesterday in rebellion by entering into a league to close their shops to-day, carry home their books, and rigidly abstain from all business till the Income-tax Act is repealed. These affectionately loyal subjects, whom we have petted and fawned upon till they have risen to this unparalleled height of insolence, have, we are informed, opened negotiations with the Mahomedan merchants and traders, to induce them to join in factious opposition to a Government whose only fault is that it has shown too much deference to the feelings of people who are incapable of appreciating either generosity or forbearance. The butchers have already raised the price of meat three fold, and are now selling 4 lbs. for a rupee; and it is rumoured that the malcontents are endeavouring to incite all the provision traders of the bazaar to close their shops, and cause a famine in the town, which, they fancy, will be more efficacious than a mere stoppage of business. We remember to have read in Sir John Lawrence's evidence before the Committee on Colonisation that the disaffected inhabitants of Delhi attempted to defeat one of his financial measures by this sort of passive resistance. Sir John, with his usual vigour, immediately brought convoys of provisions into the city from all the country round, and fed the people himself till the foolish traders recovered their senses. We are sure that if the movement we have referred to be really carried out in Bombay, our Government will not yield to so miserable a conspiracy, but imitating the wise example of Sir J. Lawrence, will prove to the people that there is a will stronger than theirs, and that the decrees of the Government must be obeyed. If our rulers hesitate now, the power to tax India at all will have passed away from them for ever, and they may shut up their account-books to-morrow, and take ship for the old country. It is most creditable to the Parsee merchants and shopkeepers that not one of them has consented to join in this movement. Like good citizens, the Parsees, however strongly opposed they may have been to the passing of the Income-tax Bill, are willing to obey the laws of this land, and will cheerfully pay their allotted share of the expenses of the State.—Aug. 6.—We are glad to learn that the cloth merchants of Bombay, finding no support in their shop-closing movement, resumed trade on Friday last. This will probably be a lesson to the natives that they cannot take the law into their own hands. Had the movement been persisted in, all concerned would, by virtue of a penal clause in the Income-tax Act, have rendered themselves liable to imprisonment and a heavy fine. At present they have the satisfaction of reflecting that they are only out of pocket the value of the business they might have done during the two or three days their shops were shut. This will, of course, assist them in paying the Income-tax. The high price of provisions still continues, and from all that we hear, it seems to be necessary that Government should interfere to regulate the bazaar rates.—Bombay Gazette.

CHOLERA has recently made its appearance at Poona, and two or three fatal cases have occurred amongst the European troops in camp.

THE MONSOON.—The total fall of rain at Bombay up to Saturday, August 4, inclusive, is as follows:—At Byculla, 59 in. 13 cts.; in the Fort, 53 in. 76 cts.; and at Colaba, 45 in. 31 cts.

KURRACHEE STEAM PRESSING COMPANY.—A new firm is about to establish itself in this rising town, for the purpose of pressing wool and cotton by steam power. A plot of land has already been purchased. The machinery was shipped from England in May last, and we have been credibly informed also that it is of such simple construction that there is every prospect of its being erected and ready for work early in November next.

STEAM COMMUNICATION BETWEEN KURRACHEE AND ADEN.—A meeting of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce was held at the office of Messrs. D. McIver, on Friday, the 27th; there were present D. McIver, Esq., chairman, Messrs. Stewart, Barclay, Bell, and Mr. T. W. B. Jefferies, secretary. A draft of a memorial to the Postmaster-general of London was read, praying that direct steam communication be established between Kurrachee and Aden. Some modifications having been suggested and approved of, a fresh draft was directed to be prepared and submitted at the next meeting of the Chamber. The secretary was directed to communicate with the commissioners in the Punjab and North-West Provinces on the subject of the above-named memorial, forwarding them copies thereof, and requesting their co-operation in the measure set forth by the Chamber. It was settled that a special meeting be convened, for the purpose of having the draft in its modified form submitted to the Chamber in time for transmission to England by the present mail.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—The following movements of troops are likely soon to take place:—The 2nd Europeans will leave Bombay for Poona, to relieve H.M.'s 57th regiment, which will go to Belgaum. The 83rd, now at Belgaum, will change to Bombay. The 6th Carabineers, now at Meerut, will be relieved in the autumn by a Dragoon regiment from Bombay. The 6th are to go home. The Bombay Government complains of having three Dragoon regiments, and thinks that two are quite sufficient. One, therefore, is to be withdrawn, and brought into the Bengal Presidency. The greater portion (about 750 men) of H.M.'s 64th Foot proceed immediately to Hyderabad by Government flotilla vessels, to be located there for the winter in the new European barracks, considered to be one of the finest constructed buildings in the Bombay Presidency. This corps is expected to return to Kurrachee in February next, and from thence, it is rumoured, will proceed direct to England. After the departure of the above corps to Hyderabad, the 3rd Bombay Europeans will remove into the quarters of the 64th, who are suffering from ophthalmia; many men have been carried off by this fearful epidemic.

SIR JAMES OUTRAM.—An enthusiastic public meeting has been held in Calcutta, to give all classes of the community an occasion of expressing their affectionate regard and admiration for a man whose pure character and heroic services have gained him a name unrivalled in the history of British India—fertile as that history has been of grand deeds and great men. Sir James Outram has, at the time we write, left the shores of India, probably to return no more, and never has one whom fortune had raised so high above the crowd quitted public life amidst more sincere or universal regret. For the greater portion of his career Sir James Outram was engaged in bitter controversies against powerful foes; yet his fame is now unsullied by the lightest breath of slander, and not a whisper of detraction disturbs the unanimous consent with which all rejoice to do him honour. The Calcutta address recites in earnest and eloquent words the story of a life passed in glorious works; but no language can do justice to those qualities which elevate the name of Outram above those of all other Indian statesmen and generals—to the chivalrous guilelessness of heart which convinces us that all he does must be good and noble, and the irresistible charm of manner—that surest mark of true genius—which subdues all who come within its influence, and has won for the “good Sir James” the most widespread and enduring popularity that any man has ever achieved in India. This is not the place for us to speak of his skill and judgment as a general, not only in the field but in the camp—of his dauntless courage in battle, and the tender, anxious care with which he provided for every want of the men he led to victory. He has raised for himself a monument in the hearts of the British army; and there could be no prouder trophy of his greatness than the tears which were wept by rough-bearded soldiers and callous men of the world, when at the end of that fierce Lucknow campaign they pressed in crowds round Sir James Outram, to press once more the hand and to hear the farewell words of their beloved leader. The old men are fast dying out of India, and a new race is succeeding them. Whether for good or for evil, little more than the memory of the Company's servants will soon be left with us. Whatever manner of men they be who supply the vacant places, they cannot qualify themselves to rule and hold India better than by studying to guide themselves in all their actions by the principles of the public career of Sir James Outram. Not that they can hope to attain his excellence; for his character is that of a Paladin of old, one who might have sat at the Round Table as a worthy compeer of any there, or whom Mr. Tennyson might even have taken as the model of his King Arthur—the type of manly heroism, faith, and purity—“the blameless knight and stainless gentleman.”—Bombay Gazette.

KURRACHEE PORT RULES.—A meeting was convened on Friday, the 20th July, by the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce, with a view to drawing up rules for the Kurrachee Port; and the same are to be forwarded to the Commissioner for the approval of the Bombay Government. One of the members of the Chamber moved for a secretary, and the person selected to fill this respectable berth is Mr. T. W. B. Jefferies, the present able editor of Our Paper. Mr. Jefferies has accepted the secretaryship of the Chamber of Commerce, but he will retain the reins of Our Paper.

VIEWS IN WESTERN INDIA.—Our readers will be glad to hear that Mr. George Landseer, already so favourably known to them as an artist, has in preparation a work to be styled “Western India,” and to consist of landscape drawings of the Presidency and adjacent country. In the series will be views of Bombay and its harbour, Elephanta, Walkeshwar, Karli, Matheran, Khandalla, Poona, Sattara, Mahabaleswar, and the Falls of Guseppa. The drawings will be executed in tinted lithography. A few copies will be coloured by hand. For a work which cannot fail to be most beautiful and interesting we are justified in anticipating an extensive popularity. The oil paintings of Matheran, taken by the same artist for Mr. Malet, were sent to England some time ago; and we learn that they have been very much liked at home, and that the Queen and Prince Albert, to whom they were shown, have spoken of them in the most flattering terms.

BHEEL OUTRAGES.—A letter from Ahmednuggur states that on the 3rd or 4th July a party of twenty-five Bheels, armed with guns, swords, and daggers, looted the shops of two Marwadias at the village of Choss, in the district of Ancola, Ahmednuggur Collectorate. The place is but two miles distant from the spot which proved fatal to the unfortunate Captain Henry three years ago. A son of Bhagojee Naik's is said to have been amongst this party. They carried off Rs. 1,000 worth of property, and beat some of the inhabitants severely, but did not kill any one. No force being at hand, effectual inquiries could not be made at the time, but the assistant police superintendent shortly afterwards arrived on the spot, and subsequent investigation resulted in the discovery and apprehension of three of the Bheels with Rs. 35 worth of property in their possession. The owners of the property are, however, afraid to identify it, lest they should bring on themselves the vengeance of the Bheels at some subsequent period.

MR. JOHN FLEMING.—Bombay lost yesterday (July 23) one of her ablest and most energetic citizens. It is unfortunately so common a thing in this country to speak of every man of good position, when he is leaving us, as if he were a demigod, that praise loses all its value by becoming indiscriminate. But we have no fear of being suspected of exaggeration when we express the sincere regret that the community of Bombay, European and native, has felt at the departure of Mr. John Fleming from amongst us. Coming out here eleven or twelve years ago, a young man, to a mercantile house of inferior standing, he applied himself to business with so much zeal and judgment that he has raised the house to which he belongs to a foremost place. It would be well if the means by which he effected this, and gained for himself the enduring respect and confidence of the people, were applied by others among our merchants and professional men. He took the unusual course of mastering the three native languages most useful to dwellers in this Presidency, and this knowledge, which gave him at once a superiority over all his European rivals, enabled him to gauge the character of the natives, and to learn that kindness and moderation are better instruments of government and progress than arrogance and exclusiveness. He goes away with that highest character which an Englishman can earn in this country,—“He was a friend of the natives.” Nor, in obtaining the regard of one portion of the community did he lose that of the other. He was as active among Europeans as among natives. In any public movement of importance he was sure to take the lead; in such questions as the development of the cotton growing resources of India he took a deep and intelligent interest; and he was, in fact, not only the leading man, but the life and soul of the Chamber of Commerce. Would that there were more like him!—Bombay Gazette.

DISCOVERY OF A MISSING STEAMER.—An officer of H.M.S.'s ship Retribution, writing from Trincomalee on July 5th, mentions in the following terms the finding of a small steamer, which had been out from England more than a year without being heard of, and was long ago given up as lost:—“We picked up off Galle and towed into Trincomalee a small steamer named the Taptee, fourteen months out from England, the pilot having refused to take her into Galle because it blew so hard. We boarded her four days since, and she had then only two days' provisions on board. She has been four months on her voyage from the Cape of Good Hope. She carries two Government passengers, two women, and one child. The Taptee, which is rigged as a schooner, but has all her machinery on board, is bound to Bombay.”

THE MOHURRUM FESTIVAL.—This festival, which closed on Monday, August 6th, has passed over with less than the ordinary pomp and splendour of the occasion. The diminished number of taboots in comparison with preceding years, evinces a growing dislike in the members of the Mahomedan community to keep up this system of commemorating the cruel deaths of those martyrs to the Mussulman faith—Hasein and Hossein. Indeed, all the better informed portions of the Mussulmans now content themselves with visiting the mosques during the continuance of the festival, and there hear recounted by the priest tales descriptive of the sufferings of their martyred saints. There has usually been a taboot—one of the most magnificent in Bombay—erected near the Marine lines, by the officers and men of the Marine battalion, which has now been discontinued, and many others which, though of minor importance in the equipage, have secured the attendance of very great numbers of people. There is yet a sufficient number to call for the most active watchfulness on the part of the police, to prevent the disturbances which are likely to arise through the zeal of the respective sects; for while the Shea Mahomedans worship the memories of Hasein and Hossein, and strengthen their affliction by pronouncing curses upon the head of the Caliph, to whom Hasein was a victim, the Sooni Mahomedans believe the Caliph the accredited leaders of Mahommedanism, and bestow curses where their opponents praise. Sunday, at midnight, Messrs. Dunlop and Edginton took up a position in the Bhendy bazaar, in the vicinity of the Emaum Barra, and the fact that every fifteen minutes a complete report was made to them as to the conduct of the ceremonies in every part of the native town, is the best evidence of the completeness of their arrangements. The Tazias were taken from the taboots at 12 o'clock, and paraded through the streets amid furious yells of “Hai Hasein! Hai Hossein!” by “the tigers,” as demented in mind as in appearance, judging from their indescribable contortions and grimaces. Yesterday morning (August 6), about ten o'clock, the native troopers were seen hurrying to and fro in all parts of the native town, clearing the principal roads of all public conveyances—the only measure that seems to the authorities best adapted for public safety. At eleven o'clock the mounted European police, in small detachments, were following up the thickest assemblages, as they moved through the principal streets, towards the Esplanade. Order, if order it could be called in such a tumult of noises, was enforced. By the hour of two, the Esplanade on its northern face presented a dense mass of human beings numbering thousands upon thousands; for here came together at one point all the processions from every part of the island. Nearer the beach the European police were dismounted, and the very large number of gentlemen's carriages there, and their equipages, shows the interest or curiosity manifested by the European community at the exhibition of this mourning ceremony, so well calculated to excite in the minds of every enlightened person mingled feelings of pity and disgust. Mr. Edginton was in the heart of the crowd, keeping the most perfect order, which was a difficult task, as the moving space became more confined as they approached the beach in Back Bay. Arrived there, the taboots were lowered from the shoulders of the bearers, and a repetition of the gyrations by the accompanying tiger guards gone through. Some, which were fitted up in most magnificent style, with tinsel-coloured papers, glass, and ivory, were then again taken away by the bearers, continuing the performance as if nothing would satiate their grief; others, in the never-mind-the-expense spirit, were borne out into the sea, where the strife appeared to be each to exceed the others in getting farthest out before burying his burden in the waters. The Esplanade was made for the nonce a toy-shop and fruit-market; a double row of stalls extending all the way from the main road to the entrance-road leading down to the beach. Although the regulations direct that the ceremonies shall conclude by six o'clock, it was long after dark before there was a very sensible diminution in this host of people. Everything passed off, however, in the most perfect order, reflecting great credit on the able direction of Mr. Edginton, and the zeal of all his subordinates.—Bombay Telegraph.

UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.—A very interesting meeting took place at Poona, on Saturday the 4th August, at the mess-room of the 25th Native Infantry. It was called by Sir William Mansfield to inaugurate a United Service Institution for the members of the different services. Sir William, in the chair, made his maiden speech as Commander-in-chief. He was a little nervous, but fluent and thoughtful. He alluded to the tendency of our day to competitive examinations, adding that he would not decide whether that tendency was good or bad; the usefulness of the United Service Institution in London on which he desired to model the Poona Institution, was worthy of imitation; he stated that the Governor gave to the plan his warm concurrence. He proposed the formation of the Poona United Service Institution. The Honourable Mr. Reeves followed, speaking earnestly on the financial difficulty which he felt sure could and would be overcome. Brigadier General Hale moved the first resolution, nominating a committee consisting of Mr. Davidson, collector of Poona, Colonel Phayre, Colonel Skinner, Dr. Giraud, and the Rev. Mr. Gell, and Lieutenant Thompson to act as secretary. Brigadier Adams, of Poona, seconded the resolution. Colonel Buchanan, commanding artillery, moved the second resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the committee present a report on the details of the plan in a month. Captain Marriott made some opposite remarks, and was followed by Dr. Giraud, who showed the application of science and war by several illustrations drawn from chemistry, &c. After a few words from his Excellency the chairman, and a vote of thanks to him moved by General Hale, the meeting broke up.

A NATIVE OFFICIAL.—The Poona Observer has been informed by a correspondent at Mhow, that a petition has been presented to Brigadier Honner against one Gokul Pursad, the cutwal of that station, to inquire into the allegations in which a court of inquiry has been ordered, consisting of Col. Hart; Capt. Day, 19th Regiment N.I.; and Major Baugh, 9th N.I. The charges brought against the cutwal are gross imposition on the camp followers, bribery and corruption, and incurring large debts, amounting to some 15,000 rupees, from persons at Mhow. This man, it is said, owns no fewer than forty houses, besides a large garden, at Mhow, whilst his salary is only 50 rupees a month! Gokul Pursad is evidently a clever fellow; but it is thought he will be brought to book at last.

FEROZE SHAH is now reported to be travelling in Upper Scinde, and the authorities have been directed to watch his movements closely.

BAR PATRONAGE.—The office of Clerk of the Crown has again reverted to the bar, in the appointment of Mr. James Sewell White, barrister-at-law, who succeeds Mr. Pollock during his temporary absence from India on account of the impaired state of his health.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Aug. 7).—Cotton.—The market is extremely dull, and we have again to report a fall in prices. No transactions of importance have been effected for the European market, on account of the unfavourable advices received from home, while the demand for China has also been checked by the discouraging accounts from the Canton market. Our market closes quiet, with a downward tendency. Wool is still out of stock. Oils.—A moderate business has been done in Linseed for France and the United States, while there is less doing for the English market. Prices have declined one anna. Rapeseed remains unaltered; the stocks of fine new Guzerat are reduced. Teelseed and other seeds are without demand. Hemp.—There is very little doing in Hemp, and prices of all descriptions are lower. Pepper.—Scarce, and prices have advanced.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Aug. 7).—Cotton Piece Goods.—The demand for Piece Goods has declined, and transactions have only been effected at a reduction of prices. Grey Shirtings have found sales, to a very limited extent, at lower prices. There is little or nothing doing in Grey Long Cloths, and prices remain nominal. T. Cloths are moderately inquired for at previous rates. Grey Madras pieces are in heavy stock, and difficult of sale. Grey Jaconets are dull and lower in price. Cambrics also are dull and lower. Grey Domestic remain at nominal rates, without any transactions. Printers are without inquiry. Muls are out of demand. The transactions in Bleached Goods are very trifling, and prices of all descriptions are more in favour of buyers. Of Coloured Goods only a few sales of Prints have been effected, the other descriptions remaining dull, with a decline in price. Turkey Red Goods are neglected, and without transactions. Yarns.—The market for both Mule and Water Twist are still dull, and prices remain without any material change. Holders are firm, declining to accept low rates, while on the other hand buyers show very little disposition to enter into transactions for future delivery in face of the declining rates ruling in the home market. A few sales, however, have taken place at our quotations. In Coloured Yarns, Orange and T. Red are in moderate request at former quotations. Green is dull. Metals.—A moderate amount of business has been done in metals. There is a slight diminution in the demand for Copper, the stock of which at market is heavy. Yellow Metal has also undergone a slight decline in price. A steady demand exists for Iron, at firm prices. Spelter is in pretty good demand at fair prices. Tin Plates are in little inquiry. Quicksilver is dull. Steel is moderately inquired for at former prices. Saffron.—Stocks are very reduced; a few sales have been effected at Rs. 25-12 per lb. Cochineal dull, without change in price. Coals.—Stocks are continually increasing, with no improvement in demand. Prices are two rupees lower. Beer.—The market has become dull in consequence of heavy arrivals, and prices have considerably declined.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, September 4, 1860.

"SEE, THE CONQUERING HERO COMES!"

It is our grateful task to welcome back to his native land one of the most truly great men who have ever done honour to the name of Englishman. Alike distinguished as a warrior and a statesman, as a daring captain and a skilful administrator, Sir James Outram has won for himself an Indian reputation hitherto unsurpassed. In his early youth he gave ample promise of the greatness he was destined to achieve in his mature manhood. Whilst yet a mere subaltern in a marching regiment, he was able solely by genuine force of character to mould to his will fierce untamed mountain tribes that had never bowed the knee to a master. Relying on their well-nigh inaccessible strongholds, the Bheels had set at defiance both Hindoo and Moslem, and maintained their independence against the conquering hosts of those invaders. But when young Outram appeared amongst them, they at once recognised the type of a superior race, and received from his hands the first rudiments of civilisation. Nor was his influence confined to barbarians alone. Who that has read Kaye's spirited history of the Affghan campaign will ever forget that animated description of the chase after Dost Mahommed, when the small but dashing band of British officers leapt into their saddles at Outram's call, and in full confidence in their leader pursued the flying chieftain to the very confines of the kingdom? Of the remarkable services rendered by him in Scinde it is quite superfluous to speak, or of his noble consistency in refusing to accept his share of the spoils which he considered to have been unjustly won. At Baroda he again displayed his unbending determination to act up to his sense of duty, at whatever risk or inconvenience to himself, and was content to submit to unmerited obloquy rather than make a sacrifice of principle. Throughout the brief, but brilliant campaign in Persia, General Outram gave evidence of a very high order of strategical talent and power of combination, and it was assuredly not his fault if the operations under his command produced less substantial results than were originally anticipated. The distinguished part played by Sir James in the suppression of the sepoy mutiny is too recent, as well as too deeply impressed on men's minds, to need even a passing allusion. The relief of the beleaguered garrison of Lucknow, the evacuation of the Presidency, the occupation of Alumbagh in presence of an overwhelming host of enemies, and the final reduction of the capital of Oude, were exploits of the true heroic stamp, but in which many others largely shared. To Outram alone, however, belongs the glory of waiving the chief command rather than deprive a comrade of the honour that was in some measure due to him; and what other general than Outram would have served and fought as a simple volunteer? These are the deeds that have endeared him to all classes of Englishmen in India, and have caused him to be regarded with as much love as admiration. His departure was felt to be their common loss, aggravated by the extreme improbability of his ever returning to the land where he had made for himself so great a name. His arrival in this country cannot fail to excite feelings of a widely different nature. Not only his old companions in arms will flock to greet him and offer their hearty prayers for his restoration to health, but those also who have learned from a distance to revere his splendid talents and intrinsic worth will be eager to offer the homage of their respect and esteem. At Calcutta subscriptions are freely pouring in for the purpose of presenting the absent hero with some suitable testimonial of the universal regret felt for his departure. Here, however, proceedings of a more joyous nature may properly be instituted, and we would suggest that a banquet on a grand and popular scale should at once be organised, to do honour to one to whom all honour is so justly due.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF DHAR.

HAVING more than once, in common with the best conducted Indian journals, expressed a certain amount of indignation at Lord Canning's supercilious disobedience to Lord Stanley's instructions with regard to the principality of Dhar, it is but a simple act of justice to the former nobleman to acknowledge that his apparent contumacy was almost justified by the real circumstances of the case. As Viceroy of India, the noble earl must fairly be supposed to have the right of exercising his own judgment in questions of extraordinary delicacy, even though in doing so he may be compelled to assume for the moment an attitude of insubordination. It would be manifestly impossible to govern India from Leadenhall-street, or even from Westminster, without leaving a considerable margin to be filled in on the responsibility of the Governor-general. Nor would any man of proper spirit, who respected himself, be induced to accept a post in which, with every outward semblance of power, dignity, and importance, he would actually be a mere puppet compelled to move as the strings were pulled by a far distant hand. If, then, according to the letter the Viceroy is obliged to act upon the instructions forwarded to him by the Secretary of State for India, he is nevertheless entitled, according to the spirit, to take upon himself the responsibility of deferring compliance—perhaps, of altogether refusing it. The case of Dhar is a good illustration of this position. In consequence of the extreme youth of the reigning prince, the government was virtually in the hands of his ministers, and these thought proper to take up arms against the British Government during the late rebellion, and ventured not only to stand a siege, but even to give battle to General Stuart's column—with what success is immaterial to the point in question. After the capture of Dhar, which is well described in Dr. Lowe's recently published narrative of the operations of the British forces in Central India during the years 1857-58, that gentleman paid a visit to the Rajah, a description of which we give in his own words:—

"Long before the Rajah made his appearance, the Dewan (Chancellor of the Exchequer) came in. He was a middle-aged man, and dressed from head to foot in spotless white cloth. His head was well formed, he had lost the sight of one eye by cataract, his features were of a heavy Mahrattah stamp, and he wore silver spectacles. He appeared to me to be a compound of Hindoo profundity and cunning. He was very quiet in manner and polite, and seemed in a very nervous state. . . . By-and-bye there was a murmur from without, the glazed doors opened, and the Child Rajah, attended by his uncle and other magnates, all armed, entered into this dingy saloon. I rose up and met his advance, as he waddled along like a little show-boy, in a crescent of attendants. He was a mere child, of about ten or eleven years old, of very dark complexion, had a very heavy, unintelligent countenance, and a badly-developed head. He was in mourning for a relative, and consequently dressed in a very quiet style. He wore some valuable jewels, and a jewelled-handled dagger in his little waistband. His uncle was also dressed in very sober apparel, of a brickdust hue, and wore a golden-handled tulwar in a crimson velvet scabbard. He was a quick, shrewd, wiry, little man, had very finely-chiselled features, and looked a soldier in every gesture. The little Rajah scarcely spoke; the Dewan and uncle did all the talking; while the child bowed his sleepy-looking head, very like an automaton, as he sat perched up on his large chair. Perhaps he was frightened out of his wits by what we had been doing about his city and fort; by-and-bye, however, he mustered up courage to speak, and then said, in a little soprano voice, that 'the English had always been the friends of Dhar, and that he should make haste to learn their language.' The poor boy, I fear, had not much chance of attaining the requisites for this education or wisdom among such people."

And yet it was to this semi-idiotic child that Lord Stanley, probably in ignorance of the real state of the case, insisted that the principality of Dhar should be immediately restored, on the ground that he was too young to be answerable for the defection of his subjects. This is undeniable, and it would certainly be a gross act of injustice to deprive him for ever of his ancestral rights. At the same time, it would have been no kindness either to himself or his people to have again placed him under the direction of his cunning Dewan or shrewd, soldier-like uncle. Lord Canning, therefore, acted wisely in declining to act in strict conformity to Lord Stanley's instructions, and in deciding that the little State should not be restored to its hereditary ruler until the latter had attained his majority, and could be held responsible for deeds done in his name.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN'S ADMINISTRATION.

THOUGH we were not of those who regarded Sir Charles Trevelyan's appointment to the governorship of Madras as the inauguration of a golden age for that Presidency, we may not withhold from him the praise to which he is fairly entitled for great earnestness, enlightened zeal, and indefatigable industry. His sincerity is as unquestionable as his remarkable capacity for public business, but his devotion to abstract principles and undue exaltation of theory above experience, combined with a perfidum ingenium, led him into indiscretions which may yet bear bitter fruits. For his last and greatest error of judgment he was removed from the high and honourable position in which he enjoyed such enviable opportunities for rendering important services to the empire, and it would be as ungenerous as it is unnecessary to make any further allusion to that unfortunate escapade. Far more useful and agreeable is it to take a bird's-eye view of his administration, through the friendly aid of Mr. J. D. Bourdillon's clear statement of the principal measures which marked Sir Charles's his brief tenure of office.

Within a week after his arrival at Madras Sir Charles Trevelyan introduced a notable improvement by abridging the voluminous and tediously minute correspondence that was carried on between the Indian and Home Governments. Much valuable time was thus saved, and the attention of the authorities at home directed only to matters of general and practical interest. In connection with this reform he sanctioned another that had long been called for. Many officials had fallen into the habit of using native words in their correspondence in preference to their English equivalents, and these they spelt each according to his own lights or caprice. It was therefore ruled that for the future native terms should be employed as sparingly as possible, and that when unavoidable they should be spelt on the system adopted by the late Professor Wilson, in his Glossary of Indian Official Terms.

A more important measure was the settlement of the Inam's question by the adoption of a definite plan of investigation. It was resolved that the "possession of an Inam for fifty years, either by the present possessor or by those through whom he claimed, should constitute a valid title; proof of title being at the same time made easy, and allowance being made for failure of proof from lapse of time." For the future it was agreed to commute "the defective Inam tenure into freehold by charging the Inam with a quit rent, redeemable at any time at the option of the Inamdar. The title and future tenure of the Inam having been thus determined, a formal title deed was to be given to the holder under the seal of the Government. If the Inam tenure was retained, the title deed would simply certify it; but if it was commuted into freehold, the title deed would assure the land to the proprietor and his heirs and assigns for ever, on the terms fixed, with power to redeem the quit rent at any time." A commission was then appointed, which has given very general satisfaction, and in less than three years from the present date it is expected that its labours will be brought to a close.

"At the end of May, 1860," says Mr. Bourdillon, "being nine months from the commencement of operations, 44,509 titles had been confirmed by the Commissioner, comprising 343,276 acres of land. The number of title deeds actually issued was 28,290. Of the entire number of Inams settled, 25,647 were personal grants enfranchised by desire of the holders; while there were no more than 405 cases (being a little over 1½ per cent.) in which that option was declined, the Inams being confirmed on the existing tenure. The number of personal Inams enfranchised under the rules without option to the holder was 15,551; and there were 2,906 religious and charitable Inams of a permanent character which were continued without change, except where of modern and doubtful origin. The total amount of new quit rent payable on the enfranchised Inams was Rs. 60,724 yearly; and the quit rent had been redeemed in 167 cases by the payment of Rs. 5,973."

Steps were also taken to bring about the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, a commission being appointed to inquire into the evils of the present system, and the means by which they could best be remedied; but as this question is still under consideration we may pass on to the re-organization of the police force. To Lord Harris the credit is due of originating this very necessary reform, but Sir Charles is entitled to not less praise for the improvements he introduced, by which the efficiency of the corps was greatly promoted. In the words of the magistrate of North Arcot: "Crime does now see the light, and makes a stir. We know the worst of ourselves, while under the old system a great mass of crime was suppressed."

Some very advantageous alterations were likewise made in the Department of Public Works, with a view to expedite the transaction of business, and increase the general usefulness of the department. A searching reform was at the same time instituted in the revenue establishments, and the talooks were carefully revised and re-arranged; the pay of the tahsildars being also nearly doubled in amount.

The tenure of land has been generally confirmed and improved, and provisions made, exclusive of the Inam arrangements for the creation of freeholds, "by either the redemption or the permanent fixing of the Government assessment on lands of certain classes." The water rate for irrigation has been fixed at three rupees an acre for a single crop; the impressment of carriage for the service of Government has been abolished; railway fares have been considerably reduced, and the Engineering College placed on an efficient and prosperous footing. The formation of the "People's Park" in Madras, and the improvements in the grounds of the Government House and at Chepauk Palace, are matters of merely local importance; but not so the public works throughout the Presidency, which were either proposed or fostered by Sir Charles. His tour through the provinces, if inferior in pomp and ceremony to the viceregal progress of Lord Canning, is likely to be productive of more practical results and of greater substantial benefit to the natives themselves. On this point, however, we may have occasion to say a few words hereafter, and shall, therefore, for the present, conclude by adopting Mr. Bourdillon's remarks on the tours taken by Sir Charles:—

"These tours," he writes, "were not at all made for recreation or health, but solely for the advancement of the public interests. They were made without any show or parade; the governor travelled in the plainest manner, attended by no other retinue than a part of his personal staff and a single Government secretary. He travelled rapidly, staying no longer time at any place than was sufficient to enable him, by the aid of great personal activity, to make himself fully acquainted with the localities, and to inspect all public buildings and institutions. Out of the fourteen months of his administration, Sir Charles spent two and a-half months on two such tours. In that time he visited eight collectorates, and in almost every case passed through a large part of each, and stopped at several places in it. Everywhere he held the most free and unreserved intercourse, both with the servants of Government, European and native, and with the public at large. He settled satisfactorily numerous long-pending local questions, initiated important improvements, roused and encouraged the public servants, and acquired a large fund of information, respecting both persons and places, which would have been of great value to him in his subsequent administration."

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo, BY J. R. YOUNG, (Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS: 1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION. 2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS. 3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,

Chairman of London Board—Samuel Baker, Esq.

At the Annual Meeting on the 10th instant the following

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Notwithstanding the large accessions of business made annually through a long series of years, which obviously increase the difficulty of further advances, the Fire Premiums of the year 1859 rise above those of the preceding year by a larger sum than has been obtained by the increase of any single year since the formation of the company, excepting the year 1858; disclosing an advance of 50 per cent. in three years. To this circumstance must be attributed the gratifying announcement that the accounts for the year show a profit of £42,488. 3s. 4d.

The following figures exhibit the progress of the whole Five Branches, running over the last ten years:—

1850	£44,027 10 0	£9,557 19 8
1851	52,673 5 11	8,645 15 11
1852	76,925 4 2	24,251 18 3
1853	112,564 4 4	35,639 0 2
1854	128,459 11 4	15,895 7 0
1855	130,060 11 11	1,601 0 7
1856	151,733 9 6	21,672 17 7
1857	175,049 4 8	23,315 15 2
1858	196,118 2 6	21,068 17 10
1859	228,314 7 8	32,196 4 9

Placing the Company among the very largest Offices in the kingdom. Indeed, it is believed that there are now only three Offices in existence which equal it in Fire Revenue.

LIFE BUSINESS.

The Directors desire to call the especial attention of the Proprietors to the statements of the Life Branch of the establishment.

The Actuary's Report on this subject is accompanied by an appendix, containing the fullest part colors of the investigation made, and is illustrated by two coloured diagrams, which make plain to the unprofessional eye the mortality experienced by the Royal, as indicated by curved lines, which contrast most favourably with the former averages of mortality, also displayed on the diagrams.

It is expected that these elucidations will attract a deep and profitable attention to the subject of Life Assurance in the minds of tens of thousands who have hitherto given no heed to its principles and advantages, and it is evident that this Company, as well as others, will not fail to reap much of the favourable consequences to be anticipated.

The Bonus apporportioned to the assured, with participation, amounts to £2 per cent. per annum, to be added to the original sum assured of EVERY PARTICIPATING POLICY effected previously to the 1st of January, 1858, for each entire year that it had been in existence since the last appropriation of Bonus thereon, and is one of the largest Bonuses ever declared.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A Cool Skin.—Almost the first indication of fever is the dry burning skin, which is soon succeeded by more distressing symptoms. The unusually wet summer has raised the number of fever cases far above the average; but they have been conducted to a speedy and favourable issue by the use of Holloway's Liver-purifying Pills. Where malaria abounds fever soon becomes rife by contaminating the blood, depressing the nervous powers, and disarranging the functions of every organ. Such disordered actions are all rectified by these purifying Pills. They effectually remove the cause of many serious complaints which weekly endanger the lives of thousands of our fellow-creatures. They clean the tongue, cool the skin, and renew the strength.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE last mail from Bombay brought the sad tidings of the death of Sir Henry Ward, the recently-appointed Governor of Madras, and now we learn from the Calcutta and Madras mails of the 8th and 14th of August the not less melancholy news of the death, on the 11th of that month, of the Right Honourable James Wilson, Financial Member of the Legislative Council of Calcutta. It is impossible to over-rate the importance of this public calamity. Though by no means disposed to take a sanguine view of the ultimate result of the financial measures introduced by Mr. Wilson, we have never failed to recognise the great services he was rendering to the empire by instituting a thorough reform of the entire fiscal department of the Indian Government. For the first time in the history of that Government a Budget has been formed and presented, and something like a regular system of finance arranged and inaugurated. Proper checks, too, upon departmental expenditure have been devised, and probably in another year it would have been possible to have arrived at an exact estimate both of the annual income and of the annual outlay. The introduction of a paper currency would also have tended to give a certain elasticity to internal trade, and a consequent development to external commerce. It is, therefore, in every way matter for deep regret that Mr. Wilson should have been cut off in his career of public usefulness, and while his close superintendence was yet needed for the due working of the new state machinery. A master-hand is still necessary to regulate the imposition and collection of the unpopular Income-tax, and to enforce on Lord Canning a large reduction both of civil and military expenditure. The death of the Financial Commissioner at this moment is nothing short of a national disaster, and one that will be felt more acutely next year even than at present. It will be no easy task to replace him, though it is quite indispensable that the office, now for the first time created, should be constituted a permanent one. Far less inconvenient would it be to dispense with the services of the Member for Madras, or Bombay, or the North-West Provinces, than to do away with the new office of "Chancellor of the Exchequer." Better still, perhaps, would it be to abolish the Legislative Council entirely, and to substitute in its place a certain number of Secretaries of State—to wit, Finance, War, Justice, and the Interior; the latter to embrace Agriculture, Commerce, and Education. In the mean time, Lord Canning's position is one of great difficulty and the most trying responsibility, and it is to be hoped that the English press in India will not weaken his hands by bringing him into contempt with the native population, but rather generously make ample allowance for the unprecedented character of the crisis, and lend him their moral support as becomes true-hearted Englishmen and good citizens.

The Income-Tax Bill passed into law on the 31st of July, and is to continue in force until the 1st of August, 1865, both inclusive. By the addition of these two days to the full period of five years Government is enabled to deduct 4 per cent. from the interest of a large amount of 4 and 5 per cent. paper that falls due on the 1st of August, and also on pensions and salaries. Fundholders are, therefore, taxed from the 1st of February last, pensioners from the 1st of May, and officials from the 1st of July, while all other persons pay from the 1st of August.

"It has been replied," says the Hurkaru, "that this is according to the precedent of the English tax, and that all will come right at the expiry of the five years, when the several parties will cease to pay the tax six, three, and one month before the general public. It is doubtful, however, whether this will be the case, for the tax expires on the 1st August, 1865, instead of on the 30th July, which ought to have been the date, as it commenced upon the 31st July, 1860, so that the salaries and dividends then becoming due will come under the operation of the law. But five years is too long to wait for justice. Men in India can afford to live only for the present. Pensioners will have died, officials have retired or have been removed, and fundholders have sold their paper long before that time arrives. The indiscriminate taxation of incomes derived from all Government securities is also illegal. All incomes of less than Rs. 200 per annum are exempt from taxation altogether, and those of less than Rs. 500 are subjected to two per cent. instead of four. Many persons holding Government paper come under both of these classes, yet they have all paid four per cent. It is also provided in the Bill that the assessment on any interest shall be first made, and then the amount so assessed be deducted. But as we have above stated, no assessment has been made, but the amount of four per cent. indiscriminately deducted."

Had it not been for Sir Charles Trevelyan's famous Minute this Bill would have dated from the 1st of May; but notwithstanding this accidental delay no machinery has ever yet been prepared for the collection of the tax. No schedules or forms have yet been printed, and it is affirmed that it will be quite impossible for the ordinary Collectors of Revenue, who are already overworked, to bear up under this heavy addition to their labour.

The Indigo Commission had terminated its inquiries, and would, it was expected, make a report about the end of August. In the mean time the ryots continue to throw every obstacle in their power in the way of the planters, and declare that it is the wish of the Government that after the present season there shall be no more cultivation of indigo. Sir Mor-daunt Wells, moreover, had given notice of his intention to bring before the Legislative Council the evidence given before the Indigo Commission by the Hon. Ashley Eden relative to the administration of justice in the Supreme Court.

In consequence of Mr. Wilson's illness the second reading of the Paper Currency Bill had been postponed, and the Licence and Tobacco Bill was awaiting the reports of the local governments. The Penal Code, and the Code of Criminal Procedure were also in abeyance, but would probably be passed towards the close of the present month, unless the European community should succeed in their opposition to the latter measure, the tendency of which is to subject them to heathen courts and native judges.

Elsewhere will be seen an admirable general order by the Commander-in-Chief, professing his determination to be guided by merit alone in the dispensation of military patronage. We trust that Sir Hugh Rose will not be foiled in giving force to his excellent intentions.

The news from China is satisfactory, so far as the health of the allied troops is concerned. We regret, however, to learn that the rumour of a miserable small-minded jealousy having been displayed by the French Plenipotentiary is fully confirmed. It is much to be desired that this may be the last time that our troops will be called upon to serve by the side of French auxiliaries. The armies of France are more fatal to the reputation of the British soldiery when serving as allies than when met, face to face, in the field, after the manner of our ancestors.

At a general Court of East Indian Proprietors held yesterday, at the India House, Leadenhall-street, Mr. Eric Carrington Smith was unanimously elected a Director, in the room of Major Moore, deceased.

We have been requested to state that on Monday, the 17th inst., the accounts and cash departments of the India Office will be removed from the East India House to the Westminster Palace Hotel, Victoria-street, Westminster.

BENGAL.

RESULTS OF THE WUZEEREE CAMPAIGN.

During the progress of the campaign against the Wuzereeh Mahsoods on our North-Western frontier we recorded from week to week the successive advances made by General Chamberlain's Irregulars, their storming the strongholds of Mukeyem and Kaneegoom, and their final return to the plains on the 16th of May, after not more than three weeks' absence from the camp. In a military point of view the whole affair was not less brilliant, and has been not less successful, than the series of border raids by which in the last seven years we have tamed turbulent tribes, and converted marauding mountaineers into our faithful soldiers and feudatories. With the exception of the sudden attack on Lumsden's camp, which was gallantly repulsed, our native army of 5,000 men met with no check. We penetrated into an unknown territory farther than we have ever done before, terrified the only great tribe which had never been chastised, and added to our prestige in the eyes of other clans which had long witnessed the successful defiance by their neighbours of our power. The damage we inflicted on the Mahsoods is estimated at Rs. 1,40,000, a loss which it will take a savage tribe years to recover. We have completely lifted the veil, for Major Walker succeeded in mapping the whole country most accurately and fully. Kaneegoom, the settlement which we last captured, is more than seven thousand feet high. It belongs to the Pathans known as "Hoormoor," who are not Wuzerees. In a raid into the hills the warfare is almost entirely of a guerilla character, and there are opportunities for individual officers and soldiers distinguishing themselves by engagements almost as romantic and quite as valorous as in the Homeric battles. Several of these occurred, and for distinguished bravery six native soldiers have already been decorated with the Order of Merit. The gallantry of Captain Keyes deserves special notice. When in command of the infantry reserves in the action at the Barurah Pass he met a body of Mahsoods, who, flushed with a slight success, were rapidly descending the hill towards our position. Advancing several paces in front of his men, he met them alone, and cut down their leader with his own hand. The rest turned and fled, the reserves pursued them over the crest of the hill, and the key of the enemy's position was gained.

The political results of the campaign are not so evident yet. The tribe have not come in with grass in their mouths as was expected after the chastisement they received. On the contrary, they have sought at the hands of Dost Mahomed, whom they have on more than one occasion troubled almost as much as ourselves, protection and the chance of vengeance. The Ameer of Cabul, however, even if he were inclined to help them, knows too well that we prefer to settle our own quarrels without diplomatic intervention. The Mahsoods, unaccustomed to the yoke, are a stiff-necked race of robbers. Meanwhile they are under strict blockade. They have a thriving trade in iron with our territories, and will feel the loss they sustain. Disappointed in their mission to Cabul, with their flocks and crops destroyed and their strongholds burnt, with opportunities for neither trade nor plunder, it is not likely that they will wait for us to pay them a second visit in the cold weather.—Friend of India.

APPREHENDED FAMINE IN THE NORTH-WEST.

The North-Western Provinces have very narrowly escaped a famine. As the danger seems now over, we may speak of it more freely than we should have ventured to have done when it appeared impending; when we might have aggravated suffering by its anticipation, enhanced the panic which needed no enhancement, and have been the means of raising prices already sufficiently exorbitant. At Etawah the natives had become reduced to such extreme distress that there were tens of thousands of them who had not enjoyed a full meal for weeks. Some had been driven at last to break half-rotten mango stones to reach the kernel, by eating which they escaped for a time absolute starvation. With abundance of last year's grain in store, the Bunias were charging famine prices, and now, with a plentiful harvest in prospect, they will have their reward in their stocks remaining in hand. What aggravated the alarm was the fact that one of the periodical droughts to which Northern India is accustomed on an average of fifteen years was more than due—the last having occurred in 1838. Montgomery Martin gives the following chronological list of our famines: we have it not beside us in full, and cannot therefore indicate the localities in which they occurred—1640, 1655, 1661, 1764, 1766, 1770, 1782, 1792, 1803, 1804, 1812 in Guzerat, where a fearful amount of mortality occurred, 1819 in Nagpore, where the price of jowaree rose from Rs. 5 to Rs. 30 per candy. In Oude in 1832-1833 50,000 persons perished around Lucknow. In Cashmere 25,000 died. At Cawnpore 1,200 died, 1,300 were fed daily, and half a million was realised and distributed in subscriptions. In 1833, 150,000 human beings, 74,000 bullocks, 15,900 milch cattle and 300,000 sheep and goats died in consequence of the famine in Guntoor. 1836-37 and '38 were famine years in the North-West Provinces. In 1837 the famine raged over Kattiawar and Cutch, where 3,000 persons are supposed to have perished—5,000 died mostly around Agra, and the fearful results continued felt for years.

This season the winter rains in the north, which betwixt November and March commonly amount to four inches, never made their appearance at all. To the north of Allahabad the average fall for June is betwixt four and six inches; that for July from ten to twelve, and up to the 18th, when the first heavy fall occurred this season, scarcely two inches have been measured. Ten days more, and the crops were past salvation. All at once storms began to make their appearance in all directions, betwixt the 16th and 20th there seems to have been a general burst, the district for ten miles around Allahabad itself presenting the only locality where, up to the latest dates, there continued a deficiency, and this was not long likely to endure. The harvest everywhere is considered safe, prices have tumbled down almost as rapidly as they rose. The faces of the people are brightening again, and the rustio plies his task merrily and hopefully in the field. In contemplating the fearful sufferings that seem to be impending over the people minor considerations hardly came in view. Now that matters are changed, we may think of the financial mishap that might have filled up the measure of our misfortunes. When it is more than probable that Government must have sacrificed a million, at least, of unrealisable revenue, the operation of the Income-tax must have been suspended until the miseries of the people had passed away.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY, which supplies Calcutta with gas, have declared a dividend at the rate of three per cent. on the operations of last year. The number of public lights supplied in December last was 606, and of private lights 1,504. Since that period 347 public lights have been added. The proportion of gas to oil lights is most miserable for a city like Calcutta. Were the Company to offer greater facilities for fitting up the pipes, &c., in private houses, native landlords might be induced to avail themselves of the light for their tenants.

THE OUTRAM TESTIMONIAL.—The Calcutta subscriptions for the Outram Testimonial have reached the sum of Rs. 21,301, and additions continue to pour in daily. The idea of a bust has already swelled into that of a statue. Subscriptions from every Presidency would allow of the establishment of an institution for the benefit of the soldiers of the army worthy to be named with the Lawrence Asylums.

A "GENTLEMAN" BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.—The Calcutta Attorneys Association, at a full meeting of the profession, have condemned the conduct of Mr. S. J. Leslie, one of their number, for acting as a spy in a case before the Supreme Court, in which he was attorney for the defendant. From the evidence in the case it appears that he went in a closely shut up carriage with a native woman whom he did not know, for the purpose of eliciting information to be used by himself in court against the prosecution. The attorneys consider him "to have been guilty of most disgraceful conduct, and to possess principles utterly opposed to those which ought to be held by a member of a respectable profession." They have made a representation of their opinion to the judges. He seems to have acted on the advice of the counsel in the case.

MUSSOORIE.—Visitors to Mussoorie will be glad to learn from the Mofussilite that Government intend to construct a carriage-road from Roorkee to Dehra Doon, through the Mohun Pass. At present the carriages of the transit companies do not run further than Roorkee, and the delays and exactions of the palanquin bearers who convey travellers beyond that station are intolerable. The road is not to be begun till next year.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The Lahore Chronicle, in treating of the case of Mr. Brunton, chief engineer of the Punjab Railway, says that Mr. Raeburn, the agent of the company, on taking charge of his appointment, disturbed all the arrangements of his predecessor, believing that everything that had been done by him was wrong, and worse than wrong. He attacked Mr. Brunton, the chief engineer, by accusing him of recommending contracts which were immensely overcharged, and then suspended him under this charge. He further suspended an inspector; again, he suspended another district engineer, creating great confusion in all departments. In this confusion the work of the railway must have been nearly suspended also, and the cost must be enormously enhanced. A new agent, when he arrives in this country, appears to think that his wisest course is to condemn everything that has been done on a railway which has not his sanction as hopelessly erroneous, that his predecessor was either a rogue or a fool, and all the men engaged on the railway to be his mere tools. Mr. Raeburn has so acted, and the result must be eventually mischievous in the Punjab. It has been clearly shown that all his accusations against Mr. Brunton are unfounded, and the Lahore Chronicle further shows that very improper steps were taken to fasten these charges upon him. Mr. Raeburn will thus have done incalculable injury to the railway, delaying its progress, increasing the expense, and disgusting all the experienced men employed upon it; all arising out of some mere freak or imaginary wrong—acting, in fact, as if he were insane. This is surely a state of things the superintendence of the Government is intended to prevent. The enormous charge these railways are now becoming on the finances of India is of too much importance to admit of its being increased by the folly of an agent, either anxious to increase his power, or the result of his incompetence. It is to be hoped that the inquiries now being made will tend to correct an evil of so great a magnitude as this. In this country agents are nearly irresponsible, if Government does not carefully watch over them. There are no Boards of Directors here to interfere, nor shareholders to worry directors. It is the Government and the press only which can check the proceedings of zealous agents, and we are glad to observe that the Lahore Chronicle is carefully and considerately doing its duty in this matter.—Englishman.

THE DALHOUSIE SANITARIUM.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle describes the advantages of Dalhousie as a sanitarium for the Punjab. It is well supplied with water. The opening of the canal to Madhopore will bring it into water communication with the plains. The road from Lahore by Shalhpore is easy, and passes over no rivers. The climate is dry and bracing; the scenery and view of the snowy range are magnificent. It is proposed to build barracks in Sonotollah, a spur of the hills. The distance of the spot from Lahore is 160 miles.

LOCUSTS EST BOS.—The Lahore Chronicle records the fall of another aerolite at Dhurmsala at 2 p.m. on the 14th July. It fell with a great explosion, and with force sufficient to break it into small pieces, several of which were buried in the soil by the force of the descent. The natives carried off the fragments in triumph, believing them to have been shot by an invisible Devi who dwells on the highest peak of the Himalayas. The substance is described as metallic granite. If the letters in the North-West journals are to be trusted, this has been a season of portents. Besides shocks of earthquake, a veritable comet and an unusually late fall of rain, there have been showers of fish and blood, and several instances of the fall of meteoric stones.

NATIVE HOLIDAYS.—The decision of Government on the subject of native holidays in the Judicial Courts of Bengal has been published. Henceforth a long vacation of one month is to be allowed at the Doorgah Poojah, the four holidays of New Year's Day, Good Friday, Queen's Birthday, and Christmas Day, and other fifteen days, which may be taken either altogether or on "any recognised holidays of the religion to which the applicant may belong." Thus the Courts will be closed only during the long vacation and the English holidays. Believing as we (Friend of India) do that the true policy of Government and the true meaning of "religious neutrality," is the ignoring of heathenism and Mahomedanism altogether, we cannot approve of this decision except in so far as it limits the present abuse of holidays. Merchants and the Public Works Department find no difficulty in securing the attendance of natives on the so-called holidays. The actual worship is done not in the day but at night. This order applies only to the Courts in Bengal. What of the Treasury and public offices?

RELIEF OF TROOPS.—A correspondent of the Oude Gazette believes the following information to be correct as to the next relief of troops. The regiments for England are the 5th Fusiliers, the 6th (1st) Warwickshire; the 24th (2nd) Warwickshire, the 37th North Hampshire, and the 73rd regiment. As Brigadier Milman will accompany his regiment, the 37th, home, the brigade command at Bareilly will be vacant. To garrison Calcutta and Barrackpore the 70th and 75th; 7th Fusiliers, Shahjehanpore; 13th Allahabad; 20th Lucknow; 23rd Meer Meer; 27th Peshawar; 34th Bareilly; 38th Banda; 42nd Sealkote; 48th Gwalior; 51st Fyzabad; 52nd Agra; 54th Punjab; 71st Umballa; 79th Peshawar; 81st Cawnpore or Allahabad; 82nd Punjab; 88th Meer Meer; 87th Agra; 90th Punjab; 93rd Peshawar; 94th Seetapoor; 97th Rawulpindee; 98th Delhi; 3rd Battalion Rifles; Punjab; 4th Europeans, Gondah, and 6th Europeans, Roy Bareilly.

KISHNAGHUR, July 31.—I am not, as you know, an alarmist, or disposed to take a gloomy view of matters, and but lately reported to you that I thought by making some alteration in the indigo system that matters would, ere long, come right again between planters and ryots. About this, however, I am now getting more sceptical, and if the Government does not alter its policy, or those interested in the immense indigo properties in Nuddea, Jessore, Pubna, Rajshaye and Moorshedabad, do not make some very decided remonstrance I see nothing whatever but destruction to the large English capital employed in these districts. Courts and police are a mere farce, from the first generally being so distant, and the latter so corrupt, and the planter is the victim to every act of rapacity you could imagine being practised upon him, both by the ryots and the workmen of all kinds, whom he is obliged to employ at this season of the year; all engagements are laughed at, and the planter, with a ripe and quickly perishable crop on the ground has to pay whatever is demanded. English enterprise can stand a good deal, but it is certainly not proof against continued misrule such as has lately prevailed in this quarter. In one large property I know, the manufacturing expenses will exceed Rs. 36 per maund, and then the work done in a most slovenly way, in place of Rs. 14 per maund, as was customary, and the work done with great regularity. The Jessore and Pubna planters are getting fast into the same troubles we have been suffering from here, and with the October sowings coming on shortly, prospects in that part for next year look gloomy indeed. There is one hope for the former district, as I have just heard that Mr. Grant is getting alarmed at the combination manifested so openly to encompass the ruin of the Europeans in the indigo districts, and has stopped Mr. Molony proceeding to England. Mr. Molony had intended to sail for England by the next steamer, and then with committees of agitators in almost every second village, the whole of Jessore would have been one scene of anarchy and confusion. Mr. M. Sherer has been ordered out to the Mangroo sub-division, where things look most serious, and he is accompanied by 100 Ghoorkas under the command of Lieutenant Howard. Should the magistrate's authority be resisted, there will assuredly, with the above two gentlemen on the spot, be no Lingham folly, but on the contrary a very melancholy illustration of the consequences sure to arise when the passions of the people have been played upon and almost limited, as they have been by the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, to a few unprotected Englishmen. Mr. Grant surely cannot be so ignorant as not to know that the ryots, as a body, have but little to do with the present agitation, and that they are only the mere tools of a number of unscrupulous agitators, who make what they call the wrongs connected with indigo planting a pretence to enable them to indulge their jealousy and hatred at the expense of the Englishman. Another most serious feature of the present disturbances is, that the ryots in many villages are positively refusing to pay their rents, coolly referring their talookdars to the Collector's Court and to Act X. If this spreads, not ten collectors in each district will get through the work which will be thrown upon them, the revenue machine will come to a dead lock, rents will be uncollected, the State unpaid, except by the sale of the property which impolitic legislation has ruined.—Englishman.

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—The present number of children in the Lawrence Military Asylum, Sanawur, is 442, of whom 128 boys and 96 girls are on the Lower Orphan School foundation, and 93 girls and 125 boys on the Institution foundation. This is an increase of 51 over last year. During the year five of the girls were married, two of the boys became masters in the school and one a clerk in the Simla Bank. This month nine boys are ready for employment in some of the Government departments. It is in the number and employment of the boys turned out yearly that the real benefit of the Asylum to India will be seen. Great factories, like the Roorkee workshops, are anxious to secure educated lads as engineering apprentices and cannot get them.

EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BENGAL.—The Englishman thus notices "The Commercial Annual or Tabular Statement of the External Commerce of Bengal for the years 1858-59 and 1859-60," by Mr. P. Bonnaud:—"This carefully compiled annual is one of which every merchant should have a copy; it is, as usual, well got up, and neatly printed. Mr. Bonnaud prefaces the tables with 'An abstract of the results of the two years' trade as shown in the tables, from which we learn that the value of the import trade for the past commercial year amounted to Rs. 18,33,72,697, being an increase of Rs. 2,87,22,931 over the previous year.' Of this we have Rs. 2,69,63,138 in merchandise, and in bullion Rs. 17,59,793 the bullion imported in 1859-60, amounting in value to Rs. 2,05,51,838. The increased trade is almost entirely confined to that with Great Britain. During the same period our exports have fallen off. The decrease in merchandise amounts in value to Rs. 1,43,48,105, whilst there is an increase in the export of treasure amounting in value to Rs. 39,57,511; which leaves the net decrease in our exports Rs. 1,03,90,684. The decrease in our exports is apparently owing to the failure in production and not to competition, except in the case of sugar. In opium the decrease is Rs. 28,59,993; in jute and gunnies, Rs. 27,60,570; in mustard seed, Rs. 9,60,155; in sugar, Rs. 39,95,747. We are also inclined to believe that the consumption of the country has increased so much, that higher prices have been supported than would permit of larger exportation. The trade of the country must be now watched very carefully, for it appears at present to be in a very anomalous state. The increased and increasing cost of production is daily becoming of serious moment, which our governors do not appear to sufficiently understand, or they would not be treating the great staple export of indigo with so much indifference; neither would they allow commerce to remain so completely unprotected by insufficient laws."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—The Hurkaru states that a ferry boat, with about fourteen passengers, among whom were eight students of the Hindoo College, was swamped whilst crossing the river from Ramkistopore to Colvin's Ghaut about ten A.M. yesterday. The whole of the passengers were drowned.

OPIMUM.—The Delhi Gazette gives some facts regarding opium. Turkish opium, which is considered the best, contains three times as much morphia as Bengal opium. Malwa opium contains two-sevenths more than Bengal opium. The best in India is said to be grown in the Himalayas. Kangra is celebrated for its opium. The Malwa opium is most esteemed by the Chinese, and is said to contain two-sevenths more of pure opium than an equal quantity of the Patna and Benares drug. The best Turkey opium contains seven parts in 100 of morphia.

THE MYSORE PRINCES.—The visit of Prince Gohar Mahomed to England has resulted in the increase of the stipends of each of Tippoo Sahib's grandsons, from Rs. 600 to Rs. 1,000 a-month, and of those of the great grandsons to Rs. 300. The debts of the Mysore family are to be paid by Government. No reason is assigned for such liberality to a family of whose members nothing more can be said than that they are the descendants of Tippoo.
